A big crowd of approximately 58,000 saw Stanford nose out Pittsburgh. It was a record throng for a Rose Bowl classic, but at the same time it was not a capacity attendance. There was room for a much larger crowd, due to the erection of a temporary addition at the south end, but the cash customers failed to materialize in sufficient numbers to spend heartily enough at five dollars per seat to fill the arena.

But the stayaways missed plenty of thrills. It was a perfect day with bright sunshine overhead. The field was firm and fast, and two evenly matched teams fought toe to toe and toe nail for the slim margin which finally perched on the Stanford banners.

Although Stanford made three sustained marches over half the length of the field and Pittsburgh one, neither team was able to score under its own steam. The fight of both lines was terrific, and whenever a touchdown loomed the forwards braced and threw back the waves of the rival backs.

Both tallies came as the result of fumbles, and both came in the last third period.

Hagan scored when he picked up a fumble which squirted from Wilton's grasp on Stanford's 18-yard line and hot-footed it over the Cardinal goal.

WILTON REDEEMS SELF

A few minutes later Wilton redeemed himself by picking up a fumble by Sims almost on the Pittsburgh goal line and cashing it in by a dive over the line in the corner of the field.

Lisenbee Blocks Panthers' Conversion Attempt to Prevent Tie Game

ROSE BOWL, PASADENA, Jan. 2.—[By special arrangement.] The dogged determination of a Stanford substitute tackle carried the tide of battle at the Tournament of Roses stadium today and brought the Cardinals a 7-to-6 victory over the Panthers in a hard - fought thrilling game. FIFTY DEAD IN MIDWEST WITH COLD UNABATED

Southern States Feel Zero Grip; All-Time Records Smashed by Bitter Weather

CHICAGO, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—With upwards of fifty deaths reported from the intense cold wave that has held the Middle West and the greater portion of the rest of the country in an icy grip since last Friday, the United States Weather Bureau tonight gave little hope of relief during the next forty-eight hours. The population of the major part of the United States, therefore, will be forced to shiver, grope and slide until Thursday.

From all sections of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains today came reports of exceptionally cold weather. In the Southern States, particularly, where the climate at this time of the year is comparatively mild, the mercury fell so low in many places that all time records were smashed.

ZERO IN CAROLINAS

At Hendersonville, N. C., the lowest was 7 deg. below zero, the coldest since 1868. Atlanta's mark of 1 deg. above zero was the coldest since 1878. The low at Asheville, N. C., was 4 deg. below, at Louisville 3 below; at Kingsport, Tenn., 8 below, and at Bristol, Tenn., 2 below.

To the cold in the vicinity of Atlanta was attributed responsibility for the wreck of two interburban cars near Marietta, Ga., in which three passengers were killed and twelve seriously injured.

The greatest toll of death exacted by the storm king was in the Chicago district, where twenty-seven persons died from exposure, fires, automobile and railroad accidents directly attributed to the severe cold. Temperatures in this vicinity during last night reached as low as 17 deg. below zero in the outlying districts. Springfield's mark was 9.4 below; Bloomington, 13 below, the coldest since 1918. Milwaukee's minimum was 5 deg. below. Other towns in Wisconsin reported as follows: Wausau, 18 below; Greenbay, 6 below; La Crosse, 14 below, and Madison, 10 below.

MILDER IN NORTH

Ten persons died in St. Louis, eight of them from exposure. A woman was burned to death at Burlington Junction, Mo. It was believed her clothing was ignited when she started to light a fire. A farm hand was frozen to death at Salina, Kan.

Four persons died in grade-crossing accidents, attributable to the weather, in Central Illinois. Hundreds were marooned in busses. Three persons died of exposure in Indiana, including Albert Himsel, 65, one of Southern Indiana's wealthiest farmers. He was found dead in a snow drift on one of his farms. Caroline White, 88, was killed at Southport, Ind., in a fire originating from an overheated flue.

Although the mercury fell only to 11 deg. above zero at New York, it was announced that three persons died there of exposure. One of the peculiar features of the cold wave is that the supposedly sunny south is colder than the New England States. Boston's low was 15 above zero; New Haven had 12 above; Concord, N. H., 8 above and Nantucket 20 above. At Philadelphia the temperature fell to 12 above zero.

WORSE YET TO COME

Snow began falling late today in Northern Oklahoma. In Texas the cold extended into the lower Rio Grande Valley, where tender vegetables were damaged. At San Antonio roses, which usually bloom the year around, were believed killed. Freezing weather, almost to the Gulf coast, is predicted for tonight. Snow is probable in the Panhandle of Texas.

More snow, followed by a new cold wave, is predicted for Wyoming, where it is predicted temperatures

Lindbergh Plans Trip Extension

Visits Being Considered to Colombia and Venezuela After Panama Jaunt

Journey from Honduras to Nicaragua Will Take Him Over Battle Line

SAN SALVADOR (Salvador) Jan. 2. (AP)—Col. Lindbergh has under consideration an extension of his Central American tour to include Colombia and Venezuela, but will not make a decision until he reaches Panama.

The flyer from the United States told correspondents today he had made no definite plans in this respect, but said they were under consideration.

Receptions and official ceremonies took up Lindbergh's time today. President Robero Bosque pinned a commemorative gold medal upon him at a reception at the National Palace. Members of the Cabinet, the Diplomatic and Consular corps and other high public officials were present at these ceremonies.

On the way to the palace the streets were lined with some 10,000 persons who flocked to view the private citizen who is honored as the special ambassador of the United States. News and news reel photographers had their cameras trained on him at points all along the route to get every detail of his progress. Overhead a squadron of Salvadorean airplanes performed evolutions in friendly demonstration for the visiting flyer.

Other entertainments in his honor today were at the American Legation and the San Salvador Country Club.

Lindbergh expects to hop off tomorrow morning between 11 and 12 o'clock for Tegucigalpa, Honduras, where he will be only a short distance from the Nicaraguan border. (Fighting between American marines and Nicaraguan rebels of the last few days is just over the border, and Lindbergh probably will fly almost directly over the scene of the fighting when he leaves Tegucigalpa for Managua, probably Tuesday.)

MRS. LINDBERGH HOME, SMILING AND HAPPY

DETROIT, Jan. 2 (AP)—Smiling happily despite the trying experiences of the last three days, when snow and storm twice forced to earth the Ford monoplane in which she was a passenger, Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh stepped from the ship's cabin at the Ford Airport this afternoon, completing a round-trip flight to the capital city of Mexico.

Included in the party were Mr. and Mrs. William B. Stout, Mrs. John A. Collings, Stanley Copeland, Ford representative in Mexico; Harry Brooks, pilot, and Harry L. Russell mechanic.

The party spent last night at Edwardsburg, Mich., where Brooks was forced down when a severe sleet and snowstorm made further flight dangerous. With the assistance of farmers a path was cleared across the snow-covered field and the plane flown to Sturgis. From there Mrs. Lindbergh and the others again climbed aboard the plane to complete the short hop here without incident.

Saturday evening a storm had forced the plane down near Chicago, but without injury to the plane or passengers.

Three Killed in Bay City Traffic

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Three killed by hit-and-run automobile drivers and fifteen others injured, three so seriously that they are not expected to recover, was the toll taken by automobile accidents in the San Francisco Bay region over the New Year holidays.

Those killed outright were James W. Daly, 82 years of age, and Mrs. Mary Gwilliams, 31, mother of four small children. Harold Hickey, 19, died of injuries received here Saturday when his car plunged over an embankment. Those seriously injured were Mr. and Mrs. Tony Silver of Beresford and Frank McNally of San Mateo. Their car collided with another on the San Mateo highway. Eight persons suffered cuts and bruises when five other machines, unable to stop because of the wet pavement, crashed into the wreckage.

Fireman Gives Life for Naught

CHARITON (Iowa) Jan. 2. (AP)—Merrill Nolan, 35 years of age, a fireman, died from suffocation today when he attempted to save his wife from a fire from which she already had been rescued by an unidentified man. The wife will recover. The fire caused damage estimated at $100,000.

The following dispatch from Col. Lindbergh, delayed in transmission, describes his flight from Belize, British Honduras, to San Salvador. It is a continuation of his own narrative of his Latin-American air travels, written exclusively for the Los Angeles Times, New York Times, and other selected newspapers.

BY COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH

[Copyright, 1928, in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba, Central and South America, Europe and the British Dominions by the New York Times Company. All rights reserved.]

SAN SALVADOR, Jan. 1. [Delayed.] (Exclusive)—The take-off from Belize this morning was somewhat easier than landing here, although it presented the most interesting problem of taking off I have had for some time. I got off the ground at 6:20 a.m., local time, just as I reached the narrow strip of marsh grass between the polo field and the gulf, with a few feet to spare above the sea as I passed over the water.

After that the flight was fairly easy. I encountered fog and cloud, which is not unusual in the valleys of this region, and had to climb over the latter. The air was rough in places, but what wind there was favored me and flying with the motor throttled down I landed at Ilopango field here at 9:10 a.m., local time.

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH

Salvador's air field is a very good one and the only difficulty presented was the crowd, which came running head-on toward the machine. To avoid hurting anyone I cut out the switch and stopped after a run of 200 yards, a few moments before the mechanics who were leading the crowd reached the ship.

When I reached the polo ground at Belize this morning I found Mr. Gibbs, a British aviation mechanic who had served in the war, and whose help I warmly appreciated, had the Spirit of St. Louis drawn back to the furthest corner of the field all ready for the take-off.

LAUDS ORDER ON FIELD

Sir John Burdon, the British Governor-General, and everybody in Belize, including a band, apparently was out to see the take-off. The crowd was considerably larger than the one that turned out when I landed there. Perfect order was maintained, however, everyone standing right in his place, for which I am very grateful. It was a pronounced example of the British observance of rules.

There was a cross wind from the gulf blowing across the field, though it was not very strong. The polo ground at Belize, which is smaller than such grounds usually are, forms a slightly curved area—shaped something like a cow's horn—with the sea fringed by marsh grass on the east side, with buildings all around the other sides and a telegraph line on the west side. The plane stood in front of the grand stand at the southwest corner where the field is widest—eighty yards—al-

LAND FIGHT OF STREETER UP TO COURT

CHICAGO, Jan. 2. (AP)—A battle of half a century for the "Deestrict of Lake Michagin," which was waged by "Cap'n" Wellington Streeter with a shotgun perched on a houseboat, will be resumed tomorrow in the United States Court of Appeals.

"Cap'n" Streeter and his shotgun will not be there and neither will "Ma" Streeter, his belligerent helpmeet. The captain is dead and "Ma" has been disqualified as a defendant, but a score of heirs are contesting title to property worth millions of dollars including the land on which stands the Drake Hotel and a dozen skyscrapers and through which runs Lake Shore Drive.

"Cap'n" Streeter claimed the land because he became a squatter there in his houseboat. With his shotgun he defied encroaching improvements to drive him or his houseboat from the lake front and when he died he ordered "Ma" not to give up the ship. She, however, was arrested on a liquor charge one day. While she was in court someone towed her houseboat into Lake Michigan and sank it.

Swearing vengeance on the police she took her case to Federal Court in 1925. Then it was ruled she was not the wife of the man beside whom she had fought for half a century because he had been married previously and never was divorced. When the case was thrown out of court other heirs, nephews, nieces and a brother instituted a new action to gain possession of the Gold Coast for which "Cap'n" Streeter waged half a century's fight. The case will be aired tomorrow.

Earth Shocks Felt by Italian Observatories

ROME, Jan. 2. (AP)—Two earthquake shocks were registered today in Italy but no damage was reported.

The Padua Observatory registered a shock at 5:59 a.m., which was estimated to be fifty miles distant, while Turin reported a wave-like shock at 2:12 p.m.

Part of the population of the town of Nemi, where a quake was felt last night, were so frightened that they refused to stay in their homes and in spite of the cold passed the night in the open, with considerable suffering.

FLORIDA HAS HEAVY LOSS BY FREEZING

Fruit Belt Hard Hit by Severest Frost of Year With Worse to Come

JACKSONVILLE (Fla.) Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Florida's fruit belt suffered its worst cold wave of the year last night and today and with forecasts of continued blizzard-like weather growers are taking precautions against further damage to crops.

Freezing weather was reported last night as far south as Orlando where the thermometer dipped to the freezing point in the citrus producing areas. Jacksonville, with 22 deg., witnessed much damage to orange groves in its vicinity.

North of Orlando and westward toward Tampa the cold wave brought a heavy frost that cut down young vegetable crops. Colder weather is predicted for tonight and a much heavier damage to crops and fruits is feared, according to A. J. Mitchell, United States weather observer, who said officially that tonight's freeze will inflict heavy damage.

The Florida State Marketing Bureau here now is making a survey of the State to determine the freeze damage and its estimates will be announced tomorrow. It was stated unofficially tonight that the loss to growers will approximate several thousand dollars.

Child Diseases Decrease While Adult Ills Grow

BATTLE CREEK (Mich.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Diseases which fifty years ago headed the list of important causes of death have fallen to places of less importance and the degenerative diseases, which strike down the individual at the time of his life when he is economically most valuable, have taken their places, Dr. Guy L. Kiefer, State Health Commissioner, Lansing, Mich., told the Third Race Betterment Conference here today.

"While the death rate from each of the scourges of child life is falling annually, the death rate from the diseases that play greatest havoc during the working span of life has been increasing," said Dr. Kiefer. In the latter category he placed diabetes, nephritis and heart disease.

Harding Joins Flight Chamber

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce today announces the addition to its staff of former Lieut. John Harding, Jr., U.S.A., a member of the Army's 'round-the-world flight in 1924.

He will maintain contact between the various specialized groups of the industry. The chamber says that the prosperous condition of the aircraft interests has brought about such increased membership that numerous additions to the personnel and facilities of the organization have been necessitated, both in New York and Washington.

On December 1, last, the roll of the chamber included 227 members, representing all phases of the industry.

BOMBS RAINED ON REBELS BY MARINES IN NICARAGUA

Air Raid Follows Second Battle of Americans and Sandino's Men; More Casualties Suffered

MANAGUA (Nicaragua) Jan. 2. (AP)—Rebel forces under Gen. Augustino Sandino were bombed by American Marine Corps airplanes today. Maj. R. E. Rowell led the attack from the air and reported to Col. Louis Mason Gulick, commander of the marines in Nicaragua, that several direct hits were made with the bombs, undoubtedly causing numerous casualties. The bombing followed another battle yesterday when marine reinforcements pushing through the rocky fastnesses of Northern Nicaragua to support a detachment that captured Quilali Friday after a sanguinary battle, clashed with rebels and drove them to the mountains. The American casualties were one killed and five wounded. The rebel casualties could not be determined since the rebels carried their dead and wounded with them to save them from vultures.

The total American losses in the fierce fighting which marked Friday's and yesterday's clashes were six dead and twenty-eight wounded. Rebel losses were much higher.

The American reinforcements reached their comrades at Quilali, which was formerly rebel headquarters, and preparations were going on today to concentrate American columns at that place to crush the insurgents, who are hidden in the almost inaccessible strongholds of the region.

First Sergeant Thomas G. Bruce of the United States Marine Corps, and who was a lieutenant in the Nicaraguan National Guard, was killed in Sunday's clash. His home was in Philadelphia.

CLASH PROVES DESPERATE

Lieut. Merton A. Richal of Wisconsin was seriously wounded. Four other marines also were wounded, but their names had not been reported today.

Lieut. Merton Amos Richal is listed in the Navy Register. He was born in Wisconsin, accepted his commission from Minnesota and has been a lieutenant since February 14, 1918.

The American force, which was a joint combat patrol, including members of the Nicaraguan National Guard, was en route from Telpaneca to reinforce the garrison which captured Quilali, the rebel stronghold, on Friday. The patrol encountered rebels of Gen. Sandino near Espotilla Ridge, which is four miles from Quilali. There were about 400 men in the insurgent force. A sharp skirmish followed.

After desperate fighting the rebels were defeated and fled to the mountains near the Honduran border. The American patrol, which was under the command of Lieut. Richal, then pushed on to Quilali.

Marine planes, which have been playing an active part in the fighting with the Sandino rebels, assisted in the attack and met with fire from antiaircraft guns manned by rebels who have been showing greater cohesion than hitherto. The rebels are armed with rifles and machine guns and it is regarded as virtually certain here that Sandino is receiving outside aid.

MARINES HANDICAPPED

Friday's battle was over a tortuous trail leading to Quilali, and the rebels stubbornly defended the position from the heavily timbered mountains. It was only after fierce fighting that they were driven from the trail and the town captured.

The loss of Quilali forced Sandino to shift headquarters to El Chipote, eighteen miles from Quilali. It is near the Coco River, which offers a means of escape should the rebel leader be hard pressed, since the stream flows through an unexplored wilderness.

Capt. Richard Livingston of Philadelphia, who was wounded by a bomb splinter in Friday's engagement, is reported to have improved and is expected to be back on duty within a few weeks.

An airplane returning from Cocotal today brought the remainder of the list of those slightly wounded in Friday's battle. Six men seriously wounded and two officers slightly wounded were named in a list received yesterday. Among the slightly wounded are:

Sergt. Otto N. Rose (or Rose,) Washington, D. C.

DIP INTO SEA ENDS DAWN

Captain Tells of Hearing Splash

Whirr of Motors Over Gale, Then Impact, Believed to Solve Plane's Fate

Schooner Brings News That Seems to Explain Mystery of Grayson Tragedy

PORTLAND (Me.) Jan. 2. (AP)—The splash of what was believed to be an airplane into the sea off Cape Cod, heard by officers and the crew of the schooner Rose Ann Belliveau is believed by them to have solved the fate of Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson's amphibian plane, the Dawn, and its daring flyers.

Capt. R. V. Comeau of the schooner reported here today he was called on deck during a howling northwester shortly after 7:30 o'clock on the night of December 28, last, when his vessel was at a point eighteen miles northwest of Nauset Beach Light on Cape Cod. He said he first distinguished faint sounds that he positively identified as those of airplane motors. These sounds came to an abrupt ending within ten minutes when a heavy splash was heard.

HE "HANGS AROUND"

He stated that while only a staunch vessel could have battled against the seas at that time, he made an attempt to "hang around" with the Belliveau, a Nova Scotia three-master on its way up the coast to Portland. Prior to his arrival here yesterday, he had put into Salem, Mass., where the Belliveau remained for five days before proceeding.

Meantime the story of the gruesome event as was remained untold. It being the apparent belief of the Nova Scotia craft's officers that they had no important facts directly bearing on the Dawn.

The first word of the pending tragedy to reach the master was the request "come up forward, captain," shouted down through the companionway by a mate who was on watch.

"There's a submarine or something out there," shouted the mate as he looked across darkened waves over the windward rail.

The sounds which Capt. Comeau said he clearly distinguished as coming from airplane motors were from that quarter.

A change to the leeward rail and captain and mate both distinguished the sounds even plainer, after which came the splash of a heavy body, then silence.

SAW SHIP'S LIGHTS

The Belliveau's master expressed belief that Lieut. Oskar Omdal, the pilot, accompanying Mrs. Grayson and her companions to Harbor Grace, N. F., had realized that ha

GREAT BUILDING YEAR FOR PACIFIC COAST

The forward march of the Pacific Coast during 1927 is indicated by the building statistics. The year was not abnormal nor record-breaking in the matter of building, but was fairly representative in denoting the general rate of progress.

Seattle, Wash.	$ 28,948,210
Portland, Or.	29,143,330
San Francisco	47,453,835
Los Angeles	123,027,239
Total	$228,572,614

By States the following figures are also significant of the great development that is taking place in the entire Coast region:

Washington (Thirteen principal centers)	$ 44,960,000
Oregon (Eight principal centers)	35,000,449
Northern California (Forty-five northern counties)	101,688,000
Total	$417,033,761

Note: It has been impossible to obtain in the brief time available complete returns from all Pacific Coast communities for inclusion in the tabulations above. For that reason the figures of the four principal Coast cities and the major and worse-to-be building areas only are presented. Complete figures will not appreciably change the totals now available.

COOLIDGES RECEIVE

Three Thousand Welcomed

Diplomats, Officials and Private Citizens Observe Old Tradition

Callers Stand Four Hours in Near-Zero Cold to Greet President

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—In keeping with a tradition as old as the United States itself, New Year's Day was observed at the White House today when President and Mrs. Coolidge exchanged the season's greetings with more than 3000 diplomats, officials of the government and Washington citizens.

Two divisions of the Marine Band clad in bright red coats and blue trousers, played briskly in the foyer of the Executive Mansion as the long line filed by the President and Mrs. Coolidge, who stood in the Blue Room. When the last well-wisher had gone, the President and his staff walked outside in the near-zero weather to pose for pictures and wave a greeting to the crowd assembled at the north portico.

In spite of the cold weather, the number that shook hands with Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge today was slightly more than a year ago. The exact number received was 3281, which was 100 more than last year. It was a merry, jostling crowd that passed down the long red-carpeted hall through the state dining-room into the Blue Room.

PRECEDENT FOLLOWED

Precedents were followed carefully, especially in the morning, when the President and Mrs. Coolidge welcomed the Diplomatic Corps, members of the Cabinet and other government officials. Promptly at 11 o'clock the delicately wrought iron gate to the main staircase swung open as the band played "Hail to the Chief" and Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, followed by Cabinet members and their wives, descended and took their places in the Blue Room.

With the band playing appropriate ceremonial airs, members of the Diplomatic Corps in brilliant-colored uniforms and gold braid were received. They were led by Sir Esme Howard, as dean of the Diplomatic Corps, who brought the season's greetings from King George of England.

The white, carefully trimmed hair and mustache of the British Ambassador was set off, by a uniform virtually covered with heavy gold braid. A gleaming sword hung by his side and from shoulder to shoulder was a broad band of red and blue. From his chest a dozen medals of the various orders to which he lays claim, were suspended. His uniform was scarcely more brilliant than that of the Danish Minister, Constantin Brun, whose gold-braided shoulders were partly covered with a cape of scarlet.

SCENE OF GAYETY

The new Ambassador from Belgium, Prince Albert De Legne, his tall, slender bearing accentuated by a red uniform of glove-fitting tightness, was there with his staff and together with the rest of the Ambassadors and Ministers filled the historic East Room with gayety as New Year's greetings were exchanged among them.

The high hats of government officials and glistening uniforms of diplomats were followed after an hour's interval for luncheon by everyday folk, who came in even larger numbers in the afternoon. The line of citizens that waited outside in the cold, some for four hours, presented a kaleidoscope of American life as it wended into the White House. A prominent Washington lawyer in a silk hat stepped along behind a young fellow whose cap disclosed him as a taxicab driver. Raccoon-coated college boys jostled bankers and government clerks. A tiny pickaninny in a sailor's suit almost was separated from his watchful mother in the bustle of a group of young girls who stamped their feet and swung their arms to keep off the cold.

Although the great bulk of the citizens remained in their automobiles or hovered in doorways of near-by buildings until quick entrance into the White House could be gained, the first man in the line took his place at 9:45 a.m. and stood there for more than four hours to be first to shake the President's hand. He explained that he was J. W. Hunsfeld, a native of New Hampshire, and that he was willing to "stand right here for a week for the chance to say happy New Year to Cal."

TEST SHOWS FAILURE OF GLAND IDEA

Rejuvenating Method of Dr. Serge Voronoff Held to be Impracticable

FREIBURG (Germany) Jan. 2. (AP)—The rejuvenating method of Dr. Serge Voronoff by the transplanting of monkey glands is stated to be impracticable in a report by Dr. Hoffmeister, first assistant to Prof. Erich Lexer, chief of the University Hospital, after an investigation carried out at the suggestion of German scientific circles.

A number of gland transplantations from monkeys to men and other animals were carried out during the investigation. Several weeks after the operations, it is stated, the glands were found by the naked eye or microscopically either to have been absorbed by the tissues or to have been atrophied beyond their power of function.

Dr. Hoffmeister says that in some cases a temporary apparent rejuvenation followed the operation, but this was followed by a reaction in the form of rapid decay or the complete cessation of all vitality.

TEXAS TRIBE PICKS CHIEF BY BALLOT

Alabama Indian Remnant Fills Leadership Long Vacant in Modern Style

INDIAN VILLAGE (Tex.) Jan. 2. (AP)—The Alabama Indians, without a tribal chief since the death of John Scott thirteen years ago, today elected a new chief in this little village, fifteen miles from Livingston, in the heart of the Big Thicket, where the 235 survivors of the once numerous tribe have lived for seventy-five years.

The only candidate was Ba-Hay, the arrow maker, whose English name is Charley Thompson. Ba-Hay is 67 years of age.

The voting was done in a modern manner. The village schoolhouse was the voting place. By ones and twos, seldom more than three, the Indians left the roaring fires around which they huddled in shivering groups and filed solemnly into the schoolhouse. There the tribesmen indicated their choice for chief on a slip of paper, deposited it in a ballot box and filed as solemnly back to the campfires. It was bitterly cold—the thermometer standing at 15 deg.

Rev. C. W. Chambers, Presbyterian missionary, who has been with the tribe for twenty-eight years, and who conducts the little church here, said the reason for electing a chief was that it is thought that if the old tribal customs, many of which have been abandoned, are revived, there is hope that some aid may be obtained from the Federal government to relieve the poverty of the tribe.

Air-Mail Pilot Missing in Storm Found in Wilds

DU BOIS (Pa.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Harry G. Smith, Cleveland-New York air mail pilot, who disappeared early last night while flying over Western Pennsylvania, was found today in the wilds of the so-called "hunters' paradise" of Clearfield county. He was unhurt and his plane was undamaged. The airman reported to the postmaster at Curwensville late today.

Running into a severe snowstorm on the westward edge of the Allegheny Mountains at about 6 p.m. yesterday while en route eastward, Smith lost his course when the swirling snow obliterated the beacon guides on the ground. After two hours' futile effort to relocate the beacons he came down in a clearing surrounding the Red Top hunting lodge, fourteen miles from the mail route and twenty-five miles from Du-Bois.

It was nine below zero in the vicinity and Smith took refuge in the lodge, but without a fire.

SWORD SWALLOWER, INJURED, SUCCUMBS

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 2. (AP)—William Moody, 23 years of age, professional sword swallower, died here today. He injured himself Friday with a butcher knife while demonstrating his ability in a restaurant. Influenza developed.

will go to ten or fifteen degrees below zero.

Although it was extremely cold throughout Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana, few deaths were reported. Thermometers at Sidney, Neb. and Spirit Lake, Iowa, touched as low as twenty degrees minus. Bismarck, N. D., had the lowest temperature in the United States with 34 deg. below zero. The Northwest States generally are still snowbound. Automobile traffic was almost entirely stopped in the rural districts; most bus lines abandoned schedules because of closed roads although some companies cleared their lines with huge snow plows.

MORE SNOW PREDICTED IN PACIFIC NORTHWEST

SEATTLE, Jan. 2. (AP)—Gradual moderation of weather with continuation of rain and snow was promised today for the Pacific Northwest by M. D. Summers, weather observer.

Rain will continue to fall in Western Washington. Eastern and Central Washington can expect more snow today and tonight and temperatures which were driven to seasonal low marks last week, will rise slowly.

Minimum temperatures reported to the bureau for the last twenty-four hours were: Vancouver, B. C., 30; Seattle, 34; Portland, 23; Yakima, 12; Walla Walla, 8; Spokane, 10; Victoria, B. C., 50; and the following below zero marks: Havre, Mont., 34; Billings, 20; Kamloops, B. C., 6; Edmonton, Alta., 32; Calgary, 28; Medicine Hat, 30.

Sleet fell in the vicinity of Victoria, Bellingham and Seattle last night. Ten inches of snow were predicted for Walla Walla. Five inches for Yakima and three inches for Spokane.

A man in Kelso, Wash., was fatally injured when a wooden marquee fell on him. Another man was hurt in the accident which is believed to have been caused by the weight of snow on the structure.

Four and a half inches of snow have fallen in Longview and the white blanket is several feet thick in the hills. A crust of ice on the top of the snow makes travel perilous, deposition it in a ballot box and filed as solemnly back to the campfires. It was bitterly cold—the thermometer standing at 15 deg.

Ice has formed in the mouth of the Cowlitz River. The minimum temperature at Longview was 19 last night.

SPOKANE AREA DIGS OUT FROM SNOW BLANKET

SPOKANE (Wash.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Snow that had fallen almost continuously for the last thirty-six hours had resulted today in seriously hampering rail and automobile travel.

Automobile bus schedules were delayed or blocked and rail service is from one to ten hours late. All highways are passable with great difficulty.

Three Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul trains were stalled almost all night at Cedar Falls on the west slope of the Cascades.

PORTLAND BUCKS DRIFTS HARDENED BY SLEET

PORTLAND (Or.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Blocked highways, towns and communities isolated, wires interrupted and sleet—these are some of the conditions in the wake of a howling blizzard that ushered in the new year. Relief is expected. A blanket of sleet on top of five inches of hard packed snow rendered travel conditions difficult. In Portland electric power company employees managed to maintain car services with delayed schedules. Street-cleaning apparatus was kept busy removing snowdrifts.

Points in the Willamette Valley were ice bound yesterday by a thaw, but temperatures are rising today with promises of relief.

Automobiles were stalled and abandoned on roads, and in Portland many were forced to leave their cars, being unable to force them to climb inclines into garages.

Six hundred men were drafted at the Public Employment Bureau to dig the city out of the snow before the start of business tomorrow.

Between eighty and 100 trucks were hauling snow to the Willamette River and more trucks were added as fast as they could be enlisted.

The seven truck snow plows and the one caterpillar plow, purchased after last year's snow, are busy. Today they were sent to main arteries outside the business district, while the shovelers worked downtown.

ASTORIA UTILITIES FAIL AS THAW WRECKS LINES

ASTORIA (Or.) Jan. 2. (AP)—A terrific storm, described as the worst this city has ever experienced, is subsiding tonight, leaving in its wake damage estimated at $50,000. The greater part of the damage was caused by a silver thaw. The city was isolated for more than thirty-six hours.

Public utility companies are the hardest hit. Electric light lines were crushed to earth under the pressure of great coatings of ice, bus transportation halted and communication totally disrupted.

Warrenton, near here, was the focal point of the storm. Open to the full sweep of an easterly gale, practically every telephone, telegraph and electric light pole went down. Highways and streets are blocked by prostrate poles and by hanging wires.

MOUNTAIN STATES AIDED BY RISING TEMPERATURES

DENVER, Jan. 2. (AP)—A mounting mercury today brought relief to Rocky Mountain States which for forty-eight hours experienced the coldest weather of several years. With exception of Wyoming, warmer weather is promised for Tuesday and Wednesday.

Wyoming is promised a light snow tonight to be followed by a moderate and brief cold wave which will send the mercury to 10 to 15 deg. below zero with a rising temperature tomorrow.

Oakland Victim of Bandit Dies

ADVERTISING HONOR ROLL FOR YEAR 1927

Following a long-established custom, the Los Angeles Times herewith publishes its annual "Advertising Honor Roll," showing which newspaper printed the most paid advertising for the preceding year in each city named.

As will be seen by the figures, The Times during the year carried advertising to the huge total of 24,808,280 agate lines, thus placing it ahead of every other Pacific Coast or western newspaper and making it seventh among all the newspapers of the world.

JACK FROST NIPS MUMMERS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2. (AP)—Philadelphia's Mummers had a hard time of it today celebrating the coming up of the New Year. In the coldest weather ever experienced by the "shooters" 6000 members of the New Year's clubs marched, danced, cavorted and struggled up Broad street and out the parkway in the teeth of a bitterly cold wind while tens of thousands of spectators, blue-nosed and red-cheeked, stood shivering along the route watching the antics of the revelers.

The cold weather took a toll of hundreds of spectators and many paraders. About a dozen persons were overcome. Here and there in the parade Mummers numbed by the icy blasts collapsed and had to be thawed out in hospitals. The temperature averaged 17 deg. above zero. Despite low temperature the celebration was a success, not so much for numbers but for its colorfulness, originality of costumes and burlesques.

The Mummers' parade, an institution that began in Philadelphia years ago when small groups of men met and "shot" out the old year and celebrated the coming of the new, was divided into three general divisions—the fancy clubs, comic clubs and string bands.

The fancy division lived up to its reputation as a colorful procession. The captain of every club in this division carried a cape more than 100 feet long. One cape stretched out for 180 feet in five sections designed to give the impression of a golden sunburst. Its hues of white and gold were reflected in the costumes of fifty-two pages required to carry the lengthy train.

The kings and queens and princes, clowns and jockeys also were arrayed in gorgeous costumes "fit for a king."

The comic section burlesqued many events of the year of 1927. Lindbergh's flight to Paris, Ruth Elder's attempt to cross the Atlantic and many events of local character were humorously depicted by floats or other means.

LINDBERGH FINDS MUCH FOG

lowing 200 yards to where the field—which there is about fifty yards wide—curved into the sea. About eighty yards beyond stands a pier with low buildings, just in the line of flight. To the left the field tapers down to a point.

I took off in the opposite direction to that in which I landed on the curved course. The field is level and hard enough, and is walled off just before reaching the point where it drops off into the sea. I then rose out over the water, which was only a few feet below, and climbed over the pier which runs parallel.

USED LITTLE GAS

I circled over the field and the city of Belize and then set my course 195 deg. south, 15 deg. west, which brought me without deviation to San Salvador. The rough air en route joggled the magnetic compass and without the earth inductor compass by which I navigated it would have been impossible to fly the course so truely.

I took off with about 100 gallons of gasoline and arrived with approximately seventy-five—enough to have reached Panama. The motor was in perfect condition both before and after today's flight.

The fact that I spent a couple of hours yesterday in Belize draining the carburetor in order to make sure there was no water in it seems to have started a rumor, that there was something wrong with the motor and that the tour would be delayed. I understand it was even said that a special mechanic had been sent for from the United States. Such rumors seem to start whenever I check over the motor. This rumor as usual was groundless. The motor was absolutely all right and I did not even find any water in the traps.

After leaving Belize the course took me close enough to the coast line to see the gulf until I entered Guatemala, although the sea was hazy at times. The scenery was very strange. There was dense green jungle covering the lowlands beneath me with the gulf dotted with tiny keys covered with mangrove swamps and palm trees standing out on their edges over the sea like green balls on a pole.

SEES HUTS IN WILDS

The sky, which was clear when I took off, soon became partly overcast and I had to climb over the clouds in order to clear the mountains. The clouds, however, were broken with holes now and then where I could see the land. On the south side of the mountains the clouds disappeared entirely and the visibility remained excellent all the way to San Salvador.

The area over which I flew today was somewhat more inhabited than in Guatemala on the way to Belize, though it could hardly be called thickly settled. After crossing the frontier into Salvador the land at once became more populated. In the mountains it was curious. I saw now and then a little grass-thatched hut, apparently lost in the forest, for there was no sign of a road or even a trail near it. Around each hut would be about an acre of cultivated ground. I am told the Indians who inhabit these huts grow the corn around them to make tortillas which form their chief dish. I saw no thatched villages today. In Belize I was struck by the fact that a number of the houses, no matter how poor they may look outside, have mahogany floors and that mahogany is put to the commonest kind of uses. Belize, of course, is the principal city of the country from which much of our mahogany comes.

I saw only a few volcanoes today and did not pass near any. I passed near the town of Santa Rosa and at the right of Chalatenango. In Salvadore I saw many fields of sugar cane and other crops, the country appearing prosperous.

The jungle looked very wild and I saw no place there to land. Later on, however, I did see three or four places in the mountains where I could have landed. After passing West Stand Creek I left British Honduras, crossed the Gulf of Amatique and flew between Livingston and Puerto Barrios, passing somewhat to the former. The lowlands here are covered for miles with the dark green foliage of banana plantations.

LOOKS FORWARD TO VISIT

While over the lowlands I flew at an altitude of about 3000 feet. I began to enter the mountains soon after passing Livingston and then flew at an altitude of about 9000 feet. Beyond Livingston I was surprised to see what appeared to be a big gold dredge which had cut through the woods. I understood there is an old gold working there.

The mountains were extremely broken with almost labyrinthian ridges and deep canyons. The valleys were mostly filled with fog or low clouds. Every day I have flown since leaving Mexico City I have met a great deal of fog especially in the valleys. One might call this a land of fog-filled vales or valleys.

The map by which I flew today was a small-scale map of all Central America on which Salvador could be covered with two fingers. The main difficulty of flying in these regions is that there are next to no land marks for guidance. I knew I was near San Salvdor, however, when I picked up land twenty-five or thirty miles east of the city. Then I flew over the city and landed. I saw near the city one Salvadorean plane which had taken off to escort me but apparently did not see me. I appreciate from experience how difficult it is to meet another plane when uncertain where it is coming from and it is not surprising that the escort did not succeed in picking me up.

A six-mile automobile ride to the capital from the field gave me an interesting idea of the richness of the country. It is considerably warmer here than in Guatemala City for the elevation is 2000 instead of 5000 feet, but it is almost cool compared to Belize. The people of Salvador received me very cordially and I am looking forward to a very pleasant day tomorrow in their country.

SANDINO CALLED MARTYR

This list includes those with wounds no more serious than bad scratches on up to injuries classified as serious. The left elbow of Capt. Livingston, among the seriously injured, was shattered by rifle or machine-gun fire. All of the wounded are reported doing well.

Most of the injuries were caused by bursting bombs, hand grenades, and other explosives. It has been learned that these bombs and grenades were of "home manufacture" prepared by Sandino's men with dynamite seized from an American mine at San Albino.

Sandino, variously classified as a rebel, outlaw and bandit, is regarded by many of the peons of the region as a martyr to his country, although he has been repudiated by leaders of the Liberal party, and it is believed that spies among these peons informed him of the progress of the marines.

The Quilali region is very rough, mountainous, and covered with heavy undergrowth. Sandino established his defenses three miles southeast of Quilali, placing his men at strategic points on the hills overlooking the trail followed by Capt. Livingston's patrol. When the marines and National Guardsmen approached, Sandino's men began firing with rifles, machine guns, and small artillery. They also threw bombs and hand grenades filled with glass and nails.

OFFICER HERO

The marines returned the fire but were at a decided disadvantage due to their location in valleys and ravines and the necessity for protecting mules and pack train.

Col. Gulick, commander of the marines in Nicaragua, said the march on Quilali was part of a policy of taking over as many towns as possible, leaving Sandino without a town headquarters. The rebels fought desperately to keep the marines out of Quilali because of its strategic importance.

Sunday's battle was in the nature of a counterattack, the rebels believing the marine garrison at Quilali could not receive reinforcements from Telpaneca in time. It took place shortly before the arrival of a reinforcing combat patrol.

Sergt. Bruce, killed in Sunday's battle, displayed great heroism at Ocotal last July, when a handful of marines and guardsmen administered a crushing defeat to Sandino's forces. Col. Gulick said today that Bruce was a wonderful soldier, one of the best he had.

Communication with Nueva Segovia, the battle region, is almost entirely by airplane. Four or five machines are sent to Ocotal from Managua each morning and return in the early evening with news from the garrisons of the vicinity.

The marines are waiting for the trails to become passable in the region of Quilali and El Chipote in the eastern part of Nueva Segovia to begin a drive on Sandino. During the rainy season the region is almost impassable. The dry season began in December and the marines immediately prepared pack trains at Matagalpa and started the long overland trip to Quilali.

PLEA FOR MORE HOSPITAL AID SENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—An urgent need for hospital supplies and reinforcements was expressed in a radio message received tonight at the Navy Department from Marine Corps headquarters at Tsingtao, Chi., from which place the marine detachment which participated in yesterday's battle departed.

The communication was the department's first official word of yesterday's fighting in which one marine was killed, another seriously wounded and three others slightly hurt. It asked that hospital supplies be rushed to Telpaneca by airplane.

It said further that the marines have taken up a position which will be maintained, although the detachment is "urgently in need of reinforcements."

An earlier message from the legation at Managua to the State Department dealt with the fighting of Friday and about the only new detail furnished was that in addition to the five marines killed and the more than a score wounded in that engagement one member of the Nicaraguan National Guard was killed and two wounded. Only six American wounded Friday sustained serious injuries, the legation report said.

The dispatch again emphasized the fact that the Sandino forces appeared to be better equipped and to be led with more skill than at any time since clashes between the marines and National Guard on the one side and outlaws on the other began soon after the Nicaraguan government and the Liberal revolutionary forces disarmed to await the outcome of the presidential election this year which is to be supervised by the United States. The legation message contained no information as to the possible source of the arms and munitions used by the Sandino forces or as to the possibility that military leaders other than Nicaraguans might have had some share in the organization and training of the outlaws for Friday's battle.

State Department officials made public the substance of the legation dispatch without comment. They said it does not contain as complete a report on Friday's action as was carried in press reports from Managua and in Navy Department official communications.

The six marine deaths bring the corps' total since last May to approximately twenty with about as many wounded in clashes with Nicaraguans, variously identified as members of the Liberal party army and as bandits and rebels, since peace was declared as between the Liberal and Conservative forces. On the other side of the ledger the marines and the Nicaraguan National Guard have accounted for the death of several hundred natives in scores of minor and major clashes.

WORST BATTLE IN JULY

Before the Friday engagement the most serious battle was on July 16, when the marines by land and air beat off an attack by Gen. Sandino at Ocotal. At that time one marine was killed and another wounded, but 300 rebels were killed, 200 of them falling under a rain of bombs and machine-gun bullets from marine planes.

The marines went to Nicaragua in force December, 1926, after minor landings had been made during the one year since 1912 that found the country clear of American soldiery. The occupation that began in 1912 during one of the country's most violent revolutions ended in 1926. In May, 1926, marines and bluejackets returned to Bluefields when the recent revolt broke. They landed there again in August of that year, returning for a long campaign in December when the Liberal-Conservative war assumed serious proportions.

The December, 1926, landing followed the insistent plea of President Diaz, the Conservative, for American intervention, and his declaration that he could not adequately protect Americans and their interests. He also suggested the retention of marines to supervise the recent elections.

Knowles said that at 7:30 p.m. December 23, as the Alexander was passing Cape Cod, he heard a message requesting the Chatham station for a compass bearing. A few minutes later came through the air the words, "plane down."

SIKORSKY MANAGER ADMITS SCANT HOPES

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—... matoff, general manager for Sikorsky, builder of Mrs. ... plane, the Dawn, said today that little hope of the Dawn's crew being found if it fell into the sea off Cape Cod, as believed by Capt. ... of the schooner Rose Arey.

If Mrs. Grayson's craft did go down at once, Shoumatoff said, it could have been carried out to sea by the wind at the rate of about 150 miles a day.

The Bellrestd's officers and men heard of the plight of the Dawn later in the evening over their small radio receiving set, when announcement was made that no word had been received as to the plane's position.

This story of the Dawn's probable fate, related for the first time today, apparently confirms the report made by Jerome Knowles, wireless operator aboard the steamer Oakley L. Alexander, when the ship docked here December 29, that the Grayson plane did not fly far beyond Cape Cod.

Knowles said that at 7:30 p.m., December 23, as the Alexander was passing Cape Cod, he heard a message requesting the Chatham station for a compass bearing. A few minutes later came through the air the words, "plane down."

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—L. Priscott, general manager for the Sikorsky builder of Mrs. Grayson's plane, the Dawn, said today there is little hope of the Dawn's ever being found if it fell into the sea off Cape Cod, as believed by Capt. Gunner of the schooner Rose Ann Sullivan.

If Mrs. Grayson's craft did not sink at once, Shoumatoff said, it would have been carried out to sea by the wind at the rate of about 120 miles a day.

HOOVER HAS SAFE LEAD

Business Polls Favor Him

Capital Groups Inquiring for Nation's Opinion Amazed by His Popularity

Both Lowden and Dawes Far Behind in Expressions of Voters' Preference

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG
"Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (Exclusive) Herbert Hoover will be the nominee of the Republican party at the Kansas City convention if the men and women of the country are consulted. Countless business organizations are taking polls of the relative strength of men now classed as Presidential candidates in the Republican party, including favorite sons like Curtis, Willis and Norris. In checking up on the returns from business persons of the average line, both men and women are overwhelmingly in favor of Hoover and declare that for age, experience and established ability as an administrator he is the outstanding man in the party to succeed President Coolidge.

Some of these polls run into several hundreds and some run to thousands. They are confidential and the officers here who are conducting them are frankly surprised at the tremendous lead Hoover has over Dawes and Lowden, who seem now to be Siamese twins and almost synonymous.

One of the foremost of these has made a brief summary of the returns and the strength of Hoover impresses even the Democratic leaders of the office who started out to find out who is the most popular Republican candidate with "Main Street" business.

In reporting to its clients the results of the poll just closed, this office tells its members the result in the following manner:

"We have now received 664 opinions. In the aggregate they are 74 per cent for Hoover. The combination of Lowden and Dawes expression is 23 per cent of the total. Taken section by section the results are overwhelming for Hoover in all parts of the country except the Middle West where 63 per cent are for either Lowden or Dawes and 38 per cent for Hoover."

	Hoover.	Lowden.	Dawes.
New York City	87	4	6
New England	83	"	"
Pennsylvania	80	"	3
East, including Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, D. C.	38	"	8
Ohio and Michigan	75	9	8
Middle West, including Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa	74	88	84
West, mountain States	36	"	4
Pacific Coast	39	9	"
South, including Southeast and Southwest	50	"	9
Totals	664	78	73

"Fourteen scattering expressions for Coolidge, Mellon, Longworth, Willis, Curtis and D. F. Davis are not tabulated above and are not significant," it adds. "The vote does not test the strength of favorite sons, who can be classed as dark horses or compromise possibilities."

INDIANS' ATTORNEY OFF TO PRESS CLAIM

SPOKANE (Wash.) Jan. 2. (AP)—To press a claim of the Kalispell Indian tribe for more than $1,000,000 as reimbursement for tribal lands and privileges, William S. Lewis, an attorney and Indian student, is en route to Washington. He will confer with members of the Senate and House committees on Indian affairs. The Kalispells contend that their vast acres in what now is Northwestern Washington, Northern Idaho and Northwestern Montana were taken from them, along with their hunting and fishing rights, without treaty and without compensation.

Frozen Brakes Blamed for Interurban Smash

After the Fatal Accident

Here is a view of the wreckage following the collision of interurban cars near Marietta, Ga., causing the death of three persons and injury to twelve others.

[P. & A. Telephoto transmitted by Bell System]

TROLLEY CRASH KILLS THREE

Twelve Others Hurt as Georgia Cars Collide Head on; Engineer Dies in Illinois Wreck

MARIETTA (Ga.) Jan. 2. (AP)—A head-on collision of two interurban electric cars, attributed indirectly to freezing weather, killed three persons and injured twelve near here today. The crash occurred on a curve near Glover's Station when a northbound car carrying passengers ran past a signal into a block on which an empty car was being deadheaded.

Mrs. Irwin McIntyre of Jonesville Station, who had just boarded the car here, and T. G. Hudson, an electric company employee, were killed instantly.

Meyer Metzk, Atlanta merchant, died en route to a hospital. Three of the injured are in a dying condition, while five others are said to be seriously hurt.

An official report from the Georgia Power Company, operators of the line, said that the signal light apparently failed to work because of the freeze-up, and that brakes on the northbound car also failed because of the cold. The empty car was standing still when the crash came, the motorman having applied his brakes on hearing the approach of the other car.

L. C. Hames, motorman of the passenger car, at first reported killed, is in a hospital here with a broken back.

ENGINEER KILLED IN ILLINOIS WRECK

MT. VERNON (Ill.) Jan. 2. (AP)—One engineer was killed and the other slightly injured here today when an eastbound passenger train of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad collided with another passenger train about five miles east of here.

Ed Clark, Evansville, Ind., was killed when his locomotive overturned. No passengers are reported injured.

The eastbound train, ordered to take the sidetrack at the point, failed to stop at the switch and crashed head-on at a slow rate of speed with No. 86, standing on the main line waiting for the other train to pass. It is believed the brakes were frozen on the moving train. Engineer Rolla Crowder, also of Evansville, was injured slightly.

INJURIES CONTINUE IN FATAL TRAIN WRECKS

CHICAGO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Inquiries into the blame for the two triple train wrecks in Chicago during the holiday week-end, killing three persons and injuring 100 others, were continued today pending the recovery of witnesses.

The deathbed statement of J. O. Stafford, motorman of a Chicago South Shore and South Bend electric train which crashed into two other trains Sunday night, was introduced at the inquest into his death. The statement quoted him as saying he saw the two stalled trains ahead of him when he was 1000 feet away but that his brakes failed to take hold. His train, a Gary express, plowed into the rear end of a South Bend express which had been forced to stop by a local train disabled with frozen brakes.

The crash telescoped the South Bend train, cars catching fire and steam pipes bursting, terrorizing the passengers. A score were sent to hospitals, but none is reported in a critical condition.

Inquiry into the first triple crash Saturday on the Chicago and Alton line, in which two Tulsa (Okla.) women were killed, proceeded at the general offices of the road in Bloomington. The Alton crash also was caused by a train plowing into the rear of a stalled train, halted by a third train ahead, all Chicago bound. Fifty were hurt.

Rescued Pair Can't Get Ashore

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2. (AP)—E. Arminton and C. Anderson, picked up in a fishing boat today drifting off Point Arena, 100 miles north of here, by the British steamer Canadian Observer, may have to remain on the vessel until it reaches San Pedro.

The Coast Guard patrol boat Virginia went out today to take the men off the steamer but the dense fog over the Pacific Ocean prevented the meeting.

Health Abounds in San Joaquin

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Three years without a single death from diphtheria is the record just established by San Joaquin county, the Department of Public Health reports. The record, the department points out, is due to the intensive control work carried on for several years, and in which immunization against the disease has been offered freely.

In many of the school districts, children have been immunized against diphtheria as well as smallpox.

Last Gethsemane Trees Awarded to South Dakota

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 2. (AP)—California grown Italian cypress trees propagated from seed gathered in the Garden of Gethsemane, which were distributed last year by M. B. Pratt, State forester, created such an unusual demand the supply is virtually exhausted, but nevertheless two will go forward within a few days with Lemmon, S. D., as their destination.

Pratt is in receipt of a letter from O. S. Guammen asking for two of the famed trees for the American Lutheran Church in his home city. Though the supply is all but exhausted, Pratt still has two and will send them east.

Last year the forester distributed more than 250 trees among the churches of the country.

American Player Weds in England

LONDON, Jan. 2. (AP)—Edythe Baker, American revue actress, was married today to Gerald D'Erlanger, son of Baron Emile D'Erlanger, international banker, at Prince's Row, Westminster, register's office. It was witnessed by a few friends, including the Earl and Countess of Port Arlington. The couple left for Monte Carlo for their honeymoon.

Miss Baker and Gerald D'Erlanger met at London bridge parties, at which much of their courtship occurred. It has been stated that the actress will give up her professional career as a pianiste and dancer.

With the advent of another Year, we are again made profoundly conscious of the responsibility which leadership imposes — a leadership which has been built on uncompromising integrity and is being maintained by steadfast adherence to the principles of loyalty and service.

As we look forward, a new epoch opens for us in 1928. Within a short time we shall move into our own building at 615 South Olive Street—a building having no counterpart, here or elsewhere, in architectural excellence and luxury of appointment.

In our new shop, our capacity for service will be much enlarged, our offerings more numerous and more varied. The environment there, and the furnishings, will represent the most advanced concepts of imaginative genius. Every particular, indeed, will express, with heightened emphasis, the exclusiveness and elegant dignity which have always distinguished the name of Alexander & Oviatt.

To our many friends who have made possible the success we have enjoyed—1927 having far exceeded any previous year—we extend our sincere thanks and wish for each and every one a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

LAST CUE HEARD BY LOIE FULLER

Career of Dancer Marked by Series of Triumphs

She Was Much in Public Eye on Royal Tour Here

PARIS, Jan. 2. (AP)—Loie Fuller, dancer, who became a center of controversy during Queen Marie's tour of the United States in 1926, died today of pneumonia. She died at the Plaza Athenee Hotel after a ten-day illness. Pneumonia was preceded by autointoxication.

Half a dozen physicians worked in relays night and day administering oxygen, but her life ebbed as the new year came in.

Miss Fuller, until stricken, was active with her school of dancing. She moved to the hotel several months ago from her own villa at Neuilly where Queen Marie often visited her.

WINS FAME AS DANCER

The dancer, who was born on a farm near Chicago, came to Paris after triumphs in America. She began her stage career in the Academy of Music, Chicago, in child parts, and later became a soubrette. Invention of the serpentine dance won her fame as a danseuse.

Miss Fuller met Queen Marie in Paris a generation ago. In Paris she continued her innovations in spectacular dancing with scores of yards of billowing draperies and fantastic lights. She won for herself in France a reputation somewhat like that she had enjoyed in America.

She and the Queen had been the closest of friends for many years, the Queen even discussing family problems with the dancer. It is understood here that Queen Marie arranged her trip to America through Miss Fuller.

Following discord aboard Queen Marie's special train after Miss Fuller joined the royal party at Spokane, Wash., the dancer left the train at Denver and this was said to have marked the cessation of visible evidence of their friendship. The two have not seen each other since.

FRIENDSHIP CEASES

It also is reported that Miss Fuller tried to mediate with the Queen in behalf of Mme. Magda Lupescu with whom former Crown Prince Carol fled from Rumania, renouncing his rights to the throne.

Whether either or both of these affairs caused the coolness between them it often was remarked that the old warmth of the friendship disappeared although there was no open break.

Loie Fuller gained fame as a dancer in the nineties and was a wartime friend of Queen Marie. She preceded the Queen to the United States and it was reported that she was trying to influence the Rumanian Queen in her social activities in New York.

When Queen Marie's special train reached Spokane, Miss Fuller joined the royal party with May Birkhead, a press agent, and Miss Gabrielle Rloch, a secretary. The Fuller party became involved in much controversy and its members left the train at Denver November 10, 1926. It was announced that Miss Fuller left of her own accord. On rumors that the dancer had been banished, both Miss Fuller and the royal party were silent.

WRITER LAID TO REST

BERKELEY (Cal.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Funeral services were conducted here today for Mrs. Augusta Borie, musician, writer and artist, who died at her home in Alameda Saturday. Mrs. Borie was a member of the Pacific Coast Women's Press Association for many years and held the office of auditor and historian.

PASTORETTE DEFENDS SMOKING AS NOT MATTER OF RELIGION

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—Two lecture engagements in this country by Agnes Maude Royden, England's foremost woman preacher, have been canceled on the ground that she smokes cigarettes and advocates companionate marriage.

Miss Royden, who is 51 years of age, and head of Guild House, London, admits she smokes. She smokes cigarette because she enjoys them and because, she said, they rest her nerves.

In a letter to William S. Feakins, American lecture manager, she said: "I do not care a button whether or not I smoke while in America, but I certainly do not concede that it is a matter of religious importance."

The two protesting societies have been released from their lecture contract, said Feakins, who stated he had been forced to decline 350 applications from religious societies in the country and that the two canceled dates were filled quickly. He pointed out that Miss Royden was to address branches of the Mission Society in Philadelphia, Detroit and New York.

SEARS, ROEBUCK PRESIDENT DIES

Brilliant Young Executive Ill But Two Weeks

Began Life on Railroad as Water Boy

CHICAGO, Jan. 2. (AP)—C. M. Kittle, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and former vice-president of the Illinois Central Railroad, died here today after a two weeks' illness.

Kittle, who was 47 years of age, became president of the mail-order company in 1924, succeeding Julius Rosenwald, who became chairman of the board.

He was born in Elkins, W. Va., and spent most of his life in the railroad business, beginning his career in 1895 as a station clerk of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburgh Railroad. He became connected with the Illinois Central in 1900 when but 20 years of age and his rise was rapid.

GOES TO TOP

In 1912 he was made assistant to the president and in 1916 became vice-president. During the World War Kittle served as Federal manager of the Illinois Central, Yazoo and Mississippi Valley and other roads and from 1920 to 1924 was senior vice-president of Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley roads.

His executive ability brought him to the attention of Rosenwald and when the latter decided to retire from the presidency of the mail-order house in 1924 the post was offered Kittle, who at the age of 44 became head of one of the world's largest mail-order concerns.

BEGAN AS WATER BOY

Kittle's start in the railway world was as a water boy for a section gang at the age of 14. Within a year he was a station clerk, two years later also was a telegraph operator for his railway office and from then his progress was phenomenal.

Mr. Kittle's first wife was Mary E. Cunningham, to whom he was married in West Virginia June 13, 1906. They were divorced in 1921. He later married Jane Dabney of Louisville, Ky.

BACHELOR TAX IN ITALY PAYS

Four Months' Levy $792,000, Which Goes to Babies and Mothers

ROME, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Mussolini's special tax on Italian bachelors, operative for the last four months of last year, added 15,000,000 lire ($792,000) to the treasury, it is announced.

A new list of bachelors is to be published next week from which the government hopes to get 50,000,000 lire ($2,640,000) for the next fiscal year.

The funds thus raised are turned over to the National Association for Maternity and Infants.

SAN FRANCISCO HOST TO SIR THOMAS LIPTON

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton, famed British yachtsman and tea merchant, was guest of San Francisco today. He arrived here from Los Angeles and was greeted by San Francisco yachtsmen whose guest he will be at a formal function later this week. A program of entertainment and a cruise on San Francisco Bay is arranged for the cup challenger, who is reputed to have spent more than $5,000,000 on yachts in an endeavor to outsail American sailing craft.

ROAD PROGRAM WORK RUSHED

Preliminaries Under Way on Thirteen Projects

Start of Construction Within Few Weeks Planned

Total Involved Estimated at More Than $1,750,000

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Preliminary work on a thirteen-project highway program, costing in excess of $1,750,000, is being rushed by State highway officials so construction can start in a few weeks.

On two of the major projects the plans and specifications are being printed for distribution to contractors when requests for bids are sent out.

The projects on which plans are being printed are the causeway across the Sutter By-Pass, Sutter county, and the reconstruction of 7.44 miles of highway between French Camp and Mossdale. Those on which reports have just been filed are the grading and surfacing of 2.07 miles of the Redwood highway between Fortuna and Fernbridge, and similar work on 10.6 miles between Cisco and Soda Springs, Nevada county.

Plans and specifications are being prepared on the new route through Dixon, Solano county, to eliminate two grade crossings; grading and surfacing between Broadway Station and San Mateo, San Mateo county; the Herndon Bridge, near Fresno; a bridge across Dry Creek, Amador county; paving of a quarter-mile near San Luis Obispo; grading and surfacing of 6.76 miles at the west end of Solano county; construction of twenty miles of storm-water protection between Trifolium Canal and Arroyo Salada Wash, Imperial county; grading and surfacing of 8.5 miles between Diaz Lake and Alabama gate, Inyo county, and grading of two miles at Buckman Springs, San Diego county.

WAR DOGS STRAIN AT LEASH

Andorran Patriots Breathe Threats of War on Spain for Hampering Ancient Smuggling Trade

[Copyright, 1928, by Chicago Tribune.]

ANDORRA, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Since the year 1240 the citizens of Andorra, tiniest republic and one of the three smallest countries in the world, have kept peace, but they do not guarantee that they will not lick Spain one of these days.

Word of a bull, three illustrious citizens of the tiny nation came down from the mountain fastness of the Pyrenees, which the Andorrans have held inviolate since before the time of Charlemagne, to complain to the chief of the French Department of Ariege, Prefecture, and through him to President Gaston Doumergue of France, Prince Protector of Andorra, about the Spanish.

WAR DOGS STRAIN

Spain, which the Andorrans say is a bully, continually is nagging at her neighbor. From sending agents in search of Catalan conspirators a month ago it now has gone so far as to have installed a Spanish customs battery in full uniform right across the street from the republic's combined Capitol, Parliament, jail, inn and so forth.

Although the French formally protect Andorra, the Spanish suddenly invoked a forgotten treaty signed 300 years ago. Where the French tactfully let Andorrans go as mail runs, Spain sent a haughty official speaking the language of the Catalans to the Andorrans whisper nervously that he is serving as a spy for the smuggling operations over the natural Pass into Spain, without which the inhabitants of the little republic, who have dwindled from 6,000 to 5,000 in recent years, cannot succeed to keep body and soul together.

TO ARMS, CITIZENS!

Worst of all, the Castilian postmaster represents foreign domination over the six republics of the Andorra Valley have fought since the days of Louis le Debonaire."

Three shepherds, the three illustrious Andorrans tramped into the premier's office and asked to have Premier Doumergue order Premier Aristide Briand to

Hunt Gets Into Gas-Price War

PHOENIX, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Gov. Hunt has made definite entry into the fight made by a Phoenix newspaper for the lowering of Arizona gasoline prices and has written for information concerning cost factors in the sale of gasoline in Phoenix and other Arizona points, as well as to the railroads for schedules of carload freight rates on gasoline from California, Texas and Oklahoma.

He also has asked the Attorney General to furnish an opinion concerning the legal powers of municipalities to engage in the business of retailing gasoline. Power to engage in industrial pursuits is granted to the State and municipalities by the Arizona Constitution. The Governor states his office is conducting a general investigation of gasoline prices within the State.

SHOE COSTS DUE TO SOAR, SAY MAKERS

Rising Prices of Hides and Leather Blamed by New England Factories

BOSTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—Higher shoe prices as a result of rising cost of hides and leather were predicted by the New England Shoe and Leather Association in a statement tonight, asserting prices of leather used in the manufacture of shoes have increased approximately 35 per cent in the last twelve months. The statement adds:

"Just how long this situation will continue it is impossible to predict, but in the face of these largely augmented prices, manufacturers will find it necessary to get an advance commensurate with the advance in raw materials, and it would appear that retailers throughout the United States would have to get a corresponding advance."

The association attributes the rise in prices of materials to a falling-off in the general supply of hides and calfskins, accompanied by an increase in demand in European and other countries where shoe-and-leather goods manufacture is an important industry.

The statement says a "reasonable volume" of business is anticipated for the coming six months but if, for any reason, the demand should be above normal, "there undoubtedly would develop a serious situation in the leather market."

EMANCIPATION TAKEN LIGHTLY

Freed African Slaves Hardly Comprehend

Comparatively Few Leave Old Masters

Some Set Forth, However, to Conquer World

FREETOWN (Sierra Leone, Africa) Jan. 2. (AP)—All the negroes of the Sierra Leone protectorate can call their bodies their own today, as they begin work with the opening of the new year. Nearly 250,000 domestic slaves were delivered from bondage yesterday by decree and today are on a basis of political equality with their former masters.

Lady Simon, wife of Sir John Simon, British Liberal statesman, is given credit for disclosing to the outside world conditions existing in the protectorate and making an ardent plea which resulted in the emancipation of the slaves.

Many of the older freed men and women won't live to know much of the fruits of freedom, but thousands of others, young and just beginning life, have new vistas opened to them. Emancipation did not evoke any demonstration. Just as in the case of the American emancipation the negroes' release is not yet fully understood by many of these simple and ignorant blacks. They are rather bewildered by the sudden change.

Comparatively few of the former slaves have left their former masters and it is probable that many of them never will depart, unless they are subjected to cruelty, but will continue to work as free men and women for those who formerly claimed their labor without pay.

It is said that in many cases the former slaves will have little difficulty in getting grants of land from their old masters. In some districts, however, numerous applications already have been received for new employment by slaves who are dissatisfied or feel the urge to tackle the world on their own account.

The question of what, if anything, will be done in regard to compensation of the former slave holders is not yet settled.

Ex-Ruler Rushes for Butterflies

BERLIN, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Armed with a butterfly net and magnifying glasses of the scientist, the former ruler of Bulgaria, the 66-year-old Czar Ferdinand, rushed to South America unexpectedly, giving up all the New Year's appointments made for him by his court chamberlain.

An ornithologist friend of the former czar sent a glowing account of the discovery of three new kinds of birds and butterflies in the Brazilian backwoods, whereupon Ferdinand wired for reservations to the steamship company and within twenty-four hours left his Coburg residence for Rio de Janeiro, showing the enthusiasm with which the former ruler is devoting himself to the study of natural history as a consolation for the loss of his throne.

Amity Pact Aids Haiti Progress

PORT-AU-PRINCE (Haiti) Jan. 2. (AP)—On the occasion of the 124th anniversary of Haiti's independence President Louis Borno today issued a proclamation declaring that never before had such liberty, humanity, security and progress existed in Haiti. He attributed conditions to the treaty of amity with the United States.

After a grand mass at the cathedral, President Borno laid wreaths at the tombs of the Haitian independence heroes, Petion and Desalines. He also decorated forty-four officers and enlisted men of the Haitian gendarmerie.

OIL RETRIAL POSSIBLY TO BE DELAYED

Jury-Shadowing Case to Extend Beyond 16th Inst., it Now Seems Likely

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—With the court's investigation into charges that the District Attorney's office intimidated witnesses in the criminal contempt proceedings against Harry F. Sinclair, William J. Burns and their four associates still incomplete, it appears doubtful today that the retrial of the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case will be started the 16th inst., the date set.

In the contempt proceedings against the oil men and detectives who shadowed the Fall-Sinclair jury, it is expected that three or four days will be required for completion of the prosecution's case. Then will follow arguments for dismissal of charges which probably will take two days. If the court overrules the motions to dismiss the citations, the defense, it is announced, will require a week in which to call witnesses by whose testimony it hopes to show there was no contempt of court committed in the jury shadowing. The final arguments which will follow are expected to consume another two court days.

As all of tomorrow and possibly Wednesday are likely to be needed to clear intimidation charges, the contempt case may not get under way again until Thursday. This would carry the final phases of the hearing into the week of the 16th inst., making it necessary to delay the retrial.

Indications that it may be found advisable to postpone the new trial until warmer weather because of the condition of Albert B. Fall, one of the defendants, are seen in a statement issued by his physician in El Paso, Saturday. The trip to Washington at this time, it was said, not only would endanger the former Interior Secretary's health, but possibly his life.

Actress Niece of Mrs. Fiske Dies Suddenly

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—Miss Emily Stevens, who began a notable stage career at 15 years of age, under the tutelage of her aunt, Minnie Maddern Fiske, died suddenly today in her West Side apartment. Assistant Medical Examiner Miles said that death probably resulted from an overdose of medicinal narcotics.

Miss Stevens was born in New York forty-two years ago, the daughter of Emma Maddern, actress, and Robert E. Stevens, theatrical producer. She made her stage debut in Mrs. Fiske's company, with which she played many notable parts in the next eight years.

Among the better known vehicles of Miss Stevens's success were "The Unchastened Woman," "The Boss," Theater Guild productions, "The Sporting Thing to Do," "Today" and more recently, Ibsen play revivals.

Seas Still Hold Back Salvage of Submarine S-4

PROVINCETOWN (Mass.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Rough seas and freezing temperatures halted the work of salvaging the sunken submarine S-4 today, but the crews of the salvage vessels were not idle. With the promise of better weather conditions tomorrow officers directing the work continued preparations of the necessary equipment and the training of divers. Tonight the wind was dying down and the temperature was rising slowly.

While the salvage fleet hugged Provincetown Harbor for shelter from the bitter cold and inhospitable seas, officials of the naval board of inquiry, which will open at the Boston navy yard on Wednesday, came here to make a preliminary study. Lieutenant-Commander Leslie Bratton, who will act as judge-advocate at the inquiry, and Lieutenant-Commander C. H. Dunbar, his assistant, spent four hours on the submarine tender Bushnell and the mine sweeper Falcon, lining up those who will appear as witnesses.

Banker's Death Starts Inquiry

SEATTLE, Jan. 2. (AP)—Police here today are investigating the cause of the death of Frank Warn, 45 years of age, vice-president of the Exchange National Bank in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. The body was found in a bathhouse yesterday and remained unidentified until today.

COEUR D'ALENE (Idaho) Jan. 2. (AP)—Frank Warn, vice-president of Exchange National Bank of Coeur D'Alene, who was found dead in Seattle, had been suffering from heart trouble for three weeks. He had been connected with the bank for sixteen or eighteen years and had large property interests here. He was unmarried and a Thirty-third Degree Mason.

His father had been very ill in New York for two or three weeks and Warn was prevented from going to his bedside by his own illness. He had planned a trip to California.

TOWN HONORS MAYOR

Flagstaff, Ariz., Names Aviation Field For Ex-Chief of Municipality

FLAGSTAFF (Ariz.) Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Flagstaff is to have an aviation field named in honor of Mayor I. B. Koch. The tract, eight miles east of Flagstaff, contains 556 acres and it may be extended by 105 acres. The field is declared an ideal one, level and without rocks, and with flooring of volcanic cinder. It is within a mile of a paved highway, close to the Santa Fe Railroad and without obstructions in any direction.

Purchase of the property has been made by the city of Flagstaff. It is expected the field will be used not only by transcontinental flyers but as a base for planes covering the Grand Canyon. In connection with the naming was developed the fact that though Mayor Koch resigned office several weeks ago, he still is carried in office by the City Council, which has refused to elect a successor.

CARSON CITY (Nev.) Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Although Nevada has used lethal gas for execution of convicted murderers for eight years, Los Angeles women have asked Gov. Balzar to recommend abolishment of hanging to the Legislature.

The Governor states he has received several requests, although wide publicity has long been given to Nevada's unique mode of capital punishment.

Great Thaw and Rain in England Result in Floods

LONDON, Jan. 2. (AP)—A great thaw, which released England today from its chains of snow and ice, produced flood conditions tonight in many parts of the country, where heavy rains accompanied "the big melt."

In the Valley of the Thames, Severen and Trent distressing conditions already are reported and many streams have burst their banks under pressure of the accumulated waters.

Rain has been falling for almost twenty-four hours in the London district and the snow, which for a week has interfered with traffic, quickly disappeared as the temperature rose from 20 to 30 deg.

The changed conditions brought relief to a number of remote villages, which were snowbound and without supplies. Villages along river banks are distressed by overflows and the rain, which are general throughout England.

Clemency Views of Snyder-Gray Judge Required

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—Justice Townsend Scudder of the Supreme Court, who presided at the trial which ended in death sentences for Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray for the murder of the woman's husband, has sent his views regarding clemency for the couple to Gov. Smith.

Justice Scudder's recommendations and those of Dist.-Atty. Newcombe, who prosecuted the case, had been asked by the Governor in connection with the clemency hearing to be granted by the Governor Thursday, when attorneys for the condemned couple will present pleas of mercy.

The contents of Justice Scudder's communication were not made public and he declined to discuss the matter further than to say that his personal views, which are opposed to capital punishment, were not permitted to influence his statement regarding Mrs. Snyder and Gray.

Condemned Men See Prison Show

SAN QUENTIN, Jan. 2. (AP)—Four men awaiting execution were brought from their cells today and given seats in the front row at the fourteenth annual New Year's Day vaudeville program which was attended by 3000 prisoners.

The show was staged in the large mess hall under the eyes of practically every guard in the prison. The convicts were permitted to applaud and the event passed without trace of disorder. A separate show for women prisoners was given during the afternoon. Special holiday dinners were served.

Steel Workers' Lay-off at End

WHEELING (W. Va.) Jan. 2. (AP)—More than 1000 steel workers, idle for many months, went back to work in Wheeling Steel Corporation plants today as operations increased in the Wheeling industrial district.

Ten more tin mills began operating at the corporation's Yorkville (O.) plant this morning. The Belmont mill here also started another furnace.

I. M. Scott, president of the corporation, said tonight that the industrial outlook for the year is bright and that greater activity in other plants of the concern is in prospect.

Wife Held in Mate's Death

WALLA WALLA (Wash.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Poison was found in the stomach of Alpheus Bidwell, 48-year-old telephone company employee who died her Friday, Prof. C. C. Todd of the department of chemistry, Washington State College, informed Coroner W. G. Colman today.

Mrs. Bessie Bidwell, 40, his wife, and Preston Ray Clark, 36, a boarder in the Bidwell home, are in the County Jail here while officers are conducting an investigation into the circumstances of Bidwell's death.

Mexican Rebel Chieftain Slain

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 2. (AP)—Dispatches from Cuatla, State of Morelos, say that Ernesto Villareal, the last rebel chieftain operating in that region, and three followers have been killed in a fight at Atlahuacan between police and a group of unidentified persons.

Villareal had been captured shortly before the fight and was being taken to Cuatla when an attempt was made to rescue him.

BODY OF MAN FOUND IN SAN FRANCISCO BAY

SAN RAFAEL, Jan. 2. (AP)—The body of a man about 50 years of age, believed to be that of Herman Smith, San Francisco egg inspector, was found today floating in San Francisco Bay between Angel Island and Tiburon. In the man's pockets was a letter from a brother, Chris Smith of Seattle, Wash., one cent and a union card. The Coroner here believes the man jumped into the bay while despondent over lack of funds.

PEACE TREATY UP TO FRANCE

American Proposals Handed to Government

Separate Pact or Agreement With Nations Offered

United States Commits Self to "Outlaw War" Move

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—American proposals in connection with the projected new peace treaty with France to take the place of the Root arbitration pact, which expires February 27, have been placed before the French government in alternative form.

Whether the result of the conversations and exchanges of memoranda will result in a single treaty or in separate pacts supplementary to each other depends on French study of the American suggestions.

In view of the fact that these suggestions were put in definite form and transmitted through the French Embassy after Secretary Kellogg had discussed the situation with the entire membership of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, it is assumed by officials here that the proposals have a considerable degree of Senate sanction.

CHOICE GIVEN

The conversations between Secretary Kellogg and Ambassador Claudel are now known to have led to two separate proposals as to ways and means of tightening diplomatic machinery for preserving peace. They also have made it clear that the Washington government is planning to follow up conclusion of the new peace treaty or treaties with France by making its arbitration agreements with other countries on the model of the new Franco-American commitments, as other Root treaties expire.

In the event that the original Briand proposal for a treaty with the United States to outlaw war is followed closely, the Washington attitude is that a multilateral covenant to be signed ultimately by other than the two powers might be framed. It would be of a general character and amount to a joint declaration by the signatory powers against war.

LIMITATIONS SEEN

In view of constitutional limitations in this country, such as the reservation to Congress alone of war-making powers, no way appears open to include in a treaty of this character definite commitments not to resort to war under any circumstance.

That circumstance includes the Washington viewpoint to favor a revision and strengthening of the Root treaty so as to include a policy declaration against war in the preamble. The succeeding articles of the treaty would re-enact the commitments to submit to arbitration at The Hague disputes of every character which could not otherwise be settled and which did not involve:

(2.) Questions which involve the interests of a third power.

(3.) Questions growing out of the maintenance by the United States of the Monroe Doctrine.

TREATY GOES FURTHER

The supplement would further strengthen and at the same time make even more elastic and workable the original Root arbitration treaty. The American plan includes a new element in the form of a reference to possible conciliation of disputes or attempted conciliation as a preliminary step to formal arbitration.

In effect, this proposal would interlock with the arbitration treaty, although not by specific reference, the existing Bryan conciliation treaty with France. The proposal is based on generally accepted views that in many cases of international disputes where the question is not of a purely juridicial character, examination by a joint commission of a fact-finding nature frequently would make arbitration unnecessary.

GREAT BRITAIN'S TURN NEXT, OFFICIALS THINK

LONDON, Jan. 2. (AP)—The progress of negotiations for a Franco-American pact outlawing war is being watched in official circles here with great interest in anticipation of the possibility that Great Britain and other nations will be invited to join later.

The official attitude is that any suggestion for British adherence would receive favorable consideration from the government, but there is no desire to pledge in advance the British attitude before the actual terms of the pact are known, or whether other nations would be willing to adhere.

OFFICIALLY UNKNOWN

It was stated today that the government as yet has no official knowledge of the contents of the draft and officials are reluctant to accept versions which have been cabled from the United States.

The London Star in an editorial today on the proposed pact says that the only fly in the ointment on the British side is unwillingness of the British governments to pledge itself to adopt arbitration, whatever the question and whether or not Great Britain likes. Questions which would arise about sea law are among those which it is almost certain would be brought forward by some power, the paper says, and the decision of an international tribunal probably would be hostile to the British view.

EYE TO FUTURE

With the United States opposing, the Star says, Great Britain, in the event of another war, could not enforce her view of sea law and the Star thinks therefore, that it would be better to accept the International view.

"With this question removed," the paper says, "we see no reason why we should not celebrate the year 1928 by pledging ourselves to accept arbitration always."

YUMA MORNING "SUN" CHANGES OWNERSHIP

YUMA (Ariz.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Edwin S. Worthington has become the publisher of the Yuma Morning Sun, succeeding J. H. Westover, who has been publishing the daily for the past nineteen years. Westover, in making the announcement today, said he intended to retire from active newspaper work. The new owner of the Sun has had newspaper experience in San Francisco, Omaha, Beloit, Wis., and other cities. He formerly was vice-president of the Daily News Publishing Company of Beloit.

Agricultural Development in 1927 Leads Assets

Millions for Irrigation and Power Projects Spent

Building in Phoenix Sets Mark for Capital

PHOENIX, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—The greatest item of Arizona's progress during 1927 is that of agricultural development. That past achievements are producing now is shown by the fact that crops grown during the year on the Salt River reclamation project were worth about $20,000,000. It may be explained that this project is far from covering all the cultivated area of the Salt River Valley.

The Salt River Valley Water Users' Association last summer completed the Roosevelt Dam power dam at a cost of $6,800,000, and now is planning another Salt River Canyon dam at Stewart Mountain. In addition, it will spend $1,000,000 in electrification of valley farms and will otherwise expenditure of about $8,000,000 in development of the Paradise Valley project, north of Phoenix.

AGUA FRIA PROJECT

Northwest of Phoenix has been completed the Agua Fria dam of the Arizona Development Company, which is spending around $5,000,000 on the project, including the planting of an immense area of grapefruit. More than $2,000,000 is being spent west of Phoenix by the Roosevelt Irrigation District. East of Mesa, the National Conservation concern has spent even more than that sum. Appropriation of $3,000,000 has been made for the Indian Bureau's Coolidge dam, on the Gila River, and for distribution systems around Sacaton and Casa Grande, included in the lands of the Pima Indians. A large development program has been mapped for the $5,000,000 Gillespie dam and southwest of Phoenix, while the work that system and Yuma a number of new development projects are made material headway.

PHOENIX BUILDING

Apparently with little reference to the great irrigation development, there has been notable for building operations in Phoenix, where permits for $6,000,000, twice the record of the year before. The valley cities have been the Roosevelt Hotel, $1,200,000; San Carlos Hotel, $1,000,000; Security Building, $800,000; Presbyterian Church, $600,000; Orpheum Theater, $800,000, while with the growth has been started work on many beauty and city buildings to [illegible] $1,200,000, the $2,000,000 Biltmore Hotel in the northern suburbs, the Juanita College to cost $250,000, and several tourist hotels. Other hotels have been completed or under construction at Flagstaff, Prescott, Mesa, Tempe, Yuma, Douglas and Nogales, the last a $500,000 enterprise. At Tucson an [illegible] appointed tourist hotel at a cost of $300,000 is near completion. Work has been started on a new Veterans' Hospital to cost [illegible].

It may be explained that this project is far from covering the cultivated area of the Salt River Valley.

The Salt River Valley Water Users' Association last summer completed its Roosevelt dam power dam at a cost of $4,000,000, and now is planning another Salt River Canyon dam at Granite Mountain. In addition, it has spent $1,500,000 in electrification of valley farms and will sustain expenditure of about $6,000,000 in development of the Paradise Valley project, north of Phoenix.

AGUA FRIA PROJECT

Backers of Phoenix has been behind the Agua Fria dam of the Irrigation Development Company, which is breaking ground. $3,000,000 on the project, including the planting of extensive area of grapefruit. More than $1,000,000 is being spent west of Mesa by the Roosevelt Irrigation District, West of Mesa, the Federal Conservation concern has spent more than that sum.

Many schools have been completed or under construction at Flagstaff, Mesa, Tempe, Yuma, Casa Grande and Peoples, the last, a $100,000 project. At Tucson an $800,000 reported tourist hotel is near completion, and has been started on a $500,000 Veterans' Hospital to cost $1,000,000.

HIGHWAY WORK

Arizona is expected to spend $2,000,000 on highway work in 1928, including a bridge across the Colorado near Lee's Ferry and one across the Little Colorado at Holbrook, over the Gila near Yuma, and the San Pedro River near Fairbank. In February, private interests will complete a $500,000 toll bridge across the Colorado between Blythe and Ehrenberg.

Much railroad work has been done during the year, with heavier steel laid on the Santa Fe Railroad branch to Phoenix and new terminals and shops built in this city.

WHITE TOP HAT RAISES CAIN

King of Afghanistan in Row Over Snappy Headgear He Sports in Cairo

LONDON, Jan. 2. (AP)—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Cairo says that because King Amanullah of Afghanistan has been wearing a white top hat during his visit in Cairo, he has offended the Ulemas (Moslem religious leaders.) They have shown their disapproval of his preference for European headgear instead of the traditional fez or Afghan equivalent, by cancelling a farewell reception.

King Amanullah greatly resented his white topper being made the subject of a religious controversy and he is reported to have said such hats were worn generations ago in Afghanistan, and Europe probably borrowed the idea there.

SHIP FIGHTS GALE AT SEA TO SAVE SIX

Tanker in Port After Two-Day Battle That Ends in Rescue of Schooner Crew

PLYMOUTH (Eng.) Jan. 2. (AP)—The story of two days' heroic fight to save the crew of the Newfoundland schooner Ena A. Moulton was told today, when the American tanker Dartford arrived with the six members of the crew of the schooner rescued December 19 in midocean.

A terrific storm was raging when the Dartford's commander, Capt. Kilmer, responded to distress signals from the schooner. The latter vessel was waterlogged and her canvas had been blown to ribbons while the crew was exhausted by long hours at the pumps.

Lines from the Dartford heaved aboard the helpless schooner were snapped three times but the Dartford returned again and again dauntlessly to her life-saving task. She fought huge waves and was lashed by a hurricane for thirty-seven hours until the night of December 19, when the schooner's crew finally was hauled aboard.

Before departing from the derelict, the Dartford set the Ena A. Moulton afire to prevent her becoming a danger to navigation.

NORRIS SCORES AIDE OF HEARST

Senator Obtains Documents to Refute Avila

Asserted Procurer Mexican Citizen, Papers Show

Publisher Called Upon to Open His Files

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—Papers purporting to show that Miguel Avila, procurer of the Mexican documents published in Hearst newspapers, claimed Mexican citizenship, are in the hands of Senator Norris of Nebraska, Republican.

Avila told the special Senate committee investigating the authenticity of the Hearst documents he is an American citizen. He will be recalled Wednesday by the committee when it reassembles to continue open hearings. He was missing when last summoned by the committee.

NAMED BY HEARST

Senator Norris, who is one of the four Senators named in one of the Mexican documents as the supposed beneficiaries of a $1,215,000 Mexican fund said today he had a photostatic copy of an affidavit made by Avila to the Mexican Consul at Laredo, Tex., attesting to his Mexican citizenship. He is prepared to give it to the committee.

The Nebraskan and the other three Senators named in the documents—Borah, Heflin and La Follette—have been exonerated by the committee of any connection with the so-called Mexican slush fund and Mr. Hearst has said he believes they were not approached in the matter.

Norris called on Hearst today to open his correspondence files, as was done by the Mexican officials, and give to the committee all details of events leading to the publishing of the Mexican documents.

ASKS FOR MESSAGES

Moreover, he suggested the committee summon officials of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies to produce any and all telegrams passed between Hearst and John Page, Mexico City reporter, who said he employed Avila to procure the documents for Hearst, and messages by Page and Avila.

Senator Norris also thinks Hearst should be called on to make public the name of the man he said first informed him of the Mexican documents.

CUTTING AIRS VIEWS

New Mexico's New Senator Hits at Federal Neglect of State

EAST LAS VEGAS (N. M.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Senator Cutting, who is en route to Washington as the appointee of Gov. Dillon to succeed the late Senator Jones, today said he is undecided how he will align himself in Congress, but was emphatic in declaring it is time for the "Federal government to make up in the next few years for the neglect shown New Mexico in the last sixty-five years."

"I cannot make any definite pledges," Senator Cutting said. "I do not know the situation in Washington. You have heard it said there is a strategic position for the Senator from New Mexico, but you also know that in strategy there must be politics and maneuvering and the old-time Senators are at a great advantage in that."

DOTY TASTES DRUSE FIRE

Reckless Charges by Overpowering Horde of Wild Tribesmen Told by Legionnaire

BY BENNETT J. DOTY

[Copyright, 1928, in all countries by North American Newspaper Alliance]

[This is the eighth of a series of articles by Bennett J. Doty, American boy, whose valiant service in the French Foreign Legion and his subsequent desertion, imprisonment and release have made him a figure of world interest. Doty relates his remarkable experiences, and describes life in the famous legion from the "inside," as it is lived by the private.]

Next day we made our first reconnaissance. I was not in this action but it gave us our first taste of the Druse. The patrol for the Nineteenth Company and a squadron of cavalry serving as a screen moved over a range of hills in front of the camp to observe the movements of the enemy. The patrol occupied a native village already bombed by French aviators.

As our men moved in the tribesmen opened a hot fire. It showed that the enemy was in much greater numbers than we had imagined. The patrol fought the assault off, but it would have been madness to go on. The captain was able to bring off his command with the loss of one man, a sergeant, shot out of the saddle.

BENNETT J. DOTY

This action electrified the camp. We knew we were in a real row. That night I slept beside a stone wall with my gun strapped to my arm, as did all my fellow Legionnaires. Guards were tripled and machine-gun crews slept beside their pieces. The night was bitterly cold. Our outfit was spread in a half-moon formation before Mousseifre.

ATTACK BEGINS

At 3:30 in the morning—it was September 17—a sergeant heard the tramping of hoofs and the rattling of stones from the direction of the enemy. Facing us was a small rocky hill. "Aux armes!" rang out. We leaped to our feet, rifles ready. Over the hill the Druse were pouring down upon us, 5000 of them, on horses and afoot. Rifle flashes stabbed the dark. I could hear the Druse camels grunting and bubbling, and the barbarous battle cry of the enemy.

The brunt of the attack fell upon the advance point held by the other half of my company. We met the Druse with machine-gun firing. It was so dark the gunners could shoot only at rifle flashes. The Druse were plentifully supplied with potato-masher grenades and modern magazine rifles. For ten minutes we suffered more casualties than at any time later in this fighting.

The Druse first line clashed with the advance point, but meeting with a desperate resistance veered off and drove in at a point between our flank and the original center of attack. It was getting light and we could see the enemy. They were coming on with fanatical recklessness, black banners in the advance. They were led by the Emir. Mounted on a pure-blooded Arabian horse, and clad in an ancient suit of chain mail, gorgeous with silver and precious stones, he looked like a warrior of the Crusades.

HORSES KILLED OFF

The Druse rush carried them into the village. The Emir took a position on a high mound and directed the attack, with green and black banners planted about him and his bodyguard protecting him from close fighting. This rush cost the Druse dear. We were firing on them from ten and twenty feet. One tribesman charged a machine gun and died clutching the wall. There were thirty bullets in him.

Druse snipers occupied the flat roofs of the houses. Others ambushed themselves behind stone walls and house corners. They were able to pour a blistering fire directly into our camp. Twenty-nine Cossacks guarding the stables were killed almost before they knew what had happened. Sixty of the 120 horses in the stables were driven out. Rather than let the Druse have them, we shot most of them.

While this was going on other detachments rushed our camp, protected by the fire of their snipers. They would rush from wall to wall taking shelter behind them from our volleys. We met them with rifle fire, hand grenades and rifle grenades. Machine guns and automatic rifles raked them.

EMIR SHOT DOWN

For three hours the rushing attack continued. Fighting like this was the Legion's meat. All our men, except about twenty, had done the same kind in Morocco. While the Druse were pumping bullets into us from behind stone walls we held our fire, but the minute they began to charge we let go with everything. Wave after wave advanced as far as the stone wall protecting us, only to be literally blasted away. My rifle was so hot I threw it down, and snatched one from a dead man. Discouraged finally by the inflexible opposition, the Druse withdrew twenty or thirty yards to a stone wall from which they kept up a scattering fire.

It was now 9 o'clock in the morning. Between the heat of battle and the normal temperature of Syria, most of us were down to trousers and shirt. The suspension of the Druse attack gave us time to turn our attention to the Emir, whose detachment had been peppering us from the hill. My lieutenant told us to get him. We concentrated our fire, and saw him drop. I don't know for sure, but I think I put a bullet into him.

We took advantage of the lull to check up casualties and eat. We had been fighting steadily since 3:30. Each man got a half "can" of wine. Our water was getting low so we gave it all to the wounded, already burning with fever. We got an issue of "singe," French equivalent of "canned willie."

The officers checked up the ammunition. It was getting low. "Hold your fire," said Lieut. Vernon, "until we are actually rushed." The best shots were told off to snipe the Druse, whose cavalry were steadily creeping up.

All this time French planes were ground-strafing the Druse. A heliograph was set up in the village Marabout, but no man could live long enough on the platform to flash a signal to Gazalie, seventeen kilometers to the rear. We did manage to signal a plane, asking relief.

At 12 o'clock the Druse returned to the charge. Their rushing attacks met the same reception as before. While we were busy, the Druse cavalry fell on the advance point and wiped out the machine-gun crew. They were on the verge of breaking through completely when the lieutenant turned the gun on them, and aided by two volunteers who had never operated a machine gun before, stemmed the tide.

LAST ACT OPENS

At 4 o'clock Lieut. Vernon was pacing our inclosure anxiously, glancing toward Gazalie from which we hoped for relief. Suddenly he directed us to stick our bayonets into the ground. Every Legionnaire knows what this means. When the Legionnaire has his back to the wall, that is his tactics. He saves one bullet for himself, the bayonet for the enemy.

We knew the last act had opened. The Druse were moving from wall to wall. The cavalry formed in long lines beyond our range. The leaders moved from point to point organizing their final charge, urging the men to that point of desperation which makes the Mohammedan soldier so dangerous.

We set ourselves for the shock. The enemy began to move. And then, behind us, we heard a French bugle. A second later the Sixteenth Algerian Tirailleurs swept by in attacking formation, yelling like devils.

DRUSE LOSS HEAVY

But the Druse didn't wait. Their rear guard met the Tirailleurs with scattering volleys, but the Druse knew the show was up. They were no match for a fresh regiment. The cavalry had galloped off leaving the infantry to get away as best it could. The Tirailleurs fell upon the village, killing every Druse sniper they could find. We poured in after them and by 6 o'clock all was over but some scrimmaging during the night. Thus ended my first action with the Foreign Legion.

It cost the Druse 500 dead that I saw, and probably as many more casualties that I didn't—men who died in the villages from wounds received in the fighting. It cost us about a fourth of the battalion.

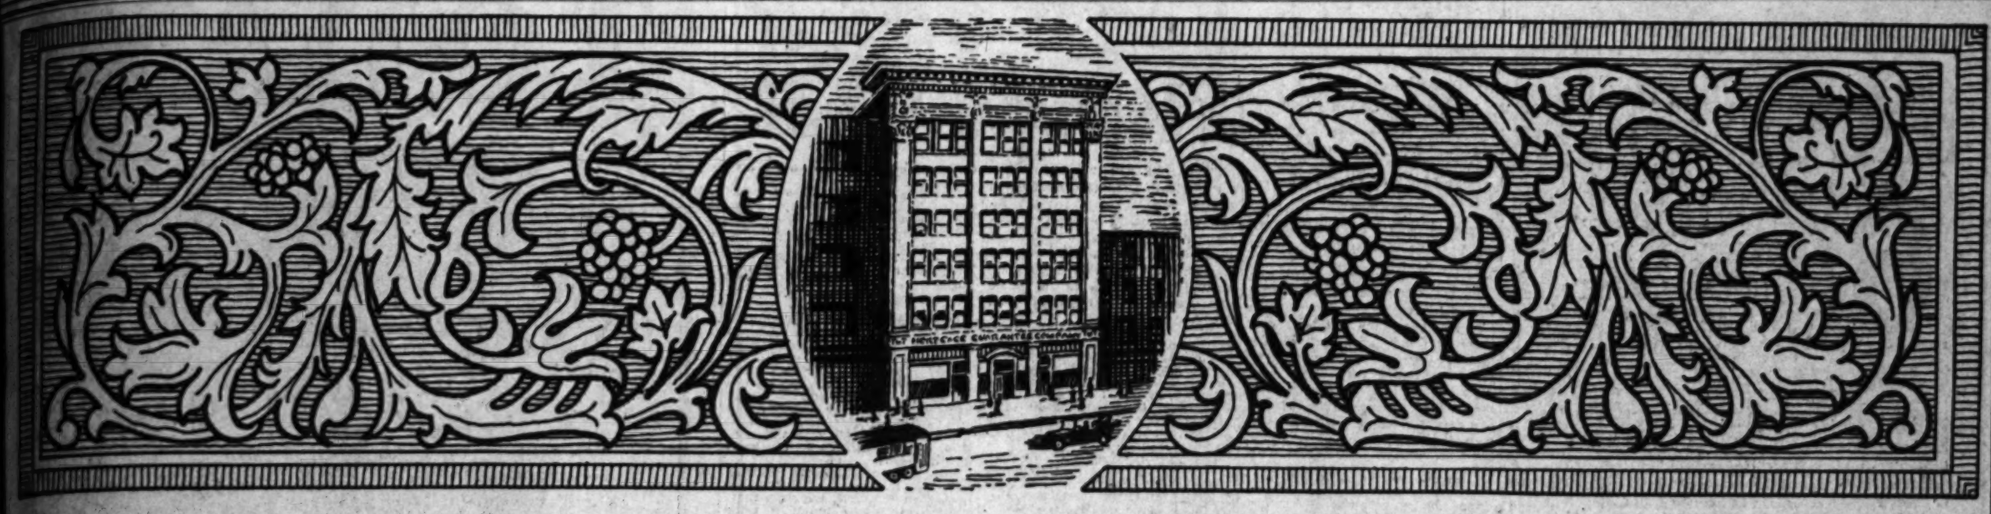
REAL E



A CARE-FREE INVESTMENT FOR YOUR JANUARY FUNDS

Every year added to the experience of thinking investors, emphasizes more forcibly the wisdom of avoiding the cares, responsibilities and hazards inevitably associated with securities of the usual type.

And every year more and more of the thinking investors are turning to the one form of investment which combines the highest degree of safety with a liberal yield, namely, the Insured First Mortgage Certificates of the Mortgage Guarantee Company—and finding therein a complete solution of their investment problems.

Their decision is based on these self-evident facts:

1. That an investment originated, supervised, and guaranteed by an institution of recognized strength, responsibility and permanence, and designed to meet the highest requirements of banks and other institutions, is equally desirable for individual investors.

2. That a group of conservative first liens on improved real estate, widely diversified geographically and otherwise, provides a higher degree of safety than any single lien can possibly offer.

3. That an adequately guaranteed or insured investment is preferable to one that is not so protected.

The Institution

The Mortgage Guarantee Company is the leading mortgage insurance company of the West. Its founders were the sponsors of the Mortgage Insurance Act of California—one of the most stringent and most effective pieces of legislation ever enacted for the insuring of mortgage investments.

Essentially an institution of service, adapted to the practical needs of the community, amply financed, and conservatively yet progressively managed, the company has grown steadily in business volume and earning power, over a period of years, to its present high rank as one of the largest and strongest mortgage insurance companies in the United States.

The Guarantee

Insured First Mortgage Certificates of the Mortgage Guarantee Company are guaranteed by this company as to both principal and interest under the Mortgage Insurance Act of California.

Back of the guarantee is the entire strength of the Company as indicated by capital, surplus and undivided profits of $6,800,000, and resources of more than $60,000,000, making it one of the strongest guarantees in the United States; a guarantee that is acceptable to the foremost institutional investors of the country.

The Clientele

Buyers of Insured First Mortgage Certificates of the Mortgage Guarantee Company include leading banks, insurance companies and other state supervised institutions, trustees, guardians, etc., and private investors whose purchases are restricted to securities of the very highest type.

An analysis of the outstanding guaranties of the Mortgage Guarantee Company shows that these are apportioned among the following classes of investors in the amounts indicated:

	Number	Amount
Individual Holders	3710	$22,211,579.00
Insurance Companies	16	18,742,905.00
National and State Banks. Trust Companies and Title Companies	82	7,741,885.00
Trustees	321	2,115,481.00
Corporations	47	1,820,800.00
Institutions—(Hospitals, Churches, Lodges, Charities, etc.)	41	531,550.00
TOTAL	4217	$53,164,200.00

These investors are located in practically every state of the Union, and in foreign countries.

For the same reasons that banks hold these investments in amounts averaging more than $100,000.00 and insurance companies in amounts averaging over $1,000,000.00, private investors in increasing numbers are finding this form of investment the most satisfactory from every standpoint.

The Advantages

Insured First Mortgage Certificates of the Mortgage Guarantee Company are non-fluctuating, free from speculative influences, and free from all cares and responsibilities.

They are exempt from all California taxes.

They are issued in denominations of $100.00 and multiples thereof, thus enabling investors to keep their funds closely invested.

Interest is paid by check, either semi-annually or quarterly, at the option of the investor. Hence there are no coupons to clip.

Certificates are registered and non-negotiable, thus giving the owners full protection in the event of loss by fire, theft or otherwise.

Maturities range from one to five years and arrangement may be made, if desired, for the re-investment of funds on maturity dates without any loss of interest.

Interest rates range from 5% on the one-year certificates up to 6% on the five year maturities.

If you are not fully familiar with these convenient, care-free certificates, we suggest that you send at once for a copy of the descriptive booklet. Call at our office, telephone, or simply use the coupon. The booklet will be mailed.

Acid Stomach

Excess acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. It is harmless and tasteless and its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, never continue to suffer, when you learn how quickly, how pleasantly this premier method acts. Please let it show you—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.—[Advertisement.

FARMERS FIND REAL REMEDY

Federal Expert Reports on Pacific Coast Survey

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (Exclusive) Farmers' co-operative organizations that are getting the best results are those that have abandoned all notions of arbitrary price fixing and are concentrating their efforts in a drive for greater efficiency in financing, selling, management, grading and standardization, getting a quality product to market and establishing a better balanced production program.

Such is the report of Chris L. Christensen, in charge of the division of co-operative marketing, United States Department of Agriculture, after a six weeks' field investigation of co-operatives on the Pacific Coast.

"This means," says Mr. Christensen, "that farmers generally have got away from the idea that by merely organizing they can fix the prices of their products or readily change market conditions, and are now getting down to the bed rock of better production, better grading and standardization, efficient management and skillful adjustment of supply to market demands."

CAREFUL SELECTION

He adds that the co-operative movement is gaining ground steadily with a tendency toward enlargement of existing units and the combining of smaller units into larger groups. This would seem to be in line with Secretary of Agriculture Jarding's contention that co-operatives should be organized on a commodity basis.

Mr. Christensen also reports a trend toward the careful selection of members of co-operatives.

Organization, according to Mr. Christensen, in itself does not solve the marketing problems, but simply creates machinery to do so. Every farmer knows that improved farm machinery is of no use to him unless he puts it to work and guides it, and likewise improved marketing machinery is of no value unless it is intelligently directed. Leadership is essential.

In the course of his investigation Mr. Christensen conferred with managers and directors of co-operative associations in Washington and Oregon that are marketing apples, dairy products, wool and prunes. In California he visited various co-operatives marketing citrus and deciduous fruits, dried fruits, nuts, cattle, rice and dairy products.

CITRUS HOLDS LEAD

"The California citrus growers, through the California Fruit Growers Exchange, have maintained their enviable reputation as leaders in co-operative marketing during the past year," he says. "Based on returns for the Fruit Growers Exchange, which markets almost three-fourths of the California citrus fruit, the industry returned for the year ending October 31 approximately $120,000,000 on 70,600 carloads of oranges, lemons and grapefruit. These are the highest figures for both volumes of shipments and returns in the history of the citrus industry. The Mutual Orange Distributors, another co-operative handling citrus fruit, marketed 7900 cars during the season just closed. This was an increase of 16 per cent over the preceding year."

The walnut growers' co-operative in California represents 85 per cent of all the walnut growers in the State and will market an even greater proportion of this year's crop. While the crop is far greater than ever before produced in the State the co-operative has handled its marketing problems in such a manner that the association's sales are estimated to run more than $16,000,000.

EXAMPLES GIVEN

One of the old co-operatives—old in comparison with most of those functioning today—is that of apple growers in the Hood River Valley in Oregon. The first growers' organization was formed there in 1893. In order to keep pace with the changing market conditions reorganization was necessary in 1913 and the present organization, known as the Hood River Apple Growers' Association, was formed. It markets 70 per cent of the apples and 85 per cent of the pears grown in the Hood River Valley.

The tendency toward combining smaller co-operative units into larger groups Mr. Christensen found exemplified in the Yakima and Wenatchee apple districts in the State of Washington. The proportion of apples packed in local co-operative packing plants is increasing and these units are federating for selling and distributing.

Nor is this tendency confined to the apple industry. Five county dairymen's associations operate in the dairy regions north and south of Seattle. Each county organization owns and operates large milk plants for the manufacture of butter, cheese and evaporated milk.

Another noteworthy co-operative achievement cited by Mr. Christensen is that of the Pacific Co-operative Wool Growers, an organization that has marketed 24,000,000 pounds of wool in the past seven years. It is made up of 2600 wool and mohair growers in Oregon, Washington, California and Idaho.

Philadelphia's Mayor Plans War on Crime

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2. (AP)—"During the next four years there will be no spectacular raids," said Mayor Mackey in his inaugural address today. "There will be no parading of an affected virtue, but there is being ushered in today a new regime under which there will be an untiring, unrelenting, ever-increasing challenge to crime. During the next four years Philadelphia will not be a safe place for those who live off the fruits of crime."

Four years ago when W. Freeland Kendrick took office as Mayor he appointed Brig.-Gen. Smedley D. Butler of the Marine Corps as head of the police and fire departments and there ensued two years of colorful activity by the marine officer that attracted wide attention. He resigned as director of public safety when he was refused an extension of his leave of absence from the Marine Corps.

The new director of public safety is Harry C. Davis, who was a former assistant director, and whose family has been in the police business in Philadelphia for sixty years. He says he wants to start his new job with 1000 additional policemen.

News of the MIDDLE WEST

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—An outright gift of $1,000,000 to George Washington University, St. Louis, to establish a school of government, has been made by the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite Masons, Southern Jurisdiction, the ranking Masonic body in the United States, according to dispatches from Washington, D. C.

Suit to foreclose on properties of the Independent Breweries Company was filed in Federal Court yesterday by the American Trust Company, St. Louis, and the Illinois State Trust Company, East St. Louis, trustees for a $5,000,000 bond issue of the company. In the suit it is alleged the bonds, of which $1,996,200 are outstanding are in default.

Dr. Lee R. Williams, aged 51, founder of Dr. Williams' Hospital at 4206 Lindell Boulevard, died there yesterday of heart disease following an illness of six months.

KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Mary L. Keith, 77 years of age, died late yesterday at the home, 3118 Broadway. She was the widow of Richard H. Keith, former president of the Central Coal and Coke Company. Her death was caused by heart disease.

Mrs. Ada B. Clodfelter, owner of Garber, a little Ozark village, has been elected Mayor of the town at a mass meeting held in the tiny post-office, of which she is postmistress. The town, which is part of the Shepherd of the Hills country, also voted that a peace officer for the village was unnecessary and that there shall be built or maintained no "jail or bastile."

OMAHA

OMAHA, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—A. M. Walling, aged 86, died suddenly at his home at David City. He was a veteran of the Civil War and a member of the Constitutional convention which helped to make the present Constitution of the State of Nebraska. He had been a member of the State Legislature.

Ornan J. King, aged 76, for forty-seven years a prominent business man of Lincoln, died at his home following a lingering illness. Mr. King was a former City Commissioner.

In 1926 California bought more live hogs from Nebraska than from all other States combined, and one out of every seven pigs raised in the Cornhusker State that year went west to be slaughtered, according to State agricultural statistics.

INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 2. (Exclusive) Eight years of dry America will be celebrated in bone-dry Indiana on the 16th inst., by the tolling of all church bells here for eight minutes, Rev. E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, decreed today.

Fred McAllister, aged 82, Indianapolis municipal judge, ended his life with a revolver at his home today in the presence of his wife and his son, Vance McAlister. Friends said the judge had been despondent recently over financial reverses.

Ora Tomlinson, aged 55, hanged himself in Justice Court at Walsh today a few minutes before a dispossession suit against him was to be tried. His landlord was seeking to eject Tomlison from his four-room home because of failure to pay $20 rent.

MILWAUKEE

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Agitation for a new union station to replace the antique structures now used by the St. Paul and the North Western roads here will be started on the 24th inst., at a mass meeting. Alderman Henry Gottschalk is leading the movement. Presidents of both roads will be asked to attend the meeting.

Charged with forging two notes which applied on mortgages, Emil E. Kretlow, insurance and land agent of Wausaw, was released under $10,000 bail and bound over for trial in Municipal Court. The alleged forgeries total $3600, but police believe his defalcations may amount to $40,000.

DES MOINES

DES MOINES, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—George R. Schmidt, aged 75, one of Cedar Rapids' oldest business men in point of service and a pioneer of the city, died at his home there of heart disease.

Sioux City physicians today studied one of the rarest cases in medical annals, cancer in a 2-year-old child. Frances Marjory Lang, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Lang, died after an illness of six weeks with the disease.

Mrs. Schiller Kurtz has left for Los Angeles where she will visit her brother, Mr. Harry Mason, and with Mrs. Walter Irish, formerly of this city.

MINNEAPOLIS

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 2. (Exclusive) The Minneapolis postoffice broke all records for volume of Christmas mail handled in 1927, with a total of 15,000,000 pieces, Arch Coleman, postmaster, announced. Eighty-one thousand sacks of parcel post were handled as compared with 73,000 a year ago. Approximately 13,500,000 other pieces of mail were also handled. This includes Christmas greeting cards.

University of Minnesota building projects, involving expenditure of more than $3,000,000, and other State projects, including buildings being constructed and those on which work will soon be started, will bring the total of the State building program for 1928 to approximately $4,000,000.

Rt. Rev. Mgr. Hartlieb, aged 71, chaplain of St. James Hospital at St. James, died there from an apoplectic stroke. He served in the parishes of Caledonia, Conception, Luverne and Ellsworth. In 1909 Pope Pius X named him monsignor.

ST. PAUL

ST. PAUL, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—An estate valued at $50,000, consisting entirely of personal property, was left by John S. Whitacre, who died on December 18. The will leaves the estate to two sons, Dr. John C. Whitacre and Edmund B. Whitacre, both of St. Paul.

The will of Gideon S. Ives, former Lieutenant-Governor, who died in St. Paul recently, was filed in Probate Court. The will was made out in 1920, and leaves the estate to the wife, Mrs. Mary Ives, who died a year ago. Two sons, Henry A. Ives, of Evanston, Ill., and Warren Ives, White Plains, became the heirs. The estate is valued at $10,500.

DETROIT

DETROIT, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Formal action toward a merger of the Peoples State Bank and the Wayne County and Home Savings Bank was taken by directors of the two institutions. The new bank, to be known as the Peoples Wayne County Bank, will have a total capital fund of more than $36,500,000, deposits of more than $250,000,000 and total resources of more than $290,000,000. Plans for the merger are subject to approval of stockholders who will meet January 10, to pass on the matter.

Succumbing to sleeping sickness after several weeks' illness, Mrs. Marion Campbell, aged 30, wife of James M. Campbell, Detroit real estate dealer, and the only child of Daniel T. Crowley, president of Crowley, Milner & Co., died at the home of her father, 203 Lakeland avenue, Grosse Pointe.

LOUISVILLE

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—DeWitt C. Burke, aged 57, former assistant prohibition administrator in charge of enforcement in Kentucky and Tennessee and long prominent in affairs of the Republican party in Fourth Congressional District, died of paralysis at his home in Bradfordsville.

THE MANY ARTERIES OF TRAFFIC that traverse the city of Los Angeles are of priceless value to the commonwealth. The City Council with the valuable assistance of the Planning Commission, the City Engineer and public spirited citizens are making provisions for additional traffic arteries for future needs, and in the business center old streets are being improved and new ones designed to meet the requirements of a modernized business. Yet with all of these Broadway will continue to be the main artery.

"THE GREAT WHITE WAY OF LOS ANGELES"

This fact dictates the course the business center will follow in its expansion. The streets which parallel Broadway in the area between Main and Figueroa Streets are strategically located and, with intersecting streets, will

Shed full of Cargo

LOS ANGELES HARBOR is making money! Making it, not alone for the shippers who are using it at a freight saving of $125,000,000 a year, but also for the taxpayers whose funds built it and who, as ultimate consumers are as much affected by freight savings as manufacturers and retailers.

Over 25,000,000 tons of freight are coming in and going out of this harbor annually, the latest report of the Board of Harbor Commissioners shows, at a saving of approximately $5.00 per ton over any other available method of transportation.

It will not be long before Los Angeles Harbor will not only be meeting operation costs, maintenance and interest charges, but also will bear the entire burden of amortizing the bonds.

Facilities for shippers at Los Angeles Harbor are of the finest character. The United States Government, attesting its confidence in Los Angeles' future, has expended $9,712,000 on the breakwater, dredging and jetty work, and the City itself owns seven miles of wharves, sheds and other port facilities, the cost for construction amounting to $24,000,000.

The Harbor Belt Line Railroad, or Municipal Terminal Railroad, has 58 miles of waterfront trackage, operated by the Pacific Electric and the Union Pacific Railroads as agents for the city, and connecting with their own lines for interurban and trans-continental traffic, as well as with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, and the Southern Pacific Railways.

Four complete truck boulevards, with many lateral distributing highways, offer splendid accessibility to the trucks that now carry 60% of the cargo tonnage of the Harbor. Warehouse facilities include a six-story and basement reinforced concrete building of 480,000 square feet, equipped with modern handling devices, and offering the shipper the advantage of reduced transportation costs through carrying spot stocks for interior distribution.

Two cotton compresses owned by the Los Angeles Compress and Warehouse Company have a capacity of 200 bales an hour, while a completely equipped shipbuilding and ship repairing plant is operated by the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation, as well as by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

Seven hundred acres of waterfront and industrial lands are now available for lease on long term and attractive rental basis for manufacturing and industrial purposes. Channels and slips fronting this property have depths from thirty to thirty-five feet.

Nine great oil loading stations, a municipal case oil wharf, low fire insurance rates and ample fire protection are some other advantages to the Los Angeles Harbor shipper.

Wharf frontage at the Harbor is being utilized to the greatest advantage. It is the policy of the Board of Harbor Commissioners to serve all shippers without discrimination. Low rates prevail because of modern facilities and efficient service.

Over 200 steamship lines, including passenger, freight, oil and lumber, operate in and out of Los Angeles Harbor, giving the City of Los Angeles trading advantages with all of the principal ports of the world.

Business and Industrial Operators of Southern California should by all means use the Harbor as their shipping base. Their freight costs will be reduced, their profits increased, and the back-country of Los Angeles made more accessible and prosperous.

CHANGE SOUGHT IN SEAMEN'S ACT

La Follette Measure Held Clog on America

Unions' Bill Unenforceable, Declares Capt. Dollar

Provisos of Sailing Days Work Hardship Now

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (Exclusive) Modification of the drastic provisions of the La Follette Seamen's Act, which if strictly enforced, shipowners say, would put a finishing crimp in the declining American merchant marine, is to be sought at this session of Congress.

This law, which was driven through Congress by the labor-union lobby during the Wilson administration, compels the manning of 'American merchant ships with larger crews and operates to produce larger wage and other operating and maintenance costs than on foreign ships.

The Coolidge administration has recognized the inability of American ships to compete with foreign ships because of the higher operating costs imposed by the La Follette Act.

AMENDMENT URGED

At its convention last month the National Rivers and Harbors Congress adopted a resolution asserting that "certain provisions" of the La Follette Act "have been found to be injurious and detrimental to American shipping on the Great Lakes and on the high seas" and urging Congress "so to amend this act and other navigation laws as to remove the handicap upon American shipping which experience has demonstrated to be unwise."

According to Capt. Robert Dollar, strict enforcement of the law would put the American merchant marine or what remains of it, completely out of business.

"I have asked three different Presidents in Washington to strictly enforce the Seamen's Act," said Capt Dollar. "If it had been strictly enforced, as it should have been, no ship could have sailed from an American port. I wanted the various Presidents to enforce it so that it would show the people what kind of a nonsensical law it was, but each one declined and therefore the law has never been enforced to the letter."

One of the sections of the act not being strictly enforced is that which requires a shipmaster, in the event of desertions of members of the crew at any port, to fill their places with the same number of men, "if obtainable," of the same or higher grade. This section operates to place the masters at the mercy of members of his crew in many ports where competent men are scarce.

The law provides also that the sailors shall be divided into at least two watches in the twenty-four hours. This is the tradition coming down from the era of sailing ships when it was necessary to have a full complement of deckhands on duty day and night to handle the sails.

In the age of steam the only seamen needed for navigation duties aboard the ordinary freighter are the helmsman and lookout. The remainder of the crew is employed between ports on maintenance and upkeep of the ships. This work cannot be done at night. Hence the master would divide the helmsmen and lookouts in watches but would work the remainder of the crew throughout the day and give them a full night's sleep.

HOW IT WORKS

The courts hold this a violation of the law and if the act is enforced it will be necessary for masters to carry larger crews in order to have men enough for deck work during the daylight watches, when the remainder of the seamen were off duty. Then after dark maintenance work could not be performed and the night watches would be idle. For the three-watch system several extra men on each ship would be necessary.

The Shipping Board estimates that if only one extra man on each ship were provided the cost for wages and subsistence on the 387 government-owned ships would be increased $500,000 a year. The cost of an extra man on each ship for the three-watch system would cost the entire American merchant marine, it is estimated, not less than $1,000,000 a year.

THURSDAY BEST SUICIDE DAY, BUT MONDAY HAS WRECK TITLE

CHICAGO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Almost twice as many persons commit suicide on Thursday as on Sunday in Chicago, it has been shown by statistics compiled by Coroner Wolff. "Blue Monday" came second on the list, but, according to Frank C. Singleton, director of safety for the Board of Education, the majority of automobile accidents fall on Monday between 5 and 6 p.m.

"Police records show that 198 of the 437 accidents to pedestrians in November occurred on Mondays," he said.

The Coroner's figures for the year show eighty-seven suicides on Thursday, seventy-eight Monday, seventy-two Wednesday, sixty-five Friday, sixty Saturday, fifty-two Tuesday and forty-nine Sunday.

In an analysis of the report Dr. James Whitney Hall, an alienist, said that love is the greatest cause for suicides.

"My observations have revealed that lovers' quarrels following Wednesday's 'date night' have the effect temporarily of deranging some young persons sufficiently to cause them to commit suicide," he said.

Older persons are more likely to take their lives on Monday, he said, because of disgust and depression following misconduct over week-ends.

CANADA MAKES BUSINESS GAINS

Volume 48 Per Cent Larger Than in 1926

Industrial Stock Advance Feature of Year

Imports Increase While Exports Decline

OTTAWA, Jan. 2. (AP) — Canadian business reached a physical volume at the close of 1927 48 per cent larger than it reached in 1926, an index published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics revealed today. Business at the close of the year, however, was somewhat below the high point reached in the second quarter.

The feature of the year was the rapid advance in industrial stock prices, reflecting an easy money situation. Speculative trading was the greatest on record, the number of shares sold on the Montreal Stock Exchange in the first eleven months was 8,631,000, an increase of 42 per cent over 1926.

Volume of construction was greater by nearly 10 per cent than that of the previous year. Mining showed an increase of 7 per cent, and the output of forestry an increase of 6 per cent.

The average of manufacturing activity, adversely affected by declines in the automobile and steel industries, showed a gain of only 4 per cent. Employment in wholesale and retail trade averaged 7.5 per cent higher.

The volume of imports increased 12.5 per cent, while exports declined 1.4 per cent. Value of imports was $1,008,000,000 for the first eleven months, an increase of 8.2 per cent. Exports were $1,107,000,000, as against $1,144,000,000 a drop of 3.2 per cent. Car loadings until December 10 showed an increase of 4 per cent over 1926.

A downward tendency in interest rates was indicated by a gradual rise in the index of sixteen Canadian bonds and a decline in the yield of government bonds. The bond index in November was 119.2, as against 109.7 in November.

BRITAIN GAINS IN PROSPERITY

Bank Clearings for Year Show Revival

Week of October 5 Best During All 1927

Expansion of Trade Brings Good Times Back

LONDON, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—The latest indication of the return of British prosperity is the report today of the Bankers' Clearinghouse revealing the total bills and checks paid in 1927 was about $207,762,780,000, which is an increase of $8,587,110,000 over the highest previous figure, which was in 1926.

Another record established in 1927 was the total clearings for the week ending October 5, which amounted to $5,168,810,000. The highest previous weekly clearings occurred in January, 1926, totaling $4,843,857,000. It is pointed in comparisons with the year 1926 allowance must be made for the coal strike, but comparison with 1925 likewise showed a favorable improvement.

It is believed the factors chiefly responsible for the good showing in 1927 include the gradual recovery as well as expansion of trade in certain industries; immense turnover of money and the short loan market.

New issues in 1927 amounted to about $1,570,000,000, which was an increase of more than $420,000,000 over 1926. All months provided increases over 1926 excepting July. The daily turnover exceeded about $1,000,000,000 on ten occasions, which is four more than in 1926, but the same as 1925.

[illegible] enough scraped carrots to make [illegible] when pressed through a [illegible] and mix with them three cup- [illegible] of fine bread crumbs, one-third [illegible] cupful of finely chopped beef [illegible] two-thirds of a cupful of seed- [illegible] raisins, two-thirds of a cupful of [illegible] raisins, half a cupful of light [illegible] sugar, one-half a teaspoonful [illegible] salt, half a teaspoonful of salt, [illegible] rind of one orange, half [illegible] teaspoonful of soda, three well- [illegible] eggs, and enough milk to [illegible] a thick batter. Pour into a [illegible] pudding dish and bake one [illegible] in a moderate oven, or pour [illegible] mold and steam for two hours [illegible] half. Serve with hard sauce [illegible] sauce.

BAKED ORANGES

M. Santa Barbara, Cal.

[illegible] baked oranges peel and carefully remove the white skin from six medium-sized ripe oranges. Place in a saucepan, two cupfuls of sugar, and two cupfuls of water. Bring to a boil and remove all the scum as it arises. Place the oranges in a casserole, pour over the syrup, cover the casserole and bake the oranges until tender. Serve the syrup for a sauce.

Note: There is another way of baking oranges with the peel on and if you would like to have that let me know.

PRESERVED ORANGES

For the preserved oranges cut the fruit in half, leaving on the rind, remove the seeds and the heaviest rag, let the fruit remain in a weak brine over night, in the morning drain, place in fresh water, bring to a boil and repeat the process; put in fresh water and boil till tender, replacing the water once. When clear add an equal quantity of hot sugar and cook till thick. Place in jars, cover with a syrup and seal.

CALIFORNIA APRICOT TART

G. M. P., Glendale, Cal.

Cook, drain and press through a colander enough dried apricots to make one and one-half cupfuls of pulp, add to the pulp three tablespoonfuls of orange juice and pour into a baked pie shell. Cover twenty-four halves of dried apricots with warm water, let stand one hour; place over a slow fire and cook until the halves are tender; do not allow to get too soft. Cover the apricot pulp with the apricot halves, place with the hollow side up. In each hollow place a blanched almond and cover all with a jelly made by dissolving one teaspoonful of gelatine in one tablespoonful of cold water and stirring into two-thirds of a cupful of hot apricot juice.

CHICKEN SUPREME

The supreme of a chicken is the breast of a cooked or raw chicken and there are many ways of preparing them. One of the best methods of preparing the chicken supreme is to remove the breasts of a boiled chicken and cut in three or four even-sized pieces. Heat four tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, stir in two cupfuls of coffee cream and gradually add the slightly beaten yolk of one egg and stir and cook until the egg is set, do not boil. Add one tablespoonful of orange juice, the chicken breasts and a seasoning of salt and paprika. Heat and serve over squares of buttered toast. French mushrooms heated in butter and add to this dish make it very nice.

LOBSTER SALAD

M. D. W., Pasadena, Cal.

Place in a half-pint fruit jar five tablespoonfuls of good olive oil, one tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar, two-thirds of a teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of black pepper, a few drops of Worcestershire sauce, one teaspoonful of onion juice, and three tablespoonfuls of chili sauce, or tomato ketchup. Cover tight and shake well for five minutes.

Cover the chilled and diced meat of one lobster with this dressing and stand in a cold place for half an hour. Cover six salad plates with enough chilled and dried lettuce leaves to make six cupfuls, sprinkle with three chopped pimientoes and the chopped lobster coral, divide the marinated lobster between the six plates. Garnish with chopped, hard-boiled egg and sliced stuffed olives.

GLACED PRUNES

O. V. D., Alhambra, Cal.

For the prunes select large even-sized fruit, cover with cold water and let stand overnight. Place in a kettle one quart of water and add two pounds of sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved and boil until the syrup is clear. Drain the prunes and add to the hot syrup and let the prunes cook one minute. Remove from the fire and let stand in a cool place for twenty-four hours. Place in a light dish on top of the prunes so that they will be thoroughly covered with the syrup. After twenty-four hours carefully drain the fruit from the syrup and boil the syrup for fifteen minutes. Place the fruit in an earthenware crock and pour over it the boiling syrup. Let stand twenty-four hours and repeat the same process next day. Boiling the syrup ten minutes. Repeat this process until the syrup is as thick as honey, then let the prunes stand in the syrup for a week. Drain the fruit and place on a screen and dry in a dry draughty room for one week.

BAKED ROAST HAM, CIDER SAUCE

Cover a ten or twelve-pound ham with cold water and add two cupfuls of cider vinegar, let stand overnight. Remove the ham and wash well, scrape and skim off the hard skin on the bone end. Place the ham in a kettle with one finely chopped onion, two chopped carrots, one bay leaf six whole cloves, six peppercorns, and a blade of mace. Cover with cold water and bring slowly to a boil and simmer for four hours. After it cooks two hours add four cupfuls of cider, let stand in the liquor until cold. Remove the ham and take off the skin, cover the fat with equal parts of fine bread crumbs and brown sugar, dust with paprika and outline with whole cloves. Bake in a slow oven one hour. For the cider sauce blend in a saucepan three tablespoonfuls of butter and four tablespoonfuls of flour. Stir in slowly, two cupfuls of the strained ham liquor, stirring constantly, add one-half a cupful of cider, two tablespoonfuls of orange juice and a seasoning of paprika.

LUCK GIVES IDENTITY IN DEATH CASE

Officer Overhears Story of Finding Watch and Gets Clew to Relatives

SALINAS, Jan. 2. (AP)—A chance conversation about a watch found on a beach led to the identification today of the body of a man, evidently murdered, found near Moss landing November 27, last.

The body, buried in the Potter's Field, was that of A. W. Grotefeld, reputed to be a wealthy Chicago commission merchant and a member of the firm of John M. Train & Co. of that city. Identification was completed by telephone by a brother, Robert Grotefeld, also of Chicago, who said his brother bore a short scar under his lower lip and a broken arm that shortened when it knit. Grotefeld disappeared from Watsonville November 26.

When a traffic officer heard a Watsonville resident describe a watch he had found near the spot where Grotefeld's body was discovered, authorities demanded the watch and identified it as Grotefeld's. The latter had registered at a Watsonville hotel November 26 and was last seen at a hospital there. Laundry marks on the underwear also verified the identification.

Grotefeld was 50 years of age. He carried from $600 to $1000 at the time of his disappearance. A fractured skull was said by physicians to be the direct cause of death.

Red Committee Expels Trotzky and Many Othres

MOSCOW, Jan. 2. (AP)—The presidium of the soviet Russian central executive committee today resolved unanimously to expel Leon Trotzky, Gregory S. Zinovieff, Leon B. Hameneff, Christian Rakovsky, and several other prominent oppositionists who already had been expelled from the Communist party.

The decision was taken on the initiative of the Communist section of the soviet Russian executive committee which is the chief legislative body of the country. The Communists contend persons expelled from the party are unfit for membership in the Legislature.

Among others expelled from the committee today were the oppositionists Beloborodoff, Iahenko, Kaissarovsk and Smirnoff.

Ten Celebrants Rum Victims in Eastern Cities

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—New York's reception of 1928 today is found to have cost six deaths from alcoholism and to have sent more than a score of alcoholic cases to hospitals.

Four night clubs and restaurants were raided by prohibition agents.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 2. (AP)—Four dead and one dying today is the toll of New Year drinking parties here. A man and his wife died in a hospital of alcoholic poisoning and another man was found dead in his home from acute alcoholism. His brother was taken to a hospital, where his condition is said to be critical.

The fourth death was reported when Henry Lytle, said to have been under influence of liquor, fell down a stairway, fracturing his skull.

THREE HURT AND SHIP DISABLED BY BLAST

ASTORIA (Or.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Three men were severely injured in a boiler explosion on the steamer Claremont outside the Columbia River today. The information came by radio as the ship requested aid. The Coast Guard cutter Snohomish was tonight reported towing the Claremont to this port. The Claremont, a wooden vessel of 712 tons net register, is operated by the Hart-Wood Lumber Company of San Francisco in the coastwise lumber trade.

SHIPPING and Los Angeles Harbor NEWS

LINE TRANSFER ACTION LIKELY

Australia-Orient Assignment Expected This Week

Two Companies Mentioned as Favored Candidates

Fisheries Treaty Prospects Viewed as Brighter

Formal removal of Swayne & Hoyt as operators of the nineteen government freighters in the American-Australia-Orient Line is anticipated this week, as is the ships' reassignment to new operators. Shipping Board officials from Washington have been on this coast several days and their recommendations of successors are expected to be ratified at the next meeting of the board.

While Washington rumors mention the Dollar Steamship Company and Sudden & Christenson as favored candidates, officials of both say they are in the dark as much as anyone on the board's intentions. The report is that the Dollar Line will receive the vessels now operated from California to the Orient, while Sudden & Christenson will operate the ships between California and the Antipodes.

Eleven coast companies applied for the job when the board announced its intention to make the change, following disclosures of an asserted loan to a former board member involving the name of Swayne. Actual removal has awaited the selection of successors.

Regardless of the new operators the board will proceed with its intentions to offer the entire fleet for sale, possibly authorizing advertisements this week for bids. Two plans are offered, one requiring continued operation for five years and one requiring ten. Terms of purchase will be lenient.

The sale is expected to disclose a large number of bidders, including Dollar, Sudden & Christenson, Matson Navigation Company and American Hawaiian Steamship Company, and possibly Swayne & Hoyt.

HOPES FOR NEW TREATY REVIVED

Hope of a separate fisheries treaty between the United States and Mexico is revived at the harbor following signs of friendlier relations developing between the two countries.

A clause providing co-operation in fisheries had been a rider on an anti-narcotic treaty, but the latter, after a life of nine months, was revoked last spring, and the fisheries agreements automatically were discontinued.

The American-Mexican International Fisheries Commission, born of that treaty, ceased being last June, just as a pretentious program of study had begun, and before anything had been accomplished. Removal of tariff disparities also had been considered and an equal change had been tentatively worked out, but the treaty's abrogation prevented final action.

The growing importance of fisheries off Mexico to Southern California's packing and market concerns is said to have reached a point where the industry cannot attain full stature without close co-operation between the two countries.

Several hundred American boats fish throughout the summer at Magdalena Bay, 480 miles south of here, shipping their tuna back on huge feed tenders. In the last two years larger boats have been constructed and have been dispatched as far as Cape San Lucas, 900 miles from San Pedro. Last year a few greater craft even cruised up the Gulf of Lower California, down to the Tres Marias Islands, and over to the Revilla Gigedos Islands, covering 4000 to 5000 miles before they reached home. That fleet will be doubled by March.

Reports that the McCormick Steamship Company will put another liner on the Los Angeles-San Francisco-Portland run, in place of the Newport soon to be taken off, were current at the harbor yesterday. Capt. H. Illig, master of the McCormick steamer Wallingford, is said already to have gone east to bring back the new ship. McCormick officials here were not available for confirmation yesterday and the nature of the liner is not known.

The Newport has been operated on the run the last year by the McCormick Line, although it is owned by C. L. Dimon of New York, now on this coast. She is due from the north tomorrow on her last trip, sailing the following day for San Francisco. There she will be put up for sale and if not sold will be taken to the Atlantic Coast.

The German steamer Ilmar is due from Northern Europe today on her maiden appearance for the North German Lloyd, and bringing 2800 tons of cargo for this port, mostly glass, potash and general merchandise. Each successive ship since the line resumed its Pacific servic last summer has shown increased cargo for Los Angeles, and the Ilmar's leads the list. Williams, Dimond & Co., agents for the line, also had in the steamer Orleans of the Quaker Line yesterday, here from the east coast to drop 1200 tons.

A round-trip rate of $15 between metropolitan Los Angeles and San Francisco was announced by the Los Angeles and San Francisco Navigation Company, effective with the sailing yesterday of the liner San Juan for the Bay City. The rates continue to March 31, next. The vessel brought seventy-one passengers and 310 tons of express cargo south yesterday morning.

Most everyone on the steamer Hegira can navigate the ship, an accomplishment fortunate for the craft due to almost continuous storms en route from New York, whence she arrived yesterday. The explanation is that Capt. H. L. Jackson conducts a school of navigation aboard ship for all who wish it. The vessel carries lumber to the Atlantic for the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, her owner, and brings general cargo and steel west for the Isthmian Line. Incidentally, J. A. Froberg, chief mate, and O. Nostdahl, third mate, were seamen with the skipper thirty years ago.

The Union Steamship Company of New Zealand, which recently sent a ship here on an experimental trip to ascertain cargo offerings, will have a second vessel in port today, the Waipapu, which will pick up 1000 tons of case oil, old paper and general cargo for the Antipodes. The motorship Hauraki and the steamer Waikawa each will pick up double that amount late this month, indicating the line is a fixture for the port. Williams, Dimond & Co. are agents.

AVOID DIZZY SPELLS

Never well. Always tired and fagged out. Beauty tossed away by neglect. To be beautiful and to keep youth the system must be free from poisonous backwash of constipation which often causes dizzy spells. For 20 years, Dr. F. M. Edwards gave his patients, in place of calomel, a compound of vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Known by their olive color. They free the system of poisons that ravage health, energy, beauty.

You need never have sallow complexion, dull eyes, coated tongue, throbbing headaches—all signs that your bowels are clogged, liver is torpid. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly. They act smoothly and without griping . . . How much better you'll feel and look! Everywhere wise men and women who know the value of good health take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c.—[Advertisement.

NEW PARTNERS IN BANK HOUSE

Blair & Co. Names Four Men as Company Members

Have Specialized in Foreign Financing Activities

Former Head of Paris House Among Appointees

Blair & Co., Inc., announced yesterday the election of four men as co-partners of the company. They are Georges Benard, J. Grant Forbes, Jay Monnet and Lewis P. Sheldon. All have been connected with Blair & Co., foreign corporation and will confine their activities in their new capacities chiefly in the foreign field of Blair & Co., Inc.

M. Benard was formerly head of Benard Freres & Cie. of Paris, leading financiers of public utilities and other enterprises in France and Belgium. During the war he served for three years in the flying corps and was made a Knight of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his services. Later he occupied a place in the Cabinet in charge of oil and coal supplies and also became the representative of France on the Inter-Allied Petroleum Conference. As senior partner of Benard Freres & Cie. he brought his firm in close contact with Blair & Co., Inc., and since joining the latter company has devoted a large part of his time to South American financing.

M. Forbes is a graduate of Harvard of the class of 1901 and a member of the Massachusetts bar. After practicing law for a time he became associated with the American International Corporation. In 1922 he joined Mr. Sheldon in Blair & Co. (London) Ltd. Mr. Forbes has been especially active in the Near East, particularly Jugo-Slavia.

M. Monnet, who has been a director of Blair & Co., Inc., was formerly Deputy Secretary General of the League of Nations. During the war he served as French delegate on the Allied Maritime Transport Council.

M. Sheldon has been a director of Blair & Co., Inc., since 1930. He is a graduate of Yale Class of 1896 and has been connected with the company since 1901. During the war Mr. Sheldon was chairman of the War Trade Board in London and was closely associated with Mr. Lansing as financial adviser. During the past year he has been particularly active in Italy.

Investment House Staff at Luncheon

Isaac G. Wolf Company, mortgage investment house, held its annual Christmas luncheon in the offices of the company last week. The entire organization was present and substantial bonuses were distributed. A special program was arranged and talks were made by Ralph Wolf and department heads. Mr. Wolf stressed individual co-operation as key to the growth of the company and predicted that the new year would show a greater increase in business.

DALEY'S, INC., INCREASES LARGE CHAIN

Daley's, Inc., grocery retail-chain organization, announced yesterday the acquisition of the Securities stores, five in number, formerly owned by R. J. Porter and R. W. Dole. These stores added to the Daley chain, will make 185 stores in operation at the beginning of 1928.

In December, last, Mr. Porter joined the Daley organization in the capacity of vice-president and general manager and the appointment of Mr. Dole to the executive staff has just been announced. Mr. Dole will assume his new duties today and will have charge of the accounting and finances of the corporation. For six years he practiced law in Salt Lake City and for some time was in the canning business, but for the last ten years he has been actively engaged in the wholesale grocery business.

Joe Daley, president of the company, also announced the twenty-eighth regular 2 per cent quarterly dividend on the preferred stock, checks for which are now in the mail.

"Our optimism for 1927 was fully justified," declared the president. "The fact that we increased our business over 25 per cent is highly gratifying, even though we did not quite reach the point we set for the current year. As a matter of fact we did very close to $10,500,000. We believe the outlook for 1928 to be even better, and we have set another figure for 1928, 25 per cent greater than 1927."

CONDITIONS OF UTILITIES HELD SOUND

Public Service Head Sees Further Power Company Growth for 1928

BY THOMAS McCARTER
President the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey

My opinion, based largely upon my knowledge of conditions in that section of New Jersey served by public service operating companies, is that the coming year will see a continuance of public utility growth comparable with that of the past few years.

The electric industry was never in a better position to seek and secure new business. New capital invested in plant and equipment has made available facilities ample for growing electrical demands; the American people are awake to the advantages that the use of electricity in industry and the home secures, and the electric companies have built up selling organizations which can be depended upon to merchandise their product.

The history of the gas industry shows a remarkable degree of stability. In spite of the great loss of business resulting from the substitution of electricity for gas as an illuminant, its growth has been steady and satisfactory. Successful use of gas in industrial processes has opened up for it a new field, and the industry as a whole as well as the individual companies, are preparing carefully and wisely to cultivate it.

General business conditions, I consider, on the whole, to be favorable. We are approaching a Presidential election and in the past this has usually been a signal for a letting up in business activity. But the economic structure of the nation is, thanks among other things to the Federal reserve policy, more substantial than it has ever before been, and with wise action by Congress in dealing with the agricultural situation, we should escape any serious disturbance.

BISBEE BANKER TO ENTER LOCAL BANK

BISBEE (Ariz.) Jan. 2. (Exclusive) Announcement has been made that Paul M. Buckwalter, vice-president of the Miners' and Merchants' Bank, will leave Bisbee, about the 15th inst., for Los Angeles, where he has accepted a position with one of the larger banks. Mr. Buckwalter has been a resident of Bisbee for twenty-two years, for all that time connected with the bank he now is leaving. He has been president of the Rotary and country clubs and has been active in civic work.

GOVERNMENT STILL IN "RED"

"Uncle Sam" Able to Keep from Poorhouse; Large Surplus Gain Shown

BY JOSEPH S. McCOY
Government Actuary

The calendar year 1926 was a record-breaking year so far as prosperity, both the people and the government was concerned. The year just ended, however, has also been a wonderfully prosperous year.

The surplus or excess of ordinary receipts over expenditures of the government chargeable against ordinary receipts, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, reached the unbelievably high figure of $635,809,922, as compared with the surplus of $377,767,817 for the preceding year. It will be remembered that there was a reduction in Federal taxes during the year 1926, the smaller part of which was reflected in the revenues for that fiscal year, but all in the revenue for 1927.

GIANNINI SHARES TOP LIST

Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation Account for 40.7 Per Cent of Total Valuation

BY EARLE R. CROWE

Last year on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, in which the value of stock and bond transactions climbed to a new high of $342,250,345.19, an increase of 5½ per cent over the previous twelve months, was clearly a year for the bank stocks. The oil shares, heretofore the favorites of the traders, dropped back hopelessly in the race, while the bank group pushed into the lead with a total of $54,546,827.25. This amount was 22 per cent of the value of all transactions on the exchange.

Chief interest, however, was manifest in the shares of the Bank of Italy group. The two stocks, Bancitaly Corporation and Bank of Italy, were by far the most active stocks in this market, contributing the surprising amount of 40.7 per cent of the total value of all trading on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. The total value of the transactions in the Giannini group was $98,770,000, or nearly $100,000,000.

BANCITALY LEADER

Bancitaly Corporation was the outstanding stock of the year. Approximately 580,000 shares went across during the year, a relatively small volume; but the value represented a total of $68,902,872.20. Of this amount subscription rights contributed more than $214,000.

Next was Bank of Italy. Transactions accounted for a value of $31,869,796.08, of which the rights furnished $2,458,587.77.

It is interesting to note that the much-feared collapse of the Julian Petroleum bubble failed to affect the business of the stock exchange. Other shares, particularly the bank stocks, arose to take the place of the Junian activity, and the stock exchange continued on its path toward a record year in total business. the Julian activity, and the stock preferred and common amounted to $24,606,155.86, or 10 per cent of total transactions.

Next to the Bank of Italy shares in point of value was Los Angeles First National with a total valuation for the year of $19,535,471.40. United Bank and Trust, in the unlisted division, was good for more than $5,000,000 of business, while Merchants' National followed with $1,011,834.

EDISON SHARES ACTIVE

The Edison group was responsible for a total of $18,894,319.12 during the year. This amount was divided among the 5½, 6, 7 and 8 per cent preferred, the common and common subscription rights. The rights accounted for slightly more than $200,000.

Next in the public utility list was Los Angeles Gas preferred with $2,383,412.37. Southern California and Southern Counties gas companies were both well over the $300,000 mark.

Union Oil of California and Union Oil Associates, the companion stock, ranked as the favorites in the oil list by a considerable margin. The surprising feature of oil activity, however, was the increase in trading accored by Standard Oil of California and California Petroleum. Original markets for these stocks were in New York, but in the last year the drift this way has been noticeable and trading has increased substantially. Standard transactions amounted to $4,892,653.37, closely followed by California Petroleum with $4,444,873.59.

PROGRESS MADE IN LABOR SETTLEMENTS

BY SAMUEL E. WINSLOW
Chairman United States Board of Mediation

That the respective parties to the Railway Labor Act have exercised a commendable diligence in solving many of their problems directly and without resort to governmental assistance is shown in the record of voluntary settlements. Moreover, in so far as the experience of our board has thus far developed it, the attitude of both the carrier and the employee groups toward their obligations under the act has been encouraging.

There has been some resistance from a minority of carriers to the prompt submission of their problems to mediation and arbitration. In the opinion of our board this is due partially to deliberation on the part of the carriers because of different interpretations of the provisions of the law. It is expected by our board, however, that this lack of promptitude in accepting the remedies provided in the Railway Labor Act will be minimized as experience is gained.

In most instances arbitrators named by the parties in interest have failed to agree upon neutral arbitrators, and in consequence our board has found this duty of appointing arbitrators one of its most arduous and exacting tasks.

Our board believes the Railway Labor Act is sound in purpose and principle. However, it should be emphasized that the absence of coercive provisions places a definite responsibility upon both carriers and employee organizations to deal with, and if possible, to settle their own problems in the interests of each other and of the public.

New Offerings of Bond House on Sale Today

Over twenty-five issues of California improvement bonds will be placed on the market today by the Elliott Horne Company, it was announced.

Street bonds are issued under State improvement acts to cover financing of essential public improvements such as paving, installation of sidewalks, curbs, sanitary sewers, storm drains, etc., and constitute first liens on California properties ranking ahead of first mortgages, present or future, and all other liens except general taxes.

Among the offerings are improvement bonds issued by Los Angeles city and county cities of Santa Barbara, Hawthorne, Inglewood, Arroyo Grande, Bakersfield, Firebaugh, El Segundo, South Gate, Tujunga, Ojai, Azusa, San Diego county and Kern county. Yields range from 6 to 6 1-2 per cent, exempt from California and Federal income taxes.

TRADE IMPROVES

December Electrical Sales Show Good Gain on November

Industrial buying during December has shown marked improvement over the inactive period of the previous two months, reports Electrical World, New York. A large order covering 100 pumps and motors from 250 horsepower down for mills now being constructed at Hoquiam and Port Townsend was placed on the Pacific Coast.

A steel mill placed an order in the eastern district for a 2000-kilovatt motor generator set and a fair volume of inquiries for other machinery of this character is reported. Orders placed in New England call for about $500,000 worth of material for railroad electrification and interest in industrial electric heating is rapidly gaining. A power-transformer order from an Alabama power company amounted to $175,000; two 4000-kilowatt turbines were also purchased by a steel mill in that State and a rayon mill in Tennessee ordered a 2000-kilowatt turbine, transformers, etc., amounting to $150,000.

In the Middle West greater expansion was noted and activity of utilities during the coming year is anticipated.

GOAT INDUSTRY OF ARIZONA THRIVING

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—The past year has been a notably prosperous one for the Angora goat raisers of Mohave county. The goats in the county now number over 30,000, a gain of fully 20,000 in the last two years. The last clip was of 60,000 pounds of mohair, most of it of superior quality.

METAL OUTLOOK SURVEYED

Copper Situation Shows Some Improvement at Year's End; Lead and Zinc Unsatisfactory

BY CHARLES F. WILLIS,
Editor the Mining Journal, Phoenix

Holiday quietness has prevailed in the metal market during the past week with copper remaining at 13¾ net to the producer, lead at 6.50 and zinc at 5.65. The average price for copper received by the producers during the past week was 13.70.

There has been an especial leanness in copper purchases by domestic consumers following the buying wave of several weeks ago and it is probable that the domestic consumers will be largely out of the market until after the New Year. Foreign sales are maintaining well.

It is a producers' market with none of them being pressed to get rid of their copper and no tendency to offer any inducement for sales. The prices are nominal, being largely influenced by the offerings of the custom smelter production and not representing a transfer of any great quantity. Any resumption of large scale buying would probably start another advance in price.

But copper is a long ways from being "out of the woods," as any production advance would again bring on lower prices. The past year has had its good points and its bad points in so far as the copper market is concerned. The production of copper for North and South America for the year is going to come within a few thousand pounds of hitting the 3,000,000-pound mark, a record. This record is being accomplished in spite of the fact that during the past year the domestic consumers have dropped about 8 per cent in their takings of the metal.

DROP OFFSET

This drop in domestic consumption fortunately has been more than offset by the 20 per cent increase in foreign consumption and if it had not been for this large increase in European takings, it would have been a sorry year for the copper producers.

Statistics are now available which permit of the summing up of the year 1927 for the metals based upon the figures for the first eleven and one-half months. Production of refined copper during 1927 has increased about 2 per cent over 1926, the world's production will be about 1,730,000 tons as compared with 1,695,000 tons in 1926.

The production of blister copper has increased at a greater rate, about 3 1-4 per cent, and will be about 1,854,000 tons during 1927. The discrepancy between refined and blister production is due to the fact that production of secondary copper is included into the refined figures.

This big copper production for the year has not been caused by increasing production by the big companies. They have been holding back attempting to maintain a balance between consumption and production. The increase has come about through the expansion of Katanga to an annual rate of 125,000 tons and the incoming of Andes copper with about 50,000 tons and the probable expansion to 80,000 tons next year. These two factors combined with the potential production to come from the sensational ore strikes of Greene-Cananea and Calumet and Arizona make the next year an important one to watch and guard against over production and its disastrous price consequences.

CONSUMPTION DROPS

The total consumption of copper for the year is about 13,000 pounds less than the production and the

New Bank Will Open Doors at Oxnard Today

Formal opening today of the new Bank of Oxnard in the quarters previously occupied by the postoffice, was announced yesterday by officers of the bank.

Paid-in capital and surplus of the bank will be $150,000, the stock to be widely distributed. Local capital has been interested in the new bank and in addition the French American Corporation has taken a portion of the stock.

Walter H. Lathrop, who has been active in Ventura county for more than thirty years and who has lived in Oxnard since 1908, has been appointed president. H. H. Eastwood has been elected vice-president and was formerly Mayor of the city, having held that position six years. Directors of the company are: Walter H. Lathrop, Adolfo Camarillo, H. H. Eastwood, Henry M. Borchard, James P. McLaughlin, J. M. Reimann, C. H. Whipple, C. L. Hirt and John A. Lagomarsino.

Building-Loan to Warm Home

Formal opening of new Los Angeles offices of the Pacific States Savings and Loan Company, formerly the Wilshire Building and Loan Association, will be held Thursday, according to an announcement by A. L. Schoenborn, vice-president in charge of the city office.

Offices are in the Edwards & Wildey Building on the ground floor. The old offices on the second floor of the same building will be retained and connected with the ground floor by special stairway. Mr. Schoenborn extends an invitation to the company's depositors and to the public to inspect the new offices on the opening day, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

We recommend as suitable for the investment of January Funds:

NEW EXCHANGES IN NORTH

San Francisco Opens Today With Three Markets to Handle Security Business of Public

BY EARLE E. CROWE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2. (Exclusive)—Three separate institutions each with its policies and practices definitely outlined, come into financial existence here tomorrow. They are the San Francisco Stock Exchange, the San Francisco Curb Exchange and the San Francisco Mining Exchange and they are born as the result of weeks of agreements, absorptions and realignments having as their major aim the segregation and simplification of business activities.

With their birth, virtually the last remnant of the organization which came through the stirring days of the common stock lode fever, dies. If there was only a change of name to contend with, the link between the present and the past would continue to exist in spirit but activities as well as name are involved in the changing groups, wiping out the last vestige of what once was known as the Stock and Exchange Board, which was organized in 1862, and which weathered the greatest trading excitement that this city ever has seen.

MARKETS MERGE

For several years past and until three weeks ago, there were, in the trading business here the San Francisco Stock and Bond Exchange and the San Francisco Stock Exchange. The former dealt in listed stocks and a minor proportion of bonds of the kind most familiarly known as high-grade securities. The latter dealt in mining and unlisted stocks, of no less worth perhaps but in which the trader admittedly took a longer chance.

As the first step in the realignment of which the new system is the culmination, there were evolved the San Francisco Stock Exchange to take the identity of the stock and bond mining exchange to assume the identity and partial activities of the stock exchange. That was three weeks ago. Simultaneously there was created the curb exchange.

With that accomplished, the way was clear for the two prior bodies to make way for the new one, each with its business boundaries well-defined. It is on these bases that they will open for business tomorrow and their activities are: stock exchange, trading in listed securities only; curb exchange, trading in unlisted securities; mining exchanged trading in mining stocks.

MINING EXCHANGE PASSES

Only a few of those who participated in the feverish trading which characterized the Comstock days of the '70's remain alive to tell of them in the backwash of today's shouting of bids and calls. The madness of those days has not been equalled since, even though much of the imaginative fascination of the past is heightened by perspective—a ready hand maiden of exaggeration.

There are many, however, who tell of the aggressive traders who stormed the rooms of the stock exchange when Tonopah, Goldfield, Manhattan and Divide were at the height of the irregular golden glory in 1906, '07, and '08.

These men are still active on change, but tomorrow the registered tie which bound them to the past—the business scope of the stock exchanged—will die with the organization that fostered it. The name remains with a new organization, but it stays as nothing but a memory.

From a romantic standpoint, there will be regret at its passing, but from a business standpoint, the new trinity of exchanges is hailed as a boon to the handling of securities.

SPOILING A LECTURE

A good Bret Harte story is told by William H. Crane. Bret Harte was engaged to deliver a humorous lecture in a small western city. Just after he had started, one of the deacons sitting on the stage grabbed hold of his coat and whispered.

Harte was very much astonished and stepped aside, while the deacon took the center of the platform.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said after a pause, "is Mr. Rogers C. Jones in the hall?"

There was a protracted pause and, as Mr. Jones failed to respond, the deacon continued:

"Well, if he is, I have the pleasure to say that his wife has just died."

As everyone in the small city was intimately acquainted with Mrs. Jones, Harte's task, giving a humorous lecture, was far from successful.—[Foot Prints and Echoes.

RECORD CRAZY QUILT

A year ago Mrs. Walter Zoll of Poplar Bluff, Mo., read about some other woman making a quilt containing 18,400 pieces and thereupon she decided she would beat that record. So she sat down and figured out how large each individual piece would have to be and now she has completed a quilt containing 21,840 pieces, only five-eighths of an inch square. Mrs. Zoll used fifty-one spools of thread.

MATURITIES

Many investors on occasion wish to place a portion of their funds in high-grade short-term investments. For these investors we strongly recommend the 7% Equipment Trust Certificates of PICKWICK STAGES SYSTEM, which operates one of the largest motor transportation systems in America.

SURVEY MADE OF METALS OUTLOOK

stocks of refined copper have, therefore, been increased by that amount since January 1, 1927. The total refined surplus at the end of the year will be about 91,000 tons, or about a three weeks' supply.

The production of lead in the countries accounting for about 90 per cent of the world total will be about 1,645,000 tons, as compared with 1,575,000 tons during 1926, an increase of about 4 per cent. The production in the United States has decreased during 1927 by 3.2 per cent, while the lead production in countries other than the United States has increased over 10 per cent.

The lead stocks are not known other than for the United States and Mexico and they have increased during the year. Deliveries of lead for consumption have decreased 7.5 per cent, while production has decreased but 3.2 per cent.

ZINC OUTLOOK

In the countries accounting for 97 per cent of the total, zinc production has increased about 6 per cent and will be 1,420,000 tons, as against 1,330,000 tons during 1926. The United States production has decreased about 4.5 per cent, while the other countries of the world have increased 14.4 per cent, the United States being the only country of the world showing a decrease.

In the first half of the year zinc stocks increased by 21,971 tons, while during the last half they have decreased by 4558 tons, making the net increase for the year of 17,433 tons. Thus the domestic consumption decreased by 8.8 per cent, while the production decreased 4.2 per cent.

In all of the metals the domestic conditions have been bad, with shipments less than in 1926 and more than in 1925. Copper has the advantage of the large European demand, which has offset the lowered domestic shipment, while in lead and zinc there is so much of them produced in countries other than the United States that they do not react so well to improved European conditions.

For that reason, lead and zinc are statistically in a poor position, with their hope for improvement based upon United States conditions, while copper is getting its advance from better foreign markets. The primary reason for poorer domestic conditions is given as the recession in automobile manufacturing and building construction, both of which took a decided slump during the year. The end of 1927 sees better domestic conditions than have prevailed during the balance of the year.

PUBLIC UTILITY ISSUES REPORT

Holding Company Shows Gain For Ten Months

Period Income $298,364.20, Up 9 Per Cent

October Increase Reported at $3228.55

Net earnings available for interest, depreciation, amortization and dividends of the Public Utilities Consolidated Corporation for the ten months ending October, last, increased nearly 9 per cent to a total of $298,364.20, according to a statement received from the company yesterday.

The Public Utilities Consolidated Corporation is a holding company for a new nation-wide Foshay group of utilities, and is successor to the Northwest Light and Power Company, Canyon Light and Power Company, Mullen Light Company, Mission Range Power Company, Flathead Valley Electric Company, Desert Power and Water Company, J. J. Mackay Water Plant and the Claypool Water Company, in the States of Arizona, Idaho and Montana. Subsidiaries owned by the company include Princeton Gas Company, Southern Arizona Power Company, Public Utilities Vermont Corporation, Public Utilities Kansas Corporation and Pocatello Gas and Power Company.

Gross earnings for the ten months ended in October, last, were $763,281.88, against $715,832.86 for the same period in 1926, an increase of $47,449.02, or 6.63 per cent. Operating, administrative expenses and taxes were increased 5.2 per cent, or $22,965, to $464,917.68 over the former period and with this added figure they show net income at $298,364.20, an increase of $24,483.96, or 8.94 per cent over the same ten months of 1926.

October income showed a gain of 12.24 per cent, or $3228.55, traceable partly to a drop of ½ of 1 per cent in operating expense. Gross earnings for October were $76,421.45, as against $73,427.90 in October, 1926, an increase of $2993.55, or 4.08 per cent. Operating expenses were $44,468.69, leaving an income available for interest and dividends of $31,952.76.

THE INVESTOR

Cost of Investment Trust Financing Held to Depend on Type in America

BY WILLIAM RUSSELL WHITE

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The cost of raising capital is a phase of investment trust financing on which Albert Ottinger, Attorney-General of New York, has rather fixed ideas. The cost depends, he believes, to a certain extent on the type of trust.

The lack of information on financing costs in printed matter on trust financing is emphasized in his report, prepared for consideration by legislators. He calls attention to the fact that costs are higher here than in England and explains that this is due primarily to the fact that investment trusts are better known in Great Britain than in the United States.

"The cost of raising capital for general investment trusts of the management type," he says, "is lower than for investment trusts of the fixed type and varies from 3½ to 10 per cent, being nearer the former figures than the latter in the case of trusts backed by responsible groups.

"The cost of raising capital for fixed investment trusts is found in the spread between the market value of the deposited securities and the prices at which the participating certificates are sold to the public. The extent of this spread is generally somewhere between 10 and 20 per cent. A calculation of this spread is easily made where the list and amounts of securities deposited are made public, but published information does not reveal what profit the promoters of the fund may have made on the original price they paid on the securities deposited. This additional element of profit may have been sizeable in some cases.

"While the cost of raising capital is not the only item covered in the spread, it is the most important one. Out of this spread must also come the profits of the organizers and often expenses of the trustee. Nevertheless, the percentage of the investor's dollar, which actually goes into the funds invested, is generally very much less in the fixed, than in the management, type investment trusts. In most cases there is an almost complete lack of information on these points in printed matter issued by such trusts."

Explaining that capital is more easily obtained in Great Britain for trust financing because issues of this type are better known, Attorney-General Ottinger continues:

"It is not to be expected that cost of raising capital for management investment trusts in the United States should be as low as abroad. The distribution of new issues in New York through investment banking houses, rather than directly through large individual and institutional buyers, is partly responsible for the higher cost of raising investment trust capital in the United States. Another element is the fact that the investment trust is not as thoroughly established in the United States as in several European countries.

"Some investment trusts of the management type in the United States raise their capital continuously. The majority of them bring out only occasional issues which are sold through investment dealers. The majority of larger management investment trusts follow the foreign practice of bringing out only occasional issues, raising new capital at times, when the market is particularly favorable or at times when such capital can be most advantageously invested."

SAFETY ZONES FOR DOLLARS

123—FASHIONS IN INVESTMENTS

Fashions in investments often change as do fashions in clothing, dwellings and amusements. If styles in securities evolve more slowly, they are none the less real and the effect of very definite factors.

The absorption of new investment issues during the first four months of this year throws some very interesting sidelights on investment "styles." The total flotations for the first quarter amounted to $2,070,000,000. In this tremendous volume of financing public utility issues held first place with a total of more than $613,000,000. Next in order came the industrials in an amount exceeding $463,000,000. Then followed the tax-exempt municipal and State securities, and the foreign issues, railroad investments and real estate bonds, in the order named.

Twenty or more years ago railroad, government and State and municipal bonds held the bulk of bond buyer's funds. Foreign securities were then practically unknown in this country. Today private American capital has more at stake abroad than has the United States Treasury, despite the enormous figure of inter-governmental loans. Not many years ago industrials were not generally classed as investment securities. Last year out of a total of more than $7,000,000,000 of new securities floated in this country, industrial long and short-term bonds, notes and debentures probably accounted for something well over $1,000,000,000. Even as late as a decade ago investors looked hesitatingly at public utility securities. Today public utility investments lead in volume.

Public utility securities, particularly those of the power and light and gas companies, have justified their popularity on the whole. Defaults have been comparatively few. They are fashionable because, as a whole, they are safe working places for dollars. Their popularity is the verdict of the investing public. In following this verdict the individual investor can not stray far from the highway to safety, if he takes precautions to choose those companies which are proved safety zones.

AID FOR FISHERIES

Government research workers are aiding the American fishing industry, products of which have a value exceeding $100,000,000 annually. Oyster investigations, which have concerned not only the biology of the oyster, but the best means of oyster culture, and plans for protecting the Alaskan salmon fisheries are among the more important undertakings. Research also is being made into the possibilities of saving certain fish from extinction, particularly in the Great Lakes.

SLOAN PREDICTS BUSINESS GAIN

Brooklyn Edison President Optimistic on Outlook

Power Expansion Program for Year Held Heavy

Expects Over $1,000,000,000 to Go for New Plants

BY M. S. SLOAN
President, Brooklyn Edison Company

The electric power and light industry looks forward to another year of substantial increase in business. This year has shown an increase of about 8 per cent, averaged for the country, over 1926; and there is no anticipation that 1928 will fall behind the present year in rate of increase. The companies are planning their budgets for expansion on that basis. Expenditures for new plants and equipment and improvements to service facilities will aggregate upward of $1,000,000,000. It is expected.

Our company's output is increasing at a rate of 10 per cent a year. During 1928 we shall put to work a new gathering unit larger than any now installed in our plants and, undoubtedly, we shall place an order for another to be installed the following year. Our expenditures for expansion in 1928 will be approximately the same as they have been this year.

A certain proportion of new business each year comes from increase in population. The bulk of it, however, comes as a result of intensive cultivation of our field; and what is true of our company in that respect is true of all the others in the industry. The power and light industry has gone beyond the point where its annual growth is handed to it. We have to work for it; but by the character of our service, by promotional rates, by lowered rates due to decreased costs and increased volume of business, we are able to keep up the percentage of growth. That growth is sound and healthy.

From what I see and hear, I expect business in general to be as good during 1928 as it has been this year—certainly no worse, and probably better in some lines. There will be a national campaign; but I don't see why that should operate to disturb or slow up the course of business. It needn't do so unless we get a fit of the business blues and let it.

GAIN CERTAIN IN ELECTRIC FIELD

Many Mergers Predicted by Martin Insull

Small Communities Develop Holding Companies

Large Assets Not Alarming, Executive Says

BY MARTIN J. INSULL
President Middle West Utilities Co.

Whatever the course of business as a whole during 1928, the electric industry will inevitably continue to expand. And for the same reasons that the industry as a whole will expand, the properties under the direction of so-called "holding" companies will grow relatively more.

The reason lies in the stage of development at which the electric industry now stands—a stage far from saturation. Since the "holding" companies serve chiefly non-metropolitan territories, in which development has not yet progressed as far as in the more densely populated centers, they naturally face a continual and more emphatic growth. The small communities and the farms, mines, oil fields, quarries, irrigation and drainage systems and other such power users spread over the countryside constitute a field of development which is far from completely electrified.

CONTINUED CONCENTRATION

Companies operating in such territories face both an external and internal growth. It is logical to suppose that they will continue to bring into their systems, from time to time, isolated local plants in communities whose service requirements can be more adequately met by a larger system. In addition to this they must meet a constant growth in the demand for service in territories already served.

There are small communities which have no electric service at all to which transmission lines must be extended. Rural electrification is in its infancy. Domestic use of electricity both for lighting and for labor-saving appliances can be made much more general.

There is a great deal yet to be done in the electrification of manufacturing operations and in the application of electricity to the extraction of natural resources such as oil, coal and quarry products.

This increase in demand for electric service appears simple enough in the homes and industries where it is taking place. The raising of new capital with which to build the necessary generating and transmission facilities to meet the requirements of any one individual is seen as a simple business operation.

SIZE OVERLOOKED

When, however, each such operation is multiplied by millions—the population of the country—it results in a staggering figure to which "trust" and "octopus" are unthinkingly applied. I think those who react in this way to the growth of the electric industry fail to realize the size of the country, which is the explanation of large figures which seem to cause alarm.

The companies whose service is constantly being extended are fully understood by the customers whom they are serving and the investors whose capital they are enlisting in this work. Such opposition as there is is an opposition growing out of fear of size—a size that the development of the country necessarily requires—and is not the feeling, I am confident, of either the customer or the investor toward the electric industry.

REVIVE OLD-FASHIONED CAMEO

Paris shops and old jewel collections are being ransacked for the cameos that were cast aside a few years ago as no longer good style. They are now classed among the choicest antiques.

Even the cameo brooch, so humble in its last seasons, is the sought-for pin of the day. One dealer in antique jewelry makes an important display of a pair of long earrings made up of four black cameos of different design reset in the manner of fifty years ago.—[Exchange.

BACHE PREDICTS 1928 WILL BE PROSPEROUS

BELIEVES PRESIDENTIAL DRIVE DEVELOPMENTS WILL GUIDE EXCHANGE ACTIVITIES

BY J. S. BACHE

The year 1927 has proved to many who did not believe it before that the United States could have an indefinite period of prosperity without frequent spasms of reaction, and that a business recession does not portend a severe business depression with panicky symptoms. My own belief is that our present prosperity will continue until, say, around 1929, or whenever the question of reparation transfers from Germany becomes critical.

At that time I would expect that the nations involved will have to sit around the table and conclude that tying up debtors for sixty-two years with impossible payment demands is not only absurd, but absolutely impracticable, that the German debts must be defined as to the amount liquidated through an issue of bonds, and that in the final event the largest amount of these bonds—practically all of them—will land in the United States Treasury. When this is done, the world, swept free of Allied debts, will enter upon a new world boom of colossal proportions.

In the meanwhile we may anticipate for 1928 a reasonable amount of business activity which, pending the uncertain developments abroad, need not be expected to be anything but normal.

LAST, BUT NOT LEAST

He had been praising his sweetheart's features.

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

With eight extensive operators in the Seacliff field of Ventura county, that district, which only has one well on production, is rapidly taking on the semblance of a real oil field. There are approximately twenty wells, either drilling, building derrick, putting in foundation or staked as locations. The operators already under way there are Standard, Shell, Pan American, General Petroleum, Associated, Petroleum Securities, E. J. Miley and Chanslor-Canfield Midway.

The Pan American interests, with a 1000-barrel well on production in the shallow zone since Christmas, are reported to be making arrangements to erect a casing-head absorption plant in the field immediately, to take care of the wet gas from several wells it expects to have on production before the end of the month.

The Seacliff gas is said to run about three gallons of gasoline to the 1000 cubic feet of gas, which is practically one gallon to the 1000 better than the same operators get out of their wet gas in the Ventura-avenue field, but the gas in the upper zone at Seacliff is, apparently, of small consequence, as indicated by pressure in the pioneer wells, in comparison with the tremendous gas pressure of the Ventura-avenue wells.

Reports from Seacliff are to the effect that the companies operating there are planning to put in a pipe line as quickly as possible to pick up the dry gas and carry it six miles to Ventura, where it can be turned into the fuel lines of the gas distributing companies.

Planning Headquarters

The Standard Oil Company, which already is carrying on a wildcat drilling campaign in the Camarillo district of Ventura county, now finds itself well launched on a drilling program at Seacliff which is expected to embrace twenty-two wells, and is going to need a more convenient supply base than it has at present.

Reports from Ventura are to the effect that Standard already has arranged immediately to establish headquarters in that city for all its Ventura county activities.

Tackling Kern County

The Brownmoor Oil Company, which has been operating in the Los Angeles basin fields for several years, is starting the new year with a drilling program in Kern county. It has staked locations for three wells on Sec. 16, 28-27, on the Kern River west front, and expects to start the drill there soon.

Still in Oil Sand

The San Clemente Oil Company still is getting good showings in its wildcat well in the Lawndale district, and yesterday was down about 5700 feet in a shale formation which has been showing frequent streaks of well saturated oil sand. According to the most authentic reports available, the San Clemente has had more oil sand in its present well than any of the previous wildcats on the Lawndale structure, and besides this, is apparently considerably higher on the structure than previous wells.

It is understood that the Shell company, which recently took over the Horowitz well in this area, is waiting to see what the San Clemente may develop before resuming work in the Horowitz. This well, which was started by J. E. O'Donnell, and drilled to about 8250 feet, has had some oil showings, although O'Donnell did not think the well worth a test, and shut it down about two months ago. It is understood that the Shell is picking up some more acreage around the Horowitz property.

Gets Small Well

The Union Oil Company, drilling on the Heilman lease in the old Dominguez field, has brought in its Heilman No. 12, with an output of about 125 barrels a day, according to field reports. The well was finished at about 4250 feet, and the oil is clean, testing about 33 deg. gravity. The low rate of output is ascribed to the depleted pressure of the field, which has been one of the most consistent producers in the Los Angeles basin for the past four years.

Completion Due Today

The Richfield Oil Company did not get its Haas No. 14 on production yesterday, as had been expected, but everything was all set last night to put the well on production today. The well was finished at 6250 feet several days ago, but the practice of landing casing on bottom, and cementing through perforations, which is being followed generally in the deep zone development of Signal Hill delays production several days after the wells are completed.

Outpost Wells

The Standard Oil Company has penetrated about fifty feet of oil sand in its Locke No. 2 well in the Yorba Linda district at Richfield, according to official reports, bottom of the well being at 3084 feet. This well is one of three outposts which the Standard is drilling at Yorba Linda in its campaign to define the limits of the field.

Yorba Linda Reservoir No. 1 is the deepest of the trio of outposts, and is drilling ahead at 4868 feet. The Moll Community No. 2 is drilling at 3809 feet. None of these wells is removed more than a few hundred feet from the nearest production.

Well Holds Up

The Associated Oil Company still is getting about 1000 barrels a day out of its Bryant No. 10 well, the latest completion in the Seal Beach field, which was brought in about a week ago. The well was completed in the Selover sand, and started off at about 1200 barrels a day.

Development in the eastern end of the Seal Beach field has slowed down to a point where little except maintenance is being done. Production of the wells in this area is holding up in good shape in contrast to the townlot area to the northwest. More economic spacing of wells and more scientific methods of production are responsible for the superior performances of the east end wells.

Drill Iron Out

The Associated Oil Company is drilling out the bit which held up progress in its Patterson No. 1 well in the Rivera district a few days ago. The crew fished for the iron a couple of days without success, and it was then decided to drill it out, and go on with the hole. So far as known the Associated has not had any important showings since it passed the 4000-foot point, where it is understood a six-inch oil streak was found. Bottom is at about 4300 feet.

Los Estados Unidos Han Sometido un Tratado de Paz a Francia

WASHINGTON, Enero 2.—En forma alternativa han sido sometidas a la consideración del gobierno francés las proposiciones norteamericanas relativas al nuevo tratado de paz que se proyecta celebrar con Francia, y que ha de reemplazar al pacto de arbitraje de Root, que expira el próximo 27 de Febrero.

Del estudio que de las proposiciones norteamericanas hagan los franceses ha de depender que resulte un solo tratado de las conversaciones y cambios de memorandums, o que se llegue a pactos separados que se suplementen unos a otros.

En vista de la circunstancia de que el ministro Kellogg dio forma definida a estas proposiciones y las trasmitió por conducto de la embajada francesa, después de haberlas discutido con todos los miembros de la comisión de Relaciones Exteriores del Senado, los funcionarios de ésta dan por hecho que las repetidas proposiciones han merecido la sanción del senado.

Caen Más Infantes Marinos en Nuevo Encuentro en Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Enero 2.—Los refuerzos de infantería de marina norteamericana, que marchan por las agrias serranías del norte de Nicaragua para auxiliar al destacamento que tomó a Quilalí el viernes tras cruenta batalla, se encontraron ayer con los revolucionarios y los rechazaron hacia las montañas. Los norteamericanos tuvieron seis bajas: un muerto y cinco heridos. Las bajas de los rebeldes no pudieron determinarse, pues se llevaron consigo muertos y heridos para librarlos de los buitres.

Las pérdidas totales de los yanquis en los reñidos combates del viernes y de ayer fueron de seis muertos y veintiocho heridos; pero las bajas de los algados han sido much mayores.

Los refuerzos norteamericanos se incorporaron ya con sus camaradas de Quilalí, donde estuvo antes el cuartel general de los rebeldes, y se hacían ya preparativos para concentrar en dicho lugar algunas columnas norteamericanas, y aplastar con ellas a los insurgentes, que se estiman en las casi inaccesibles fortalezas montañosas de la región.

El sargento primero Thomas G. Bruce, del cuerpo de infantería de marina yanqui, teniente que fue de la guardia nacional nicaragüense, fue muerto en la acción del domingo. Era de Filadelfia. El teniente Merton A. Richal, de Wisconsin, fue gravemente herido. Otros cuatro infantes resultaron asimismo con lesiones; pero hasta hoy no habían sido comunicados sus nombres.

Adoptóse esta decisión por iniciativa de la sección comunista del comité ejecutivo soviético ruso, que es el principal cuerpo legislativo del país. Sostienen los comunistas que las personas expulsadas del partido no son dignas de figurar como miembros de la legislatura.

"¿Por qué no comen los californios más productos de su Estado?" Tal es la primera pregunta que ha hecho ayer Eugene Whitmore, publicista de Chicago y autoridad en cuestión de ventas. El señor Whitmore se halla aquí y se aloja en el Alexandria.

"Estoy verdaderamente sorprendido del poco aprecio en que tienen los californios los excelentes y variados productos alimenticios de este Estado", agregó el viajero. "He notado en esta excursión por California que en las casas particulares y las fondas me ponen enfrente sorprendente variedad de artículos de comer procedentes del este. Entre los productos del este que me han servido figuran la salsa de tomate Ketchup, la cerveza de jengibre, el mosto, salsas diversas, dulces, café, te, chile, encurtidos, cacao, chocolate y puros; a pesar de que varias empresas de California cultivan, envasan o distribuyen todos y cada uno de esos productos."

La luz solar tal vez le diría si se calentaba más aprisa una cosa negra que una cosa blanca (Maybe the sunshine would tell him whether a black thing would heat more quickly than a white thing).

Había nieve en el suelo. Franklin extendió un género blanco sobre la nieve (There was snow on the ground. Franklin spread a white cloth on the snow). Luego tendió sobre la nieve un género negro, cerca del blanco (Then he spread a black cloth on the snow near the white one). Cuando volvió a examinarlos, notó que la nieve que había debajo del género negro se derretía mucho más pronto que la que estaba debajo del blanco (When he came to look at them, he saw that the snow under the black cloth melted away much sooner than that under the white cloth.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."—[Advertisement.

Natural Maguey Plant

For centuries fresh Maguey sap, called Aguamiel, has been a great natural remedy of Mexico. Scientists have long studied it. Scores of books and treatises published on medicinal use. For years European and American physicians have sent diabetics and other sufferers to Mexico to drink Aguamiel because the fresh sap quickly spoils and cannot be exported. Results are medical history.

Now Maguey sap is concentrated into a delicious raw syrup called Agmel. Keeps indefinitely. Has world-wide use. It is Aguamiel absolutely unchanged except for removal of water without cooking. Rich in nine important minerals, vitamines A, B, C, bene-ficial natural yeast, and Agavose, a natural sweet which diabetic can use. Nothing added. Non-alcoholic.

FRENCH ART ADVERTISING ON DISPLAY

Charles Desage Collection of Posters to Have Second Show in Country Here

An exhibition of French advertising posters brought to America by Charles Desage, French publicist, will open in the Biltmore salon today under the auspices of the Advertising Club, it is announced. This will be the collection's first appearance in this country, except for its showing in New York on arrival from Europe.

More than 100 posters are in the collection, which is said to represent the best word in such advertising in France. The art is of cubist type, and is declared to be a daring departure from conventional advertising poster types.

Among those here, Swedish arts patron, Count Rosenswärd, French Minister Claudel, etc. among the sponsors of the American tour of the exhibition, the announcement says.

A similar poster exhibition held recently in the Olive Hill salon of the Los Angeles Art Club attracted considerable attention. It was brought to this city by Miss Alma Barnesdall to show what it might contribute to modern poster work.

PERMITS DENIED TO BORDER CLUB

Friedlander Brands Plans as Gambling Promotion

Coronado Project's Stock Sale Barred in State

Development Said to be Backed by Angelenos

State Corporation Commissioner Friedlander yesterday announced denial of an application of the Coronado Development Company for a permit to sell stock and memberships in California on the grounds that the financing in California of gaming and liquor traffic just across the international line in Mexico is against public policy and should not carry the stamp of official approval by California."

The Coronado Development Company is a Nevada corporation with an authorized capital of $3,000,000. In its application for a permit it stated its purpose was to develop a concession obtained from the Mexican government by the Sociedad Californa Club, a Mexican organization, providing for the establishment of a casino, clubhouse, hotel and golf course in the vicinity of Tia Juana.

AGAINST POLICY

"The investigation of the corporation's affairs shows that a social membership in the club is nothing but a function, a smoke screen and camouflage," Mr. Friedlander said. "What is bought is in reality a license to enter upon the premises and entitling the owner to the privilege of participating in gambling, drinking and playing the horse races.

"For the American public to foster a nuisance and perpetrate a crime in Mexico, approved by a government agency such as the State Immigration Department, and which could not be countenanced in this State or country, would not only violate every sense of propriety, show gross disrespect for our neighbor nation, and do violence to the principles of courtesy between nations, but would undoubtedly lend itself to misunderstanding, friction and complications."

SETS PRECEDENT

Commissioner Friedlander's ruling is believed to be the first of its kind in the United States. Since it deals with a matter having an international angle, a copy of the findings will be sent to Secretary of State Kellogg and F. A. Pasquiera, Mexican consul at Los Angeles, for transmittal to the Mexican Ambassador to this country.

The application of the Coronado Development Company was filed last June, since which time the Corporation Department has been making a study of the plans of the company which is being promoted by Los Angeles men. Mr. Friedlander stated. According to the application, the development company owns 99 1-2 per cent of the club, the remaining shares being owned by Mexicans in conformity with Mexican law. The persons behind the development company promotion, according to records of Mr. Friedlander, are Frank Musac, Tom Holmes, Frank Musac, Tom Gregg, J. E. Turner, Miles S. Gregg, Jr., and Robin Melborn. Culbert L. Olson is attorney for the promoters.

INSPIRATION MAKES DEAL WITH UNITED

Schenck Announces New Film Line-up for Release of Six Productions

One of the most important film announcements for the New Year came yesterday from the offices of Joseph M. Schenck, head of the Art Cinema Corporation and United Artists.

WALTER CAMP

According to Schenck, Walter Camp, Jr., president of Inspiration Pictures, Inc., has been voted a member of the board of directors of the Art Cinema Corporation, which is a film-financing organization headed by Schenck and affiliated with the United Artists Corporation.

In addition, Inspiration Pictures has been granted a three-year releasing franchise with United Artists, the transaction just having been completed between Schenck and Camp.

During the life of this franchise, Inspiration plans to release at least six productions through United Artists, according to J. Boyce-Smith, treasurer and general manager of Inspiration on the West Coast.

The first unit to produce in conjunction with Inspiration and release through United Artists, is the Halperin Brothers, Victor and Edward, who plan a series of important features during the New Year.

The Halperin Brothers will function along the same lines as Edwin Carewe has during the past two years, being an associate producer with the Inspiration organization, releasing his productions through United.

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK

Greeters Meet Friday to Vote

The annual meeting for installation of officers of the Los Angeles chapter of the Hotel Greeters of America will take place at the Alexandria Friday evening. The local chapter has 900 members and is the largest in America. Ralph E. Bayless, manager of the Mayfair Hotel, is president and will be in charge with Charles B. Hamilton, manager of the Alexandria and president of the California State Hotel Association, as toastmaster.

Speakers will include Warren Bovard of the University of Southern California; Frank Simpson, president of the Southern California Hotel Association; James Woods, vice-president of the California Bowman-Biltmore hotels; Ben Frank of the Ambassador and Mayor Cryer.

FATIGUE DUTY FEARS OF REGIMENT LIFTED

Premature conclusions of younger officers of the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry, Los Angeles regiment of the California National Guard, that the Los Angeles unit will have the unpleasant duty of building camp fixtures to be used by this and other regiments during the summer encampment are nullified by Col. Harcourt Hervey in a statement to the regimental staff. The fears were occasioned by a facetious remark to that effect by Col. John Sherburn at the dinner of the officers of the regiment a week ago.

EYES ON HORSE SHOWS

Los Angeles and Beverly Hills Events for Near Future Arouse Nationwide Interest

Nation-wide interest among owners of blue-blood champions of the tanbark arena is being centered this month on the plans for the Los Angeles National Horse Show at the Ambassador auditorium from February 4 to 11 and the Beverly Hills classic on the 27th and 28th inst.

Entries of defenders and challengers are being received daily from all over the United States and Canada at the headquarters for both shows in the Stock Exchange Building. Final date for the entries will be the 16th inst.

IRVING HELLMAN

W. W. Mines, president of the association sponsoring the Ambassador events, declared yesterday all previous records for attendance are expected to be broken this year. He announced yesterday that all boxes surrounding the ring on the lower floor have been sold. Some of the front-tier boxes, however, still are available.

Irving H. Hellman, banker and horse owner, will be one of the conspicuous figures in the shows this year. He is a vice-president of the Los Angeles Horse Show Association, and president of the Beverly Hills show, to be held for charity under the auspices of the Beverly Hills Women's Club.

Keen rivalry is expected at the Ambassador show, because of the valuable trophies, cups and $35,000 cash awards at stake. More than $6000 in cash prizes will be offered for winners of the Beverly Hills exhibits.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Both, events will open a brilliant social season in Los Angeles with a series of elaborate entertainments to be given by prominent patronesses of the shows. Plans for a ball to be given at the Ambassador and another at the Beverly Hills Hotel will be announced within the next few days.

BANKER AND WIFE START WORLD TOUR

Mr. and Mrs. T. Q. Hall Plan to Avoid Europe and Visit Out-of-Way Spots

After more than half a century of residence in Los Angeles, Tracy Q. Hall, vice-president and treasurer of the Security Trust and Savings Bank left yesterday on a long-cherished trip around the world. He is accompanied by his wife.

The journey will be unique in its intentional avoidance of Europe and its cities. The out-of-the-way spots of the earth will be sought. After touching at Honolulu and Hongkong, the party will proceed to French Indo-China to view the ancient ruins of Angkor, but recently unearthed by Archaeologists. Then will come a trip up the Irawadi River from Rangoon to Mandalay, arriving at the latter spot early in spring.

After visiting Calcutta a side trip will be taken to Agra to view the famous Taj Mahal. The Halls plan to spend ten days in the Vale of Kashmere, where they have engaged a houseboat on the Doonga River. Then will follow short stays in Jaipur, Bombay and other ancient Indian cities.

The itinerary includes a trip up the west coast of Africa, stopping at Beira, the Victoria Falls, Johannesburg and Cape Town. After a tour of the African veldt, Mr. and Mrs. Hall will sail for Southampton and then direct to New York and Los Angeles.

CUPID HAS TO CHANGE HIS PLANS

Stokes and Miss Dupont Meet Delay on License; Will Try Again Today

Sylvanus Stokes, Jr., New York yachtsman, and his fiance, Miss Patty Dupont, cinema actress, were forced to postpone filing an application for their marriage license until this year when they arrived at the license bureau just a half-hour late Saturday.

PATTY DUPONT

"Yes, we tried to get a license Saturday, but were just a half-hour late," Miss Dupont admitted yesterday, "but we'll try again tomorrow."

The engagement of the couple was revealed November 14, last, but the tentative date for the wedding was given out as some time in February.

Stokes, who came west several months ago to enter the motion-picture industry, is an ardent yachtsman and has cruised the Atlantic Coast for some time.

SYLVANUS STOKES JR.

Although they refuse to reveal their plans it is understood that they may take a long yachting trip to the South Sea Islands after the ceremonies.

SOUTHLAND PAYS HOMAGE AT SHRINE OF FLOWERS

BY ROY E. ALLEN

A trumpet's silver note floated over the air, filmy gray clouds drew back as if on signal and there spread before the white-robed mountains was the pageant whereby Pasadena yesterday paid its yearly tribute to the Goddess of the Flowers.

Official List of Winners in Rose Tourney

Grand sweepstakes prize was awarded to the city of Beverly Hills. Beverly Hills also won this honor last year. The 1928 float was "The Kingdom of Paradise," the theme being carried out in a profusion of sweet peas and roses. From the floor of the float rose a huge throne. Radiating from the dais behind the throne were fan-shaped rays, fashioned from white and lavender sweet peas. The rays or beams of light revolved in unison mechanically. Sweet peas, fashioned in imitation of tile, formed the approach to the throne. The steps leading up to it were made of pink and white roses. The queen and two ladies-in-waiting rode on the front of the float, and a third lady-in-waiting at the back of the dais.

The city of San Marino won the best theme award. A floral fountain with water and spray of flowers, woven of pink carnations, red roses, Chinese lilies, stevia and orchids was the centerpiece of San Marino's "Fountain of Youth." The fountain was surrounded by a bevy of pretty girls, dressed in georgine frocks of pastel shades. It rested on a base of roses and ferns, and was covered by a canopy fashioned from the same varieties of flowers. From this canopy hung floral Chinese lanterns. The sides were adorned with scrolls. Outriders were dressed in costumes of light pastel shades.

Honorable mention was given the San Dimas Chamber of Commerce and the Western Auto Supply Company. The San Dimas float presented a scene from Holland, with a small house, back of which rose a windmill made of desert sage, yellow pompoms and red holly berries. On the float were two Dutch girls and two Dutch boys. Reminiscent of pioneer days was "Blazing the Trail Westward," of the Western Auto Supply Company. On a base of heather and foliage stood a floral covered wagon drawn by live oxen and surrounded by Indians and frontiersmen.

The best-decorated store window prize for Pasadena stores went to the F. C. Nash Company department store, while the Model Grocery and the F. W. Mather Company, women's apparel, were given special mention.

Class A—City of Beverly Hills, first; city of San Marino, second; City of Glendale, third. Special prizes won by city and county of San Francisco, San Jose Fiesta de Las Rosas, Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, city of Long Beach and the Portland Rose Festival Association, Inc.

Class B—Pasadena Park Department, first; Pasadena Light Department, second; Pasadena Water Department, third.

Class C—Linnard Hotels, Huntington Hotel, first; Hotel Raymond, second; Hotel Vista del Arroyo, third. St. Catherine Hotel and Hotel Maryland, special prizes.

Class B—United Service Clubs of Pasadena, first, second and third.

Class D—Lamanda Park Business Men's Association, first; Kappa Alpha Ki (Harvey Yager,) second; Henry Jaeger children, third. Postal employees of Pasadena and Los Altos

Like ancient priests, their snowy vestments falling from their shoulders, the mountains stood to watch. While they looked on in solemn silence, there were borne before the multitude that lined the way the beauties of a thousand fields and gardens, the offerings of the devoted city and of its sister cities which had sent gift-laden embassies to attest again their common fealty.

It was Pasadena's day of days, the thirty-ninth annual Tournament of Roses. Again the air was pleasant with mingled perfumes; again the great trees bowed to each other across streets gay with color; once more the goddess was acclaimed with music and once more the noisy thousands were stilled by the revelation of her beauty.

GOLDEN SUNLIGHT

The throngs assembled under cloudy skies and while the procession was forming it seemed hardly probable that the sun would shine. Thus it was easy to acclaim it a miracle when, with the first note of the opening fanfare of trumpets, golden sunlight flooded the scene.

It would be almost impossible to say just how many persons watched the event. They began coming before the sun was due to rise and by 9 o'clock it was almost hopeless to attempt entry into the city, so jammed with traffic were all thoroughfares. All morning long the motor-borne crowd was augmented by the discharge of trainloads who came in by trolley and railroad. It was roughly estimated by several who professed competence at that sort of thing that more than 500,000 persons were within the city limits. This did not seem too rough an estimate, in view of the fact that the route of the parade was five miles long and that along the whole distance the crowd filled the space on either side, from curbstone to building line.

HIS UNBUSY DAY

Naturally, it is only to be expected that when 500,000 persons get together there will be an accident. So the Accident Reporter was there all set for a busy day. He started out early before the grand stands were occupied, and examined these structures with a fault-finding eye. He discussed the outlook with Chief of Police Kelley. He sharpened his pencil and sat down on a curbstone and waited. He kept on waiting. The parade started and the Accident Reporter still was waiting.

Occasionally a police siren would shatter the air and this gentleman would prick up his ears alertly for a moment but after he had rushed out a couple of times and found nothing, except once, more harrowing than some official dashing up in a limousine, with motorcycle outriders fore and aft, he decided that maybe it was his day off. Whereupon he tried to sit down on his curbstone again, but a large, firm lady was there, and so he spread a newspaper and sat in the street.

By this time the parade was well under way. Four or five bands had gone by and Gov. Young had waved a fashionably gloved hand in response to a cheer. A pie-eyed piper finally had found a bunch of other pipers whose plaid matched his and had ceased his frantic scurryings back and forth, and settled down to a little serious and earnest skirling.

THE GREAT MOMENT

It was just about at this juncture that it looked as if the Accident Reporter's Great Moment had come. Personally he had abandoned the tournament, and was musing over some of the events of Saturday night, but his fellows on the pavement brought the matter to his attention and lifted him to his feet.

The San Jose float was just passing. In the front of it two small boys bore a huge banner, each holding a pole. They were dressed in Spanish costume, with sashes and rakish hats. The smaller of the small boys was very small indeed, and one of his chief difficulties was that he had only a couple of hands.

League of Nations Theme Carried Out by Chain of Masterpieces Done in Flowers

Pleasant skies and a warming day greeted the three-quarter million who made a pilgrimage to Pasadena yesterday to pay homage to the rose. It was the occasion of the thirty-ninth annual Tournament of Roses and the Crown City donned her best holiday attire to receive the multitude that gathered to welcome the new year.

In theme the tournament was a League of Nations in flowers. The idea, cleverly executed in flower-covered floats, gave the pageant a cosmopolitan aspect. It conveyed the impression that all the States and nations of the world had gathered to exchange a New Year's greeting of peace and good will.

BUGLER AS HERALD

Heralding the coming of the pageant of flowers marched a lone bugler. Behind him came the motorcycle squad clearing the way, the "Drummer Boys of '61," portrayed by G.A.R. veterans riding in a huge Uncle Sam's hat made from flowers, was the first of the floats to pass the reviewing stand. Next came the drum corps of South Pasadena Post No. 140, American Legion, and the massed Legion colors.

Following the colorful Tournament of Roses float, came Gov. Young and President Ticknor of the tournament association, in a rose bedecked automobile; National Commander Spafford of the American Legion and Lieut.-Gov. Fitts; directors of the Tournament of Roses; Grand Marshall John McDonald; Adjutant Robert M. McCurdy and Maj. N. J. Shupe, chief of staff.

Among the other governmental representatives in line were Mayor Cryer of Los Angeles, members of the Los Angeles City Council; Councilmen from Glendale, the Board of Supervisors; Long Beach City Council and members of the Pasadena Board of Education.

STARTS ON TIME

Led by Chief of Police Kelley of Pasadena, the parade started at 10:30 o'clock from Orange Grove and Colorado streets, where it had formed earlier in the day.

Chief Kelley was followed by the Pasadena Elks band, the bugle and drum corps of the Pasadena Post of the American Legion, the tournament association's float and the official guests of the association.

Then came the floral numbers with Glendale's entry, a huge Chinese dragon that emitted smoke from his nostrils in the approved dragonese fashion, leading the way.

The Lancer

by Harry Carr

IF THE world really wanted to turn over a new leaf, there is a leaf waiting to be turned.

It isn't mild peccadilloes like bootleg gin, but something far more dangerous to civilization.

If something isn't done to loosen up the frightful strain of modern life, the whole darn book is going to be torn up—not to speak of leaves.

TO GET WHAT?

I don't know of half a dozen people who aren't living beyond their strength, beyond their means (either financial or in some other way.)

And to get what?

Usually to get money enough to live in a way and in a place that they don't want to live.

GOING THE PACE

"For heaven's sake stop writing about the desert," said a brilliant young friend of mine. "I want to go out there to live so badly that it tortures me."

So he keeps on with this terrible, devastating struggle to get money to maintain an establishment which he would gladly exchange for a desert cabin; to keep up a flock of expensive automobiles, when he would rather have a burro.

THE SIMPLE LIFE

The wisest, sanest young man I know has gally tossed the whole business overboard.

He has stopped a brilliant literary career as one would throw away a half-smoked cigarette. He has a small income and no responsibilities. Somewhere up the coast he has a charming little beach cottage out on a rock that thrusts into the sea.

The old mysterious sea that he calls "Big Brother." He says that the rest of his life is going to be occupied with the simple business of living.

WORKING FOR MONEY

Once upon a time I heard a very rich man talking with a very promising young writer. He had gone into the movies, lured by a huge salary.

"It makes me sad," said the millionaire, "to know what is in store for you. I can see that you are getting the money bug. Well, let me tell you this: That it will wring every drop of happiness out of your life.

MAKING MONEY

"There are people who find happiness in making money; but they are not your kind. They are my kind.

"I don't make money because I want money; I like the great game. It is my way of expressing myself. It is my outlet for imagination. And, believe me, boy, it takes a lot of imagination.

"With you it isn't the same. You are selling your soul, and you are getting the worst of the bargain. It isn't your stuff. I have made a lot of money, and I have put it in its rightful place. It means nothing to me more than cards to a bridge player.

"You are making a god of it; worshiping the golden calf. And my young friend, you are going to pay in tears and sorrow; in such worries and anxiety that you didn't know a human soul was capable of.

"Take it from me, you are going to wander in the wilderness until you yell for mercy."

THE HAVEN OF PEACE

There is no haven of peace and happiness into which you can struggle your way.

You can't chase it; it comes. And only when you sit down and realize it.

HICKMAN MAKES HIS PLEA TODAY

Murderer Expected to Offer Insanity Excuse

Grand Jury to Take Up Toms Death Case Also

Officers Continue Inquiry on Driskell Suicide

William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of Marion Parker, will be taken before Superior Judge Hardy this afternoon at 2 o'clock to enter his plea to an indictment charging him with the double crime.

Preceding the arraignment the county grand jury will convene at 9 a.m. to consider the mass of data, confessions and other evidence pertaining to the murder of C. Ivy Toms, druggist, who was killed in a hold-up perpetrated by Hickman and Welby Hunt on Christmas Eve, 1926. An indictment charging Hickman and Hunt with the crime will be asked by the District Attorney.

Although no statement has been made by Jerome Walsh, Kansas City attorney sent here by Hickman's mother to defend her son, it is believed he will enter for his client a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity.

DOCTORS SEE HIM

This conclusion was reached by the State's officials because of the fact three physicians have examined Hickman at the request of Walsh. The names of the alienists have not been announced.

During the afternoon he was permitted a thirty-minute walk through the corridors.

He inquired of Dewar as to the relationship between former Dep. Dist.-Atty. Ryan and Chief of Detectives Cline. The self-confessed slayer, according to jail attaches, clearly indicates that he is studying the moves to be made in his case as outlined in the conferences held Saturday with Attorneys Walsh and Ryan. The latter maintains he will not be associated with Walsh in the defense, but is merely helping the Kansas City attorney to become familiar with the California Criminal Code.

ASKS QUESTION

"Isn't Ryan a son-in-law of Cline?"

Receiving an affirmative answer, Hickman merely grunted, according to Dewar, and the conversation closed abruptly.

Hickman expected a visit from his attorney yesterday, but evidently Walsh changed his plan, as no conference was held.

Many letters were received at the jail for Hickman, most of them unsigned.

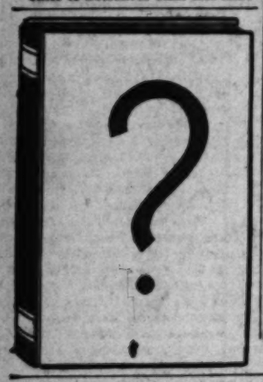
Dist.-Atty. Keyes announced that he has ample evidence to combat an insanity plea, and is ready for the plea, as well as for a trial.

Handwriting experts were busy yesterday comparing the suicide notes found on the body of A. R. Driskell, former Alhambra merchant and grandfather of Welby Hunt, confessed accomplice of Hickman in the Toms murder, in an effort to discover if the notes were written by one person, and if by Driskell himself.

MONEY SOUGHT

George Contreras, chief of detectives for the District Attorney, today will check the records of the bank at which Driskell had accounts. It is believed, according to Contreras, that Driskell had quite a sum of money in his possession shortly before his body was discovered under the Colorado-street bridge.

Chief of Detectives Cline also started an investigation of several "crank" notes received while the search for Hickman was at its height. One of these is believed of particular importance by Cline and it may offer a clew to the mysterious "June Dunning" that Hickman at one time mentioned as an accomplice.



The note was mailed from Alhambra on Sunday or Monday following the delivery of the mutilated body on Saturday night, and has been retained with hundreds of letters and messages considered of no importance at the time. It stated that the writer was June Dunning and that she was leaving the State, and police should make no search for her.

GOLDEN RULE BOOK

Chief Cline yesterday uncovered this note, and it will be investigated as a probable aid in determining whether Hickman had a woman assistant in the kidnaping.

A "golden rule" note book found among the possessions of Hickman when he was apprehended near Perdleton, Or., was shown to newspaper men yesterday by Cline, as interesting only because it discloses another side to the self-confessed killer's nature.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" is printed on the cover of the book, and just inside the cover appear the words "purity and truth," printed in almost identical letters with pen as those in the death notes. Several meaningless words follow, apparently practice phrases in penmanship. On other pages were found the words to half a hundred popular songs, almost all of a sentimental tone.

Both Hickman and Hunt confess the robbery and shooting, but disagree as to who did the actual killing. Hickman says that he carried a .32-caliber automatic that night and Hunt a .38. Hunt asserts that his gun had the safety catch on and he did not fire a shot. In addition to the two signed confessions the grand jury will be shown a bullet taken from the body of the murdered druggist, and police say that it is of .38 caliber. The grand jury will be asked to return an indictment charging Hickman and Hunt with the robbery and slaying, according to Dist.-Atty. Keyes. Hunt is held in jail.

Hickman last night told County Jailer Frank Dewar the details of a robbery at San Francisco, where he secured a high-priced trombone by a ruse. Hickman says that he bent and twisted the instrument and threw it away in Elysian Park, a few nights before the kidnaping.

County officials request that the finder of the battered horn return it to the Sheriff's office, where it may be used as additional evidence against the self-confessed kidnaper and slayer.

Attorney A. Gray Gilmer of Oklahoma City arrived here yesterday and will handle the defense of Hunt. Gilmer said that he has been engaged by C. L. Hunt, father of Welby, who lives in Seminole, Okla., and that he has been a friend of the family for many years. The attorney had a short conference with his client, but refused to indicate his plan of defense until the return of the indictment.

NEW DRY TESTS SCHEDULED

Examination for Administrator and Assistants Will Be Conducted Within Short Time

Another United States civil service examination has been called by the Federal commission for prohibition administrator, assistant prohibition administrator for enforcement work and assistant administrator for permissive work for California, it was announced yesterday in Washington.

Maj. Frank R. McReynolds, who has held the post of administrator for Southern California and Arizona for the past two years, is reported to have failed in a former examination. Maj. McReynolds said yesterday he plans to take the new examination and it appears, from the statement of the commission, that the results of the prior examination have been annulled, referring to them as "not finally determined."

The examination is open to all bona fide residents of California. The entrance salaries range from $4400 to $6000 for the administrator and from $3300 to $4800 for assistants.

There will be no written examination, it was stated, but applicants will be rated according to training, experience and fitness. Actual prohibition enforcement experience is unnecessary, qualification being left to the judgment of the commission.

Personal investigation of the applicants will be made, which will include oral interviews, while fingerprints will be taken to check the accuracy of candidate's statements concerning arrests and conviction. Further information may be obtained at the Washington offices of the commission or at Room 616 Federal Building here. Applications must be filed by the 31st inst.

SUIT NAMES WHOLE FAMILY

Carter De Haven and All His Folks Cited to Court to Answer Action Over Auto Crash

Because of an automobile collision at Vine street and Santa Monica Boulevard several weeks ago, the whole Carter De Haven family will be drawn into litigation started in the Small Claims Court by W. P. Cole of 2123 South Ridgely Drive.

Asserting damages totaling $35.75 were done to his automobile as a result of a collision with the machine operated by Carter De Haven, Jr., son of the actor, Cole sought a complaint from Clerk Lathrop of the Small Claims Court.

But Cole was at a loss whom to name defendant. De Haven, Jr., is a minor; the father is out of the city on business, and to top that off, the De Havens were recently divorced. Finally he named the whole family as joint defendants and ordered the summons to be served on them at 6311 La Mirada street.

Municipal Judge Bogue will adjudicate the damage case on the 10th inst., at 10 a.m.

TAXI DRIVER ARRESTED IN GIRL'S CASE

Held on Contributing to Delinquency Charge in Child's Disappearance

Edmund D. Kearney, a taxicab driver, of 526 South Union Drive, was being held by police last night on a charge of suspicion of contributing to the delinquency of a minor growing out of the disappearance Saturday of Florence Ellison, 14-year-old daughter of Deputy Sheriff Ellison.

The girl was found in a fatigued condition in Manchester avenue, near Central avenue, yesterday noon by Officer Dary. Police Surgeon Brownsberger, Receiving Hospital, said the girl appeared as if drugged.

Policewoman Curley is caring for the girl in Juvenile Hall until the District Attorney's office can investigate today. Lew F. Hykes, also a salesman and Kearney's room-mate, is being held with Kearney.

Both the girl and Kearney said they met on Hill street between Seventh and Eighth streets, at about midnight during the New Year celebration, that they had drinks together, that Kearney invited her to get in his machine, that she accepted, that after a drive through Chinatown they spent the night in his apartment.

The girl disappeared while on her way from her father's home, 723 Bonnie Beach Place, to visit her mother, Mrs. Cora Steiner, 923 Clifton street, late Saturday. She said she became lost and finally joined the New Year celebrators downtown.

Officer Dray recognized her on the street from pictures exhibited of the missing girl at headquarters.

Lewis F. Hykes, 30 years of age, was arrested last night at his rooms, 926 South Union street, by Detective Lieutenants Stevens, Hickey and Allen on a charge of suspicion of contributing to the delinquency of a minor after he was said to have been in Carney's room Saturday night.

STAGES GIVE SPECIAL RATES

Beginning tomorrow the Pioneer Stages of the California Transit Company will, under authority of the State Railroad Commission, inaugurate a special rate of $16 for the round trip between Los Angeles and San Francisco and Oakland. The rate will be in effect for twenty days and will have a return limit of ten days. The Pioneer stages also announce special excursion rates from Los Angeles to all points in California. In this case the fares will be one and one-third times the regular one-way fares applying between all points.

BOY SCOUTS of Los Angeles are studying the tooling and decoration of leather garments and harness, and have completed outfits for themselves reminiscent of the picturesque days of yore. Chaps and sombreros, leather cuffs, vests and hatbands have been made by the youthful artisans, duplicating in miniature the cowboy accoutrements without which no film plainsman seems authentic.

Raymond Lovell and Elmer Rose of Troop 78, and Charles Budworth of Troop 71 are justly proud of their costumes, which are complete from wide-brimmed hat to high-heeled, spurred boots.

BURIAL HOUR CHANGED TO AFTERNOON

Service for Seward Cole to be Conducted at 3 p.m. Instead of in Morning

Change in the time of funeral services for Seward Cole, eldest son of the late Senator Cornelius Cole and pioneer real estate operator of Los Angeles, was announced yesterday. Originally planned for this morning, the services instead will be conducted at 3 p.m. today from the chapel of Hollywood Cemetery. Private services at 2 p.m. at the family residence, 1156 North El Centro avenue, will precede the ceremonies at the cemetery.

SEWARD COLE

Mr. Cole, who was born in Sacramento March 13, 1856, died last Saturday morning following an illness of six months. He had been a resident of Los Angeles for forty-eight years and at the time of his death was senior member of the real estate firm of Cole & Brown and president and chief executor of the Cornelius Cole estate. Before coming to Los Angeles in 1879 he engaged in business in San Francisco. He is credited with being one of the first real estate men to visualize the possibilities of Hollywood, the original Cole estate, Colegrove, founded by Senator Cole, now being part of South Hollywood.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Eleanor Brydges Cole; two sons, Seward Edward Cole and Cornelius Cole II; a daughter, Mrs. James Spalding Bodrero; a brother, George Townsend Cole of Los Angeles; three sisters, Mrs. James G. McLaughlin of New York, Mrs. Howard Waring and Mrs. Reginald H. Jones of Los Angeles, and a grand-daughter, Lydia Bodrero.

Active pallbearers will be: Col. Cornelius Cole Smith, Reginald H. Jones, Gregory McLaughlin, Robert Vincent, Arthur Howard, G. E. C. Hodgson, Capt. C. C. Brown and E. Avery McCarthy.

SOCIETY MEETING DELAYED

The Historical Society of Southern California, which was scheduled to meet this evening at the Board of Education rooms, will meet instead on the evening of the 10th inst., because of the fact that the Board of Education, which usually meets Monday evenings, postponed its meeting until this evening. The Historical Society, the oldest organization of its kind on this Coast, was founded in 1883 and has a present membership of 200. Arthur M. Ellis is president.

LAW OFFICES MOVED

The law offices of Lin Williams Price have been removed to 1008 Financial Center Building, Seventh and Spring streets, according to an announcement made last night.

SHOUP SEES PAGEANT

Southern Pacific Official, Accompanied by Mrs. Shoup, Visits Los Angeles

Paul G. Shoup, executive vice-president of the Southern Pacific, and Mrs. Shoup, were among the many hundreds of visitors from the north who witnessed the Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena yesterday, and the football game in the afternoon.

The railway official said last night that there is no special significance connected with his holiday visit here, that he is only looking after routine matters connected with his office.

HOLLYWOOD DEATH LAID TO SUICIDE

George Mitcheson, Jr., 32 years of age, wealthy Hollywood property owner, was found dead in his home at 1229 Orange Drive yesterday afternoon. He had taken his own life by placing a shotgun against his side and pulling the trigger, according to Hollywood police.

Three weeks ago Mitcheson's wife left him and went to Reno, taking their two young daughters. Mitcheson left his home and went to live in one of his bungalow courts, leaving some baggage in care of a friend, C. E. Schade of 6128 Romaine avenue. Last Friday Mitcheson went to Schade's house and got his baggage, saying he was going back to his own home to live.

Yesterday afternoon Schade went to visit Mitcheson and found the door ajar and papers accumulated on the front porch. He walked through the house and found Mitcheson's body in the kitchen. A shotgun was lying in the corner. Police said that Mitcheson evidently had propped the butt of the gun against the wall, placed the muzzle at his side and fired. Mitcheson left no notes or letters about the house. The body was taken to the County Morgue.

Public Invited and Date Set for 19th Inst.

Gov. Young will give a sort of accounting of his stewardship in the first year of his administration in an address at a luncheon at the Ambassador Thursday, the 19th inst., according to announcement by the Los Angeles League of Women Voters. The nonpartisan organization for the study of interest in government among women citizens.

Proposed legislation will be discussed by the Governor in this address, the announcement says, and it is presumably this phase of the address will deal largely with the necessity of revision of the State's tax system.

"The four tax bills passed by the last Legislature, as temporary expedients to prevent serious reduction in State revenues as the result of court decisions, were strongly opposed in Los Angeles. Promise was made at the time by the administration that a new tax system would be devised and enacted into law by the Legislature of 1929, to provide adequate revenues and to eliminate admitted faults in the present patched-up system," the announcement says.

"The working of the new Cabinet system will be described by the Governor. Once a month the heads of departments meet with the Governor. Citizens and the press are present and the business of the State thus is considered publicly.

"The luncheon will be open to the public and an attendance of between 400 and 500 is expected. Tickets can be obtained only at the Los Angeles League of Women Voters headquarters, 805 Brack-Shops, telephone MEtropolitan 3684."

PRIEST'S HOME BURGLARIZED

Entering the home of Father Benson, 6406 Parmalee street, while the priest was conducting services Sunday night, a burglar escaped with $45, according to reports to the Sheriff's office yesterday.

Henry Bickman, 556 South Bickman street, reported burglars stole radio equipment and clothing from his home valued at $300, while another pair of burglars who entered the home of J. R. Moyer, 1136 East Eighty-second street, obtained only 52 cents.

McNAMEE TO SPEAK BEFORE CLUB TODAY

Graham McNamee, president of the National Broadcasting Company, will be the principal speaker at the Advertising Club luncheon today noon at the Biltmore. He came to Los Angeles primarily to announce the football game between Stanford and Pittsburgh. Charles de Sage, French artist, will have an exhibition of posters. He will be introduced by French Consul Henri Didot. The five-minute talk will be by Bert Butterworth. Louis Jacques will be chairman of the day.

DR. M'MILLAN TO SEAL LIPS

Murder Suspect Will Refuse to Give Testimony

Inquest Will Be Conducted at Morgue Today

Despite the fact that he has protested his innocence since his arrest, Dr. Charles McMillan, charged with the murder of Mrs. Amelia Appleby, wealthy widow of a Chicago inventor, will not testify before the county grand jury when the case is brought before that body.

This was learned from Attorney Ray Chesebro, retained to defend Dr. McMillan. He had a conference with the accused man in the County Jail yesterday.

"I have instructed my client not to testify if called before the grand jury tomorrow," declared the attorney.

"Although the doctor firmly maintains his innocence I advise him to stand on his constitutional rights and refuse to make any statement to the jurors. Dr. McMillan is in a perturbed mental state as a result of the many assertions made against him and it would be unwise for him to be subjected to another grilling at this time."

While the defense organized to refute the charges of the Sheriff's office investigators against the physician, the District Attorney's office prepared to present a mass of evidence against Dr. McMillan to obtain an indictment.

Deputy sheriffs, working under the direction of Capt. Bright, yesterday discovered a brown-stained hammer in the garage of the Appleby home on North Hobart Boulevard. The tool will be turned over to County Chemist Abernathy for an analysis of the stains, in an effort to link it with the death of the woman, and to determine if the stains are human blood.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Murray, in charge of the grand jury, yesterday held a lengthy conference with Capt. Bright, head of the Sheriff's homicide squad, and announced that he will be ready today to go before the grand jury and expects to get an indictment without trouble.

Some of the evidence in the case is expected to be made public at an inquest over the body of Mrs. Appleby at the Noble Funeral Chapel, San Fernando, at 9:30 a.m. today. Deputy Coroner Montfort will be in charge.

It is expected that the officers will present to the Coroner's jury and the grand jury letters purporting to show that the doctor advised Mrs. Appleby's real-estate tenants to make payments to him shortly after the woman met her death. They also assert they can establish that the doctor posed as Mrs. Appleby's husband and that he can not establish an alibi for his activities at the time fixed for the murder.

In addition to the asserted letters written by the accused man, women's jewelry wearing apparel and other feminine effects, asserted to have been found in the doctor's apartment will be placed in evidence, and handwriting experts are expected to be called to determine the authorship of a will which gave the physician power of attorney over Mrs. Appleby's large estate.

UNIVERSITY LECTURERS ANNOUNCED

Notable Scientists and Instructors to Be Heard at Summer Session

Many well-known scientists and instructors are included in the faculty of the summer session to be held in Los Angeles by the University of California during the coming summer, according to the preliminary announcement, which the summer session office has just published.

One of the most outstanding is Dr. Robert Sessions Woodworth, author and professor of psychology at Columbia University. From the University of Rennes, France, comes Dr. Alfred Feuillerat, professor of English literature, who will give three special lectures in the field of Shakespeare and poetry. Prof. Edward K. Broadus, head of the department of English at the University of Alberta, Canada, will give two courses in English, while Dr. Charles Grosvenor Osgood, professor of English at Princeton, will hold classes in English literature and the classics, and in Milton and his contemporaries.

Dr. Lawrence Martin, chief of the division of maps, Library of Congress, is to give a course in the geography of Europe and ten special lectures in the field of political geography. Many other instructors from universities of the East and Middle West are to be included on the summer session faculty, as well as popular California lecturers. Instruction is to be offered in thirty-three departments.

Courses in play production and the esthetics of the theater are to be given by Irving Pitchel, actor and formerly director of the drama branch of the Community Arts Association, Santa Barbara.

WHAT'S THE ODDS?

The talkative barber says that the girl who kissed to make up now makes up to kiss.

USES OF CORN

If they don't make whisky from corn they can make face powder—which goes to the head just the same.

ALL IS VANITY

A philosopher says that vanity has no sex. But the men magnanimously assure the ladies that they can have it all.

TOPSY TURVY

We have a funny idea of justice in this country. Here we have a woman arrested under the Mann Act and the wrong man pinched under the Wright Act. Does the climax come with the second act?

CUTTING IN

Now that the Governor of New Mexico has appointed a progressive Republican to fill a vacancy in the United States Senate the Congressional Record may soon be spiced up with some Cutting remarks.

TAKING THE LOAD

American motor trucks are replacing the mules in the mines of Chile and American taxis are driving the ancient jinrickshas from the streets of Tokio and other oriental cities. In an indirect way we are becoming the world's burden bearer.

PLENTY OF OIL

It takes an average of a million barrels of oil a month to fuel the ships that stop at Los Angeles Harbor. The only port where this is exceeded is at New York and most of the oil used there comes from Los Angeles. Modern fleets are kept going by our own petroleum industry.

NOT RUNNING

Secretary Mellon says that he is not a candidate and does not care to be. He does not choose to run—although he is careful to avoid the copyrighted declaration of his chief. One does not care and the other does not choose. They are not required to be emphatic. It is sometimes impolite.

BUYING ON TIME

No use in the financiers and economists trying to discourage installment buying. The custom has become thoroughly intrenched in the daily life of the nation. If America is a country of comfortable homes it is largely through the amiable activities of the installment man. So far there is little to worry about.

AN HONEST LAWYER

In a local court in connection with a trial for a minor criminal offense the attorney for the defendant stayed the ordinary progress of the hearing to explain to the court that he had just become convinced of the guilt of his client and would ask the jury to render a verdict accordingly. Some lawyers might consider this unethical, yet it represents the highest type of citizenship. The law is intended to see that justice is done—not that it be delayed or evaded.

BUSIEST CORNER

Take an average day and a normal run of traffic in downtown Los Angeles and it will appear that more motorists pass the intersection of Eighth and Flower streets than any other crossing. This applies to what is known as the day-run and is not in competition with the rush hours at a few other congested corners. According to an expert count more cars will pass at Eighth and Flower between the hours of 9 and 5 than at Seventh and Broadway. There is no street car service to interfere and the autos flow on without interruption. Yet it is only a few years back that Eighth and Flower street intersection was considered out in the country. No prophet could possibly have foretold what has happened.

PROPHETIC APPLESAUCE

Timid people are so often frightened by prophecies of evil by soothsayers of large pretension that it is well to cast a backward glance over some of the notable predictions for 1927 that have failed of fulfillment. Warner B. Leathers warned Atlanta that it would be destroyed by a hurricane on August 31, but there was not even a gentle breeze there that day. One of the most widely known seers, Belle Bart, gravely predicted that the French debt would be paid in 1927, that autocracy would be reestablished in Germany, Edison would die and Rockefeller would lose his health. Mme. Fraya, the Parisian palmist, predicted that France would pay part of its debt to us and that prohibition would be abolished. None of the Bart or Fraya prophecies was fulfilled, nor was that of Mrs. Benninghoven, who said that New York would be destroyed. However, it is to be noted that the digestion of no fully normal man or woman ever is in the least impaired by this sort of applesauce.

LOOKING FORWARD

I

Abstract perfection is unattainable; it is a horizon that recedes as civilization advances. The end visualized by one generation is attained by the next, and proves to be only a way-station on the still-ascending path of progress—the pathway leading to the stars. Four great civilizations have faltered and perished on this grade within the limits of recorded history; but a new civilization has always arisen to carry the banner of progress to hitherto inaccessible heights. Faintly to be discerned in the debris of the canyons of the mountain ranges and exposed by the drifting sands of the great deserts along the west coast of America—the Pacific Slope—are vestiges of vanished civilizations unknown to history, races that waxed and waned before the first historian was born. Looking backward, the vision is clouded and the horizon peopled with phantoms; but the present is painted in the glowing colors of the noonday, and the future in the apricot hue of the dawn.

For more than four decades the eagle of The Times has spread his pinions to greet the new year, soared to the empyrean and swept with a comprehensive, penetrating vision the far-flung horizons of the Pacific domain. Each year it has been necessary to attain a new height; for the horizons have receded until they now stretch from Vancouver to Panama, from the slopes of the Rocky Mountains to the islands of the Mid-Pacific, across the expanse of water where the East and West meet to the old civilization that is dying and the new just coming into being, to those lands of mystery and promise, Japan, China, Manchuria and Siberia.

What marvels of progress have been wrought in four decades, by a single generation, in what the world has come to regard its greatest wonderland; the Pacific area, stretching away to the east and the west from the Pacific Coast! In California the eagle has witnessed the reclamation of the desert, and in Washington and Oregon that of the wilderness. In Los Angeles county alone, in territory that but forty-two years ago was the hunting ground of the bear, the coyote and the mountain lion, now glow more electric lights at night than there are discernible stars in the heavens above; and a population then less than 50,000 is pointing toward the third million. Agriculture and industry, struggling valiantly, are keeping pace with growing population; and over all, like a silver veil with golden spangles representing education, science, architecture, painting, sculpture, literature and music floats a higher culture as distinctive as the natural beauties and poetic charm of this magic garden on the rim of the Pacific.

Dazzling peaks of progress, each as distinctive in kind, stud the whole of the Pacific Coast area, which might be likened to a great gallery and museum, or an enchanted garden, stretching from Vancouver far down the coast of Lower California. The sculptors of the infinite, or perhaps the Titans, molded those mountain pyramids, unrivaled in height and scenic beauty on the North American continent; and the canyons with their dashing, sparkling streams where bathe the nymphs from the gardens of Allah. The skies with their rainbow hues—from the Northern Lights to the Southern Cross—the lakes of sky-blue water, the primeval forests, the lowlands tapestried with cactus, palm, fern, fruit orchards in their fragrant bloom of pink and white, groves of golden oranges, and the open spaces between, in their colorful raiment woven from a million flowers—all these were painted by artists who came down from their studio beyond the stars to teach to the children of men the charm, the mystery and the love of the beautiful.

In Europe the great galleries are roofed over to keep out the sun, the rain and the dew, compressed within four walls, and filled with masterpieces and near-masterpieces that came from the palette or chisel of men long since dead. On the Pacific Coast they occupy the great open spaces, where the heavens form the roof, the mountain palisades the walls, where the colors on the canvas never fade; for they are renewed by those celestial artists, the sun, the dew and the rain with each returning spring.

II

What a pleasure ground for the tourist, who can motor over the whole of the 2000-mile paved Pacific Coast Highway from Vancouver to San Diego without once passing beyond the confines of this enchanted garden, with its natural museums and art palaces!

What a sketching ground for the painter who seeks to give faithful expression on his canvas of the impressions received from the contemplation of the wonderful, the romantic, the mysterious and the beautiful in nature!

What a hunting ground exists in those primeval forests of the north, the last in North America, for those who find recreation and pleasure in the pursuit of big game!

How tame are the much-advertised scenic tours of Austria, Switzerland and Italy to one who has motored over the Columbia River Highway!

How vividly are pictured the days of the gold rush to California, with reminiscenses of Bret Harte, Mark Twain and, later, of Kipling and Robert Louis Stevenson, when one visits in San Francisco the haunts that once they knew, and follows in motor car the paths that were blazed by the red-shirted gold hunters, along the banks of the Sacramento, Feather and American rivers, and into the gulches haunted by their phantoms now silent urns in which their dust reposes!

How little one knows of the whimsical moods of the phantom sculptors, with their eyes of stars and chisels that carved the Milky Way, who has not visited the forests of giant redwoods of Central California, and that sunken garden with its bridal veil of shimmering spray that is Yosemite!

Artists and poets for two centuries have painted and sung the glow of the Alps in Switzerland; but only those who have ridden along the highway from Lone Pine to Bishop know how superior are the California Sierras in architectural formation, and how much more colorful is the Sierra glow, which, in Inyo county as in Switzerland, is not a phenomenon of the mountain tops, but of the skies above.

What a rich and virgin field for the archaeologist seeking traces of vanished civilizations is offered by the remnants, covered by sand or imprisoned in asphalt, still preserved in the Southwest! Who seeks the antique will find here what may be the beginning of antiquity.

No trans-Atlantic itinerary can surpass the itinerary that is available by railed, paved and graded highways on the Pacific Coast of Canada, our own country and Mexico.

When one spends a summer in Europe he feels he is coming in contact with a generation that is looking backward, that lives in the past, that boasts the accomplishments of generations now reduced to dust or clay; but has little to show as a record of achievement in its lifetime, and looks with a tremulous or pessimistic eye to the future.

Who comes to the Pacific Coast sees monuments of achievement rising to commemorate a generation still living. He gazes into eyes that envision a future still more glorious than the past. He comes into contact with a whole people that is pressing energetically forward and upward; who sees in what has been accomplished only an earnest of greater things that can and must be done. Here is a civilization built by optimists and for optimists, where pessimists are regarded as weeds growing in a garden of roses.

Love of hazard and the spirit of adventure opened the West; and in the second generation that spirit has not departed.

III

In the six sections that comprise this Midwinter Edition, the forty-third Midwinter issued by The Times under uninterrupted management, are to be found statistics that record in number, measure and value the material progress registered during the last forty-two years over the greater part of the Pacific area. It reads like white magic, and it is a narrative of which only the opening parts have been written, a serial with a new chapter each year, whose succeeding numbers will reach farther into the future than Thebes and Nineveh into the past.

There are at present too few hands for the work to be performed. There is something to see on the Pacific Coast not to be seen elsewhere in the world, something to learn that nowhere else can be taught, something to do that nowhere else has been done. In the decades over which this survey extends some of the most notable achievements have been accomplished by those who came to scoff but who caught what was termed the gold fever in the "forties, the agricultural and horicultural fever in the nineties" and the industrial and cultural fever in the first quarter of the present century.

The Pacific area is the area of opportunity, the domain of progress, the land where the lure of adventure leads to the joy of achievement.

The LEE SIDE o' LA

By Lee Shippey

OTHER great cities may be as cosmopolitan as Los Angeles, but in none we know can one pass so quickly from one atmosphere to another. In company with Walter Sinclair, who writes stories and is interested in the unusual, we took a walk yesterday which in a single hour carried us through transplanted but authentic bits of Mexico, China, Japan, the Philippines, Hawaii, Turkey, Greece, Italy and France. In passing, we also saw turbaned Hindus, sailors from a dozen foreign ports and one golden-shoed oriental robed like a mandarin. And we'd never got out of sight of the new City Hall.

Actors Sure to Eat

The actors in the Chinese theater on Jackson street are not like some we know—their meals are part of their pay, and they are dined heartily before every performance. The dining-room in the theater is different from any Chinese chop suey place you ever saw, being 100 per cent Chinese. Cutlery is no more in evidence there than tailors were in the Garden of Eden, and the actors can do more things with chopsticks than a trapdrummer can with drumsticks.

We knocked, but no one harkened. We stepped in, but no one noticed. The actors seemed intent on collecting that part of their pay to the uttermost mouthful. Once in Paris a Chinese friend invited us to a seventeen-course dinner, and seemed pained when we dropped out completely at course twelve; and never till we saw those actors did we understand why.

Obstructive

Little Nippon

First street east of Main is becoming Nippon avenue, the Yokohama Specie Bank marking its boundary. The Japanese are good business men, and many of their stores would do credit to any city. Only a few are pretentious, but many are artistic.

The new Buddhist temple at First street and Central avenue is a place worth seeing. It is a handsome building, and its altar and chancel are beautiful.

Everything there, as well as the priests' robes, came from Japan. The curate, the Rev. Suginari, showed us through courteously, and put on his official robes for us. He looked like a splendidly gowned and capped candidate for a degree in some American university.

No idols or images are on the altar, but a light burns perpetually before it.

So Different

"We have services every Sunday evening," Dr. Suginari said. "Visitors are welcome, but we are very different from Christians. We are here to serve our own people and make no effort to convert others."

Breath of France

We wandered on to a French patisserie. We can speak French like a native—of Kansas—and were nervy enough to do it. "You have the real air of France here," we attempted to say. "Oui," agreed the woman behind the counter. "But, sacre bleu! It is in your subway that one breathes the true atmosphere of Paris."

Shirts to Order

"We've often thought that when we grow very rich we will have our shirts made to order. That was, to our simple mind, the ultimate idea of class. On Spring street we paused before a custom shirtmaker's shop. Having sold six stories in a single month, Sinclair was feeling very rich, so we ventured in. But we felt diffident, and hesitated. A Filipino brushed past us—and got a package of shirts. A negro followed—and did the same. Then we dared approach the proprietor.

"Sure," he said. "We make lots of shirts for Japanese and Filipinos, because they're small men and don't want to buy ready-made boys' shirts. We also make a good many for negroes—they like more striking patterns than the regular stores carry. We have, of course, exclusive customers, too."

TREASURY OPTIMISM

The business forecast for 1928 by Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon is, like Secretary Hoover's report on national business, conservatively optimistic. Following a brief review and analysis of business conditions during 1927, Secretary Mellon says: "All of these circumstances justify us in the belief that we may look forward to continued progress in the year ahead." If Mr. Mellon has made any mistakes in office, they have been too small to discover in the brilliant light of his successes and certainly must have been on the side of conservatism. Therefore, his forecast for 1928 is vastly more than a political prognostication or affable bit of stereotyped New Year's optimism. His confident remark upon the clear dawn of 1928 should serve to justify and strengthen the national confidence for 1928. He speaks with authority and his statements are never lacking in wisdom and judgment.

Mr. Mellon again calls to the attention of the country the remarkable paradox of American business that is as pleasing as it is surprising—the fall of commodity prices during a period when wages continued at a high level. No phase of American business better illustrates the stability of industry and commerce in the United States than this ability to make readjustments while continuing progress.

The Secretary pays a compliment to American business men in a paragraph reciting the good results of their sound judgment. "Notwithstanding the fact that commodity prices continued to fall throughout the year," he says, "a large volume of business was done which was, in itself, an unusual circumstance and showed the ability of business to introduce economies in production and to exercise the necessary caution by avoiding the accumulation of excessive inventories." Here again the ability to adjust activity to existing circumstance was the prime factor of success. The whole story of 1927 business is one of carefully planned progress and Mr. Mellon predicts that the story will be continued in the next installment of measured time—1928.

THE SILLY SEASON

At a commercial club luncheon in Chicago it was brought out that Canadians, Australians and other wards of the British Empire, as well as Englishmen themselves had canceled something like $3,000,000 worth of orders for American goods and wares that had been placed with Chicago manufacturers and jobbers. All this on account of Mayor Bill Thompson's private feud with King George. They did not want to do business with a city that would tacitly permit such foolishness. Any man who hopes to gather political capital by stirring up ill feeling against England is bound to injure others as well as himself.

FRENCH FINANCE

It is said that of every dollar collected as taxes in France 60 cents is applied to payments of debt and interest. Twenty cents goes to keep up the army and navy and the other 20 cents must cover all other expenditures. No wonder the French have to practice official parsimony. There are few fat jobs left for the politicians.

PEN POINTS

It's fine to have an employee who is loyal, but one who will lie for you will lie to you.

Any city man, without previous experience, can make a nice living out of chickens. All he needs is an easy chair, a pencil and paper.

If he says he wouldn't mind the woman of his choice having been kissed before, he hasn't yet found the woman of his choice.

If he wads paper money in his pocket, he has many good friends who will feel sorry for his destitute widow.

You just can't have children. The way apartments are built now, there is scarcely room for the police dog.

Americanism: Arranging your affairs so you'll have a swell sedan for your ride to the poor house.

No wonder the Laplander never amounts to anything. Plans you make at night are foolish, and he has six months of night.

Robbing the hotel room of towels is wrong. Nobody is privileged to do any robbing in that vicinity except the hotel man.

There's always an alumni fight against Greek letter fraternities, led by the old boys who never were asked to join one.

Doubtless a he-man is one who walks three blocks to get a cigar after supper instead of backing out the car.

The year 1927 made 643 new millionaires, not one of whom got that way by buying land he never had seen.

You don't hunt for suckers. You just ask somebody to point out the villagers who think they are very slick business men.

A principle and a prejudice aren't alike. One is delight in something that pays you a profit; the other a grouch because you lost.

UNDER TWO SKIES

BY FRED HOGUE

Like migratory birds from southern lands that soar far afield to northern climes when the buds begin to burst, but return to the home nest when the leaf is torn from the branch by a blast of autumn and the first snowflake falls, so our artists who flitted away to Europe in the spring returned to their Southern California studios in the fall.

William Wendt, first among the California landscape artists, spent the summer in Bavaria, sketching the countryside of Southern Germany in the lake district outside Munich, in the foothills of the Bavarian Alps; while Arthur Gilbert, known here through his canvases of the Sierras and the Indio Desert, spent the summer in France, sketching in the fishing villages of Brittany and the orchards of Normandy.

Their canvases occupy adjoining salons in the Stendahl galleries at the Ambassador Hotel; and form a striking contrast to the exhibitions of these two artists in the same galleries a year ago. Then Gilbert was painting the desert country about Palm Springs and Wendt had just finished his celebrated canvases, now scattered over eleven States, of autumn in high Sierras.

Familiar in a general way with the subjects they were painting here and abroad, I was interested to learn how their expression on canvas would agree with my impression in the face of nature; and to discover whether Normandy, Brittany and Bavaria would appear more beautiful in their eyes than what they had painted here.

Southern California never appears so lovely, so delectable to me as when I stand, a self-exile in a foreign land, before a landscape glorified on canvas, in song and in story by artist, poet and romancer beyond the seas, and compare it with the impression before my mind's eye of what I have left behind.

There may be skies of a deeper blue, sunsets that are more colorful, flowers of more radiant hues and fruits of a more luscious flavor than those of our Southland, but, if there be, one must pass to a planet lighted by another sun than ours to find them.

Perhaps some who read this will scoff; but the scoffers will be those living here who have not visited other parts of the earth noted for their beauty, or those living in the East who are familiar with Europe, but not with the west coast of their own country.

If I had not seen Wendt's canvases of the mountains, valleys, charming bits of landscape hidden away in the folds of the hills of our own countryside, I might have been jealous of his recorded impressions of the quaint villages, the lush-green turf, the flowering meadows and the azure skies of Bavaria.

I am sometimes puzzled whether nature itself is as beautiful as some of Wendt's interpretations of it. Perhaps it is true that the beauty which is a work of art is higher than natural beauty because it is the offspring of the mind. But only in a limited sense can this be true; for one who has spent the best years of his life with tubes and palette has learned the countless limitations of him who seeks with colors, light and shade to reproduce the glories of nature. No one has ever reproduced the dazzling rays of the sun at midday. That is why the artist sketches in the early morning and the late afternoon, or on a cloudy day.

Wendt paints nature only in its gentler, pensive moods; when the sun's face is obscured by clouds, or when it is on the rim of the horizon. His canvases might be likened to a dream of the beauties of nature, rather than the beauty itself.

Born in Germany, one might have expected a prejudice in Wendt's canvases for the German landscapes, but it is not so. The water in the Bavarian lakes is the blue of the Bavarian skies. It is colder than that of our Sierra lakes, because the color of the water is that of the sky above it, and our southern skies are a warmer and a deeper blue than those of Southern Germany. The same is true of the Alpine lakes. They are not so blue, so mirror-like, as those of the southern Sierras because the skies above the Alps are colder and verge on the gray.

Neither are the Alps so colorful as the Sierras. Robbed of their mantle of snow, they would sink to the commonplace. For the granite rock of the Alps is a uniform gray. It is not mineralized like that of the Sierras and, for this reason, lacks the charm of changing color that is the crowning glory of our California mountains.

Our painters have no end of grief because the landscape of California is so much warmer, so much more colorful, than that of the east of Europe. When their canvases are exhibited in New York, London, Paris or Berlin those who have never visited Southern California say with a shrug, "It is beautiful; but the artist is faking. Nature in California cannot be so colorful as that."

Gilbert has brought back from France canvases which will bring to him a heightened recognition as one of the first painters of the West. He has already gone far as a painter; and his youth, restless energy and intensive application give promise that he will go further still. He is following the path of Constable and Turner, and the eminence they occupy may yet be his.

His youth shrinks at no hazard. He did not fear to paint at Vernon, where Monet founded his reputation as an artist and found his last resting place. Thus does youth stir with restless feet the ashes of the dead. And how the Normandy landscape alternately weeps and smiles under his brush! Some of his canvases remind me of rhapsodies.

Coming from a new land, he was charmed by the crumbling villages, the ruins of bridges builded in the time of the Romans, the narrow, tortuous streets, the weather-stained walls and the steep gabled roofs—remnants of the gothic in old Normandy. He was viewing these objectively; and he painted them as objects

A railroad store on wheels, a novel feature of the Union Pacific system, starts on a tour over the lines as far east as Salt Lake City today. Officially known as the supply train, this special organization performs the function that its name implies. It carries the supplies necessary for maintenance to supply points and on the return trip brings back obsolete equipment and that in need of repairs.

The supply train will make a noon-hour stop at Pomona where the Rotary Club will hold a luncheon meeting on board. W. R. Armstrong, general superintendent of the Union Pacific and himself a Rotarian, will be the host.

THE CORONER

The coroner is wearing many gold and precious stones, as only he goes faring to sit on human bones. For death is all around us, it lurks on every hand; the throes of doom confound us, so thickly they stand. A thousand men chugging along the crowded road, as shopward we go plugging to buy a pound of meat; and all the thousand drivers should race as safe and sane, if we would be survivers, and reach our homes again. If one of all those chuffers, is reckless, steeped in gin, the pedestrian suffers, the undertakers grin. The coroner, he teeters to some fine diamond store, and buys two gold repeaters, and sometimes three or four. He buys a coat of sable or ermine for his frau, for he is amply able to blow the rubes out. And it's become a scandal the people fly before them; learned to handle the ships that scrape the sky. They spend an hour in learning the aerial tricks, and then they're off spurning the earth and all its hicks. They go up like a rocket and make a whizzing sound; then they strike a pocket, or spin to the ground. The coroner is buying a large blue heaven with all these people dying; lousy with long green. The coroner, when resting from his near and far, is eagerly investing in stocks and bonds, at par, building him a palace of opals of pearl, and there his family Alice, will entertain an awful amateurs are flying airwards spangled skies, the coroner is living the choicest cakes and pies.

A railroad store on wheels, a novel feature of the Union Pacific system, starts on a tour over the lines in the west as fast Lake City today, officially known as the supply train, this special organization performs the function that its name implies. It carries the supplies necessary for maintenance to supply points and on the return trip brings back excess equipment and that in need of repairs.

The supply train will make a noon-day stop at Pomona where the Rotary Club will hold a luncheon meeting in honor of W. R. Armstrong, general superintendent of the Union Pacific and himself a Rotarian, will be the host.

PURPOSE GIVEN

"The reason for the supply train," said T. H. Knickerbocker, general manager, "is to provide an economical and efficient means of delivering material where it is wanted, on a specified time each month, and at the same time pick up all tools and other materials not needed and to make a regular clean-up of scrap on the railroad.

"The Union Pacific supply train is novel in that it is a series of cars, each fitted with shelving and bins that make it resemble a retail store. Each car is in charge of a man who is familiar with the placing of every item the car contains. The arrangement of the shelving and bins corresponds exactly to the shelves in the general stores at Los Angeles wherein the same materials are kept. In other words the whole scheme dovetails. Every car of the supply train was built and fitted out in the Los Angeles shops of the system.

LARGE PURCHASES

"In the past fiscal year this unit of the Union Pacific purchased a total of $6,633,883, a very large part of it right in Los Angeles. Over the entire Union Pacific system the purchases for the fiscal year aggregated $46,076,462. These figures perhaps give some conception of the enormous amount of materials regularly needed by railroads in the conduct of their business.

"Necessarily the most economical methods of distributing these materials to permit of a minimum of handling are desirable. Out of this situation grew the supply train. At the same time it permits the keeping of a complete inventory of supplies at various points and reduces the amount of needless material carried at such points.

"The Union Pacific System supply train is a complete operating unit. It carries besides the store supplies, a regular office and sleeping and dining cars for the crew, who make the round trip."

WOMAN POISONS HERSELF

Mrs. Crecy Simkins, 22 years of age, wife of R. H. Simkins, ended her life last night by swallowing a quantity of poison in the bedroom of her home, 218 1-4 South Santa Fe avenue, Huntington Park.

She had been separated from her husband for some time, police said, and only recently had been reunited to him.

Besides her husband Mrs. Simkins leaves two small children. She died shortly after being taken to the Huntington Park Hospital. The body was taken to the Klinker Funeral Parlors.

HIGH FENCE SCORED AS SPITE WORK

So to Get More Light on Subject Court Sets Date for Airing Neighbor Row

Whether Mrs. Emma Grant of 715 West Forty-third street has a right to erect an asserted "spite" fence along her property line and obstruct her neighbor's view will be decided before Municipal Judge Georgia Bullock on the 26th inst.

Complaining to Chief Deputy City Prosecutor Concannon that a fence had been erected in front of her windows, blocking the light, Mrs. Rose Peterson of 711 West Forty-third street sought a complaint against her neighbor.

Prosecutor Concannon sent Investigators Osgood and Benton out to view the fence. They reported a crudely constructed obstruction shutting out the light and air from the Peterson residence and recommended a complaint.

Taken before Judge Bullock, the defendant denied she is guilty of violating the building ordinance and demanded a trial. The magistrate set the trial date and ordered Mrs. Grant released on her own recognizance.

Auction Bridge Expert Sends Tag Case Proxy

Trapped in the speeder's net, Milton C. Work, international authority on auction bridge, sent an emissary to the City Traffic Court yesterday explaining he will be in San Francisco tomorrow, when his case is called in Municipal Judge Valentine's division.

City Traffic Officer Beking reported he issued a tag December 26, last, for speeding forty miles an hour in a fifteen-mile zone.

The emissary will appear in behalf of the defendant when the case is brought up tomorrow, he announced. Work gave his address as 1400 South Wilton Place.

SOCIETY

BY JUANA NEAL LEVY

One of the loveliest of the New Year's Eve affairs was the dinner with which Commodore and Mrs. James Stuart Blackton entertained at their lovely new home, 6100 Woodrow Wilson Drive, when Sir Thomas Lipton was the especial guest of honor. The affair was en famille and guests included only Mrs. W. J. Hilburn (mother of the hostess,) Miss Violet Blackton, Charles Blackton, Burr McIntosh, Sir Thomas and his secretary, Mr. Westwood.

Complimenting the honor guests, Irish flags were combined with the decorations which included purple Scotch heather, poinsettias, California fruits and ferns, the table being lighted by red and green candles, the former in green holders and the latter in red candelabra.

In the evening after dinner Miss Violet Blackton and her brother, Charles, had invited 100 young guests in to celebrate the New Year's coming and during the interim an impromptu vaudeville performance was given, each guest doing his "stunt," and Sir Thomas added his bit with the telling of Irish and Scotch stories, singing Irish and Scotch songs, and ended by giving an Irish jig.

In the race of the Shamrock in 1913 at Seagate, N. Y., Mrs. Blackton assisted Sir Thomas as his American hostess while the Countess of Shaftsbury was his English hostess, and in the 1919 race Lady John Ferguson presided as the English hostess at the tea, while Mrs. Blackton was the American hostess.

On his return home Commodore and Mrs. Blackton accompanied Sir Thomas aboard the Baltic, and were his house guests at his English country home, Oig, in Middlesex, twenty-five miles out of London.

It is interesting to know that while at his English home, every Sunday morning Sir Thomas takes a drive of forty miles around the countryside and gives to each little child of that area a box of chocolates, while every other Sunday he visits the Lipton Foundation Orphanage, which he maintains, and there also distributes a box of chocolates to each child in the orphanage.

While in England Mrs. Blackton has often accompanied Sir Thomas on these drives.

After the return of Sir Thomas to Los Angeles in the very near future, Mrs. Blackton is planning a large reception and tea at the Roosevelt in his honor, between 400 and 500 guests to be bidden.

Home Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Eleanor MacGowan, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Granville MacGowan, to Guy C. Earl, Jr., took place at the family residence in West Adams street at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, December 31, Dr. George Davidson officiating.

The maid of honor, Miss Mary McMillan, wore pink and silver tulle over taffeta and carried an arm garland of Cecile Brunner roses. The matron of honor was Mrs. Richard Tracy St. John, and other attendants were Miss Bernardine Murphy and Mrs. Ransome Henshaw. All were attired in blue gowns with bouffant skirts and ruffles of pink and blue tulle and carried arm garlands of pansies.

The bride's gown was ivory moire with rhinestone garniture and flowers. The veil was made with a Russian headdress of duchesse lace, the train being edged with point lace and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

The ceremony took place in the living-room in front of an altar draped in antique yellow brocades and supporting a silver canopy and candelabras placed upon an amethyst and silver cloth.

Yellow Pernet roses were used on the altar and banked up on the mantel, while an aisle was formed of silver ribbons fastened to tall candelabra filled with lighted tapers. The house was decorated with bowls of spring flowers in silver urns. Dr. and Mrs. MacGowan were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Guy C. Earl, parents of the bridegroom. About 450 guests were bidden.

After the wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Earl, Jr., will be at home at 3734 West Adams street.

Visitor Here

Arriving here this morning from the north on the Owl will be Miss Jean Scott, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Scott of Berkeley, who is returning to Columbia University after passing the holidays with her parents. During her stay in Los Angeles she will be the house guest of Miss Rosalind Shepard, 5224-B Sunset Boulevard.

New Year's Eve Party

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bettner Meloth of 7613 De Longpre avenue entertained New Year's Eve with a bridge-dinner to which sixteen guests were bidden. A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out with chrysanthemums and lilies, as well as in the favors, caps and bridge tallies, while a buffet breakfast was served after the party had watched the New Year in.

Mr. and Mrs. Meloth will leave the early part of this week for a week's rest at Palm Springs.

Delightful Affair

Among the many delightful affairs given by members of the subdeb set was that with which Miss Margaret Colgan entertained Christmas Eve at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Colgan, on Windsor Boulevard, honoring her sister, Miss Arlene Colgan, who has come down from Berkeley to enjoy the holiday vacation.

Miss Arelene is a senior at University of California at Berkeley, while Miss Margaret is a student at Westlake School for Girls, and both are very popular in the school and college activities.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the Yuletide motif being attractively carried out and dancing featured the evening's entertainment, supper being served at midnight.

Among the guests were Miss Patsy Palmer, Miss Virginia Grece, Miss Lenore Payne, Miss Alice Douglass, Miss Eileen Douglass, Miss Vivienne Adams, Miss Claire Frye, Miss Ruth Scatton, Miss Helen Sumption, Miss Helen Funk, Miss Virginia Enright, Miss Virginia Scott, Miss Mary Caroline Kettle, Miss Ruth Meserve, Miss Mabel Hills, Miss Jane Cotton, Miss Cornelia Verplank, Miss Louise Williams, Miss Helen Talbot, Miss Geraldine Scully, Miss Dorothy Heidt, Miss Nora Haffman, Miss Bertha Winsteil, Miss Lillian Sheehan, Miss Mildred Pannel, Miss Louise Cupit, Miss Cecelia Decker, Miss Rosemary Tracy, Frederick Dockweiler, Thomas Mercala, James Kelly, Leo Mead, Francis O'Brien, George O'Brien, Leo Harvey, Chip Shubert, William Heiser, Albert Phillips, Oscar Walker, William McCartney, Herbert McCartney, Dan Hill, Roland Hill, Leonard Barvis, Ted Tedford, Sprague Talbot, John Bissinger, Leo Bond, Charles McGindley, Ernest Tinney, Garrath Smith and Ensigns George Wilcox, William McGarry and Paul Johnson.

CAULIFLOWER FROMAGE SOUP

One cauliflower, three tablespoonfuls shortening, three tablespoonfuls flour, one teaspoonful salt, one-quarter teaspoonful pepper, two cupfuls meat stock, two cupfuls milk, one piece bay leaf, one celery stalk, one-half cupful grated cheese.

Cook cauliflower in boiling salted water until tender and drain. Reserve six large, perfect flowerets and press the remainder through a coarse strainer. Melt the shortening, add the flour, salt and pepper, stock, milk, bay leaf and celery. Bring to the boiling point, stirring constantly. Remove the bay leaf and celery and add the cauliflower. Serve with a floweret in each serving and sprinkle with the grated cheese.

CALIFORNIA SPAGHETTI AND CHEESE

One-half pound spaghetti, one cupful cooked corn, one large green pepper, one-half pound mild cheese, one pint milk, one tablespoonful butter, one tablespoonful flour, one teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce, one-quarter teaspoonful paprika, one tablespoonful butter.

Cook spaghetti, broken in pieces, in boiling salted water until tender, then drain. Make a white sauce with the butter, flour and milk; add seasoning, and cheese cut fine. When the cheese is melted, add the corn, chopped green pepper and spaghetti. Pour into a buttered baking dish, dot with butter and brown in a hot oven.

PECAN PIE

Scald a cupful of sweet milk with a half-cupful of sugar, thicken when boiling with a tablespoonful of flour rubbed smooth with two tablespoonfuls of water. Add gradually the well-beaten yolks of two eggs and drop in a teaspoonful of butter. Cool and add the juice of a lemon and a cupful of chopped pecan meats. Bake in a pastry lined pan, and finish with a meringue made of the egg whites, two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Brown slightly.

RICE CHARLOTTE RUSSE

One-quarter cupful rice, one cupful milk, one-quarter teaspoonful salt, one-half cupful sugar, one pint whipping cream, one teaspoonful vanilla, two egg yolks, one tablespoonful granulated gelatine, one tablespoonful cold water, one-quarter cupful hot water or milk.

Scald the milk in a double boiler, add the rice and salt, and cook until the rice is soft. Remove from the fire; when cool add the vanilla, sugar, egg yolks well beaten, and the gelatine which has been previously soaked in the cold water and dissolved in the hot water or milk. Mix all of this together very thoroughly, and then add the cream whipped. Put in a wet mold and let stand on ice at least three hours before serving. Serve with a sauce made by cooking one cupful of preserved or canned strawberries with one-half cupful water until the consistency of syrup. Add one tablespoonful lemon juice, strain and pour over the russe when serving. This may also be served with crushed fresh strawberries.

NANCY PAGE

By Florence La Ganke

"Why, oh, why, do we live in this beastly climate? I am so tired of gray skies and dull days. Can't we move, Peter?" "I fear not, but you can always get a new hat, you know, Nancy." And that's just what Nancy did, and perked up at once. Wise Peter had learned Nancy's cure—when blue, buy a new hat or frock.

She chose a very close, intricately cut, black felt, exposing the left eyebrow slightly. It completed her smart all-black costume. When she met Lois for lunch, Lois exclaimed at once, "My, but I'm glad I know you. You look so smart, so well dressed."

"Just for that, Lois, I'll get you a new hat." They chose a beige with no trimming, no pin, nothing but a brim, sharply turned up in front and a flat bow at the side for trimming. It went well with her clear skin, blond hair and black coat with leopard revers and wide cuffs. It was while they were shopping that Lois gained a bit of current style wisdom. Artificial flowers are now worn on evening clothes only. They are no longer smart on coats or daytime dresses. "Well," she said, "they've had their day. They ought not complain."

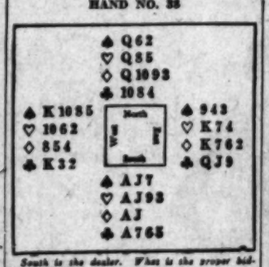
HAND NO. 38



South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

Each day we shall publish a complete hand presented by Mr. Whitehead, together with a chart upon which the bidding and play may be noted. These hands may be played with cards by one, two, three or four players, before filling in the chart.

Tomorrow we shall publish Mr. Whitehead's explanation of today's hand, with the important features emphasized.

Fill out your own chart and compare it tomorrow with Mr. Whitehead's method. Do this each day and carefully read Mr. Whitehead's explanations, and you will find that your knowledge of the game will progress rapidly. Compare your bidding and play with that of your friends—the comparison may be illuminating.

Record the bids that each player should make, assuming that he does not see any of the other hands.

Salient Points of the Bidding

South has the necessary values, and their distribution in three suits, for an opening N. Trump bid. But with his particular type of hand, a semitwo-suiter, an introductory bid of a suit is usually preferable, especially when holding a worthless doubleton.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 1. West, holding four cards of the trump suit, properly opens his long suit, even though, in doing so, he is forced to lead from a Major tenace.

Trick 3. West's opening lead causes South to suspect that West holds trump length. If so, and if he also holds the Ace of Clubs, this entry will give West the needed opportunity to accomplish the evident objective of his opening lead, to wit, to subject South to a possibly embarrassing trump force, by continuing with Spades. Because of the impending force, South refrains from an immediate trump lead. As the Club Ace must be dislodged sooner or later, South considers it better to force it at once, before attempting to exhaust the adverse trumps.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

Mrs. Eldred will be glad to answer all questions pertaining to babies and children. A stamped and self-addressed envelope, forwarded to this office, will bring a personal reply.

FOUR AS AGAINST THREE MEALS A DAY

Mrs. J. R. T. writes: "By baby is now 1 year of age, weighs twenty-five pounds, has eight teeth and walks. At 9 months the doctor said he was normal. He gets cereal, milk, certain vegetables, and stewed fruit and orange juice. Is it possible to give him three meals a day instead of four? He does not eat so well lately. When he cries in the night should I leave him alone?"

Answer: Perhaps you can rearrange the meals somewhat. Give breakfast at 7; the usual 2 o'clock meal at noon, a cup of milk about 3:30, and the supper at 7. This is just about like three meals, but the stretch in the afternoon is bridged over with the cup of milk.

You need not give cod-liver oil this winter if everything is all right. If you do give it try it in fruit juice. If the child is not temporarily upset by the eruption of teeth and continues to gain as satisfactorily as he has been, give him a drink of water at night and then leave him. The habit of getting attention in the night is so easily begun and so dreadfully hard to break.

BANDS AND BINDERS

Mrs. M.: The snug binders are worn to keep the navel dressing in place and they are removed as soon as it is healed, usually at six weeks. The knitted part-wool band with shoulder straps replaces this. With this extra warmth over the abdomen the lighter-weight shirt may be worn, and bands are so satisfactory to keep the diaper in place. Some doctors advocate them for all children, some only for thin ones. Personally I think they are advisable for all children. Just an opinion.

Mrs. M. L.: Thank you for the recipe for a cocoa drink for children. Here it is, mothers:

One cupful of cocoa, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of water. Boil for five minutes, add one teaspoonful of vanilla and put in sterilized glass jar. Use three tablespoonfuls of this mixture to one shaker-full of milk and shake vigorously. (This, of course, is for older children, not babies.)

Varnish Them

If you will give the new gilt frames a coat of colorless varnish the appearance will be the same and the frames will always be easy to clean.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

author of "The Four Feet to Health"

Dr. McCoy will answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Los Angeles Times. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

THE MEANING OF ACIDOSIS

It is quite common for patients to believe that their blood is overly acid. They have arrived at this conclusion from hearing so much about acidosis, which has gradually come to mean to them that their blood has turned acid. This is a false assumption, as the blood, during life, always presents an alkaline reaction, and death takes place at the very moment when the blood becomes more acid than alkaline.

A small amount of tissue may become deadened—for instance, a crushed finger or toe may have the tissue so destroyed that the basic alkalinity is lost—and this dead tissue may then be said to be more acid than alkaline. But this cannot be true over any large area of the body, for in life the entire blood stream must be slightly alkaline.

When what is called "acidosis" exists, it only means "a lowered alkalinity." For example, if you add a teaspoonful of baking soda to a glass of water, the water will then possess a definite amount of alkalinity. If even a drop of acid is added to this alkaline water, the alkaline reaction is lowered in just that degree. If drop by drop more acid is added, the mixture finally becomes neutral, and then one drop more will make the entire amount slightly acid.

In the body a similar phenomenon takes place when, through wrong habits of living, the amount of alkaline blood reserve is reduced. The blood is then less alkaline, but is really not acid.

As the blood carbonates are reduced, the lines of defense against infection are broken down. One with so-called acidosis is subject to bacterial invasion, and such disorders as rheumatic fever, pneumonia, typhoid and similar disorders develop.

Diarrheal diseases of children often bring on a serious acidosis. The intestinal irritation caused from unripe fruit, or from the use of fruit with starchy foods, produces copious bowel eliminations, and this depletes the system of alkali through wasting bile and the digestive ferments.

Prospective mothers often suffer from acidosis because of the folly of "eating for two," and not realizing that the most important thing is to eat less of all foods, and increase elimination which must truly go on for two.

One who has a tendency to develop "cold sores" or similar inflammatory conditions of the mucous membranes should realize that acidosis exists and such warning should be heeded, and the blood's alkalinity built up to prevent more serious disorders such as rheumatic fever, diabetes mellitus and the deficiency diseases.

Acidosis is really not a disease in itself, but is a condition which predisposes to many disorders.

Some of the first signs of acidosis are increase of ammonia in the urine (which should be normally acid,) skin rashes, cold sores, coated tongue, headaches, and increase in respiration.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question: H. P. C. writes: "I have always heard that one should rest his body and brain after eating. Would like to know if a walk of a mile and a half to work after breakfast would be harmful. Also, what is the reason that my ears become stopped up especially during a walk?"

Answer: I am sure you would not be harmed by taking a walk after breakfast, but it would be much better to rest before you exercise, if you will arrange to have your breakfast a little earlier. Your ears may have a stopped-up feeling simply because of the increased circulation of blood and the temporary raising of your blood pressure.

Q.: Anna M. asks: "Will you please tell me if the pomegranate is a healthful fruit?"

A.: The pomegranate is a good acid fruit if you will eat it by itself, drinking plenty of water at the same time.

Q.: "Thank You" writes: "Would like to know if you advise the milk diet for severe cases of gastritis. If so, could I use any fruit or fruit juices with it, as it seems to agree with me better that way."

A.: The milk diet is an excellent treatment for any inflammatory condition of the stomach or intestines. It is advisable to use a small amount of lemon juice, or the juice of some other fruit with it, as this seems to assist in the digestion of the milk, and stimulates the flow of the gastric juices.

Q.: A Reader asks: "Is there any way of getting rid of liver spots on the face? I have had them since before my baby was born, that is, about six or seven months."

A.: The liver spots you speak of will usually disappear if you will be careful about your diet and see to it that your liver is not overburdened with an excessive amount of work.

If Over-Fat

Try this easy way

To Lose

Do it for beauty's sake, for health and fitness. If you have tried other ways without success, learn the pleasant way can do.

Some twenty years ago we discovered a cause of excess fat, a lack of certain elements which regulate fuel and energy, rather than overeating. They found and widely tested a way to combat that cause.

Then that method was developed into Marmola prescription tablets. Their use is given in every box, also directions for results. Users know what they are taking, and why.

Marmola has been used for years by millions of boxes of it. Users and others the results. That is one reason why excess fat has become a national question.

Abnormal exercise or diet is not required, though moderation helps. Many Marmola users simply take four tablets daily until weight comes down to normal. They know why it comes down—and in what way—so they have no fear of harmful results.

Try this modern method, which many have employed for over a decade, and the results for a little while and then judge for yourself what they mean to you. Get them now. Go order a box today.

ICE CREAM KNOCKED COLD

Vender's Car Stalls on Tracks, Train Smacks it and Then It's "Every Man for Himself"

Children of Glendale will miss the merry tinkle of a certain ice cream vender's car for the next few days, but F. H. Clark, 536 North Cedar street, Glendale, owner and driver of the car, missed it a lot sooner than that. In fact he missed it the minute the machine flew out of his hand.

Clark was making his way through the streets of Glendale yesterday, carrying holiday cheer to the outlying neighborhoods in the form of summer ice-cream confections, when he was stalled suddenly as he was crossing the Southern Pacific tracks at Fourth avenue. Just then he heard the train whistle.

He jumped out and made a frantic effort to crank the machine and get it started before the train came, but the train arrived while he was still cranking it up, and Clark saw his means of livelihood almost literally go from his hand, carried up the track 100 feet and smashed to bits. A crowd which gathered rapidly enjoyed a free feast on the remnants of the ice-cream dainties.

FINGERPRINTS TO AID IN BURGLARY SEARCH

Fingerprints on an improvised jimmy used by burglars who plundered a service station operated by Hugh Combs at 2126 North Raymond avenue, Altadena, were being traced by deputy sheriffs yesterday in an effort to find the criminals. The burglars gained entrance by prying off five wooden bars on a ventilator. A large quantity of cigarettes, candy and chewing gum was taken.

Police to Getcha if Your Brakes Refuse to Hold

"How are your brakes? This question will be asked many times during this month, and the interrogators will be State and local traffic officers.

Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, announces State officers and every police chief and traffic squad in the State will pay particular attention during the month to those motorists who fail to observe the requirements of the law regarding brakes.

The California public safety conference of the California Development Association urges every motorist to become acquainted with his obligation in this particular and observe it. Otherwise, says the chief, many arrests will result.

BOULEVARD PAVING ASKED

Monday Blue Day in Fact for This Boy

Yesterday was literally "blue Monday" for 2¼-year-old Price Kline, Jr., who fell into a pan of hot blue dye at his home, 1731½ West Thirty-sixth Place, and sustained first and second-degree burns about the lower part of his body. When treated at the Georgia-street Receiving Hospital, it was found that he had been dyed a beautiful sky blue shade.

The little boy was playing around in the kitchen where his grandmother was preparing to change the color of some garments. She placed a pan containing the necessary dyeing fluid on the floor and a few minutes later he slipped and fell into the hot stuff. He was not badly hurt and was able to go home after healing lotions had been applied to his burns.

Cookery Class of Mrs. Wyman to Meet Today

Mrs. Mabelle Wyman, whose daily menus are a feature in The Times, will hold her first cookery class of 1928 in the food demonstration rooms of the Manufacturers' Exhibit, 130 South Broadway, Southwest Building, at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Mrs. Wyman's model kitchen is an object of great interest to all her classes and is open for inspection at the close of her talks. Visitors are asked to take elevators to the third floor direct for easy access to her lecture hall.

In the Sick Room

Do not forget that dark, gloomy sick rooms lower the vitality of the patient. If the light proves annoying to the patient, have a vase of cheerful flowers in a position that they can be enjoyed, instead of the sunlight.

If Over-Fat
Try this easy way
To Lose It

Do it for beauty's sake, for new health and fitness. If you have tried fad ways without success, learn what a pleasant way can do.

Some twenty years ago research discovered a cause of excess fat. It is lack of certain elements which turn into fuel and energy, rather than fat. They found and widely tested a way to combat that cause.

Then that method was embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. The formula is given in every box, also the reason for results. Users know what they are taking, and why.

Marmola has been used for 20 years by millions of boxes of it. Users have told others the results. That is one reason why excess fat has become almost an exception.

Abnormal exercise or diet is not advised, though moderation helps. Users of Marmola simply take four tablets daily till weight comes down to normal. They know why it comes down—in a normal way—so they have no fear of harm.

Try this modern method, which many have employed for so long. Prove the results for a little while and judge for yourself what they mean to you. Do it now. Go order a box today.

"Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out he will get them at once from his jobber."

Mrs. Burton Advises Women as to Motherhood and Companionship

"For several years I was denied the joys of motherhood, while Mrs. Burton, whom I met at a social affair, was the mother of a lovely baby girl. I can do myself credit by saying that I took her advice and I have been the happy mother of a baby girl for the past two years. I will gladly refer any woman to my home who will write me, if it is of any advice which will help her to get what I have been denied for so long." Mrs. Harriet Burton, 1214 Monroe street, Hollywood. WORD PICTURE DRAWN OF EACH FLORAL MONUMENT

The San Dimas Chamber of Commerce and Western Auto Supply Company received honorable mention.

BEVERLY HILLS

The Beverly Hills winning creation, "The Kingdom of Paradise," was a floral masterpiece of surpassing splendor. Behind a carpet of sweet peas and roses, fashioned to resemble tile, rose a throne, back of which radiated beams of light represented by shafts of lavender and white sweet peas. In front of the float marched two heralds. Phyllis Holden, selected as the most beautiful girl of the Beverly Hills High School, occupied the queen's throne. At her feet were her two ladies-in-waiting, Gertrude Wing and Helen Hostetler, chosen from the grammar school, and at the back of the throne, seen only from the rear, was the third lady-in-waiting, Dorothy Belle Dugan. The approach to the throne, the steps and floor, was made of pink and yellow roses; the rays were made of a solid mass of sweet peas, which revolved in unison mechanically. The queen's robe was made of lilies of the valley, faced down the front with orchids. Her dress was of purple velvet. Carrying out the theme, the float was adorned by birds of paradise made of violets.

SAN MARINO

"Springtime in New York" was the entry of the city of San Marino, which won the best-theme award. It featured a floral fountain of pink and red carnations, red roses, Chinese lilies, stevias and orchids. Grouped around the fountain with its spray and water of more flowers of the same varieties, were a number of young girls, gowned in georgette dresses of delicate colors, and two tiny tots, David Coleman and Margaret Schuck, symbolic of the fountain of youth. At the front of the float, the bed of which was a solid block of red roses, was a tall basket filled with more roses. Pendants of lilies, orchids and ferns made to resemble Chinese lanterns hung from all sides of the float. Sycamore branches covered with ferns and white and pink carnations had the appearance of cherry trees blooming in the springtime. Two scrolls on the sides of the float were ornamented with floral lanterns and festoons of ferns and flowers, mostly pink carnations and Chinese lilies. A fifteen-foot square canopy covered the main part of the float. Hanging from the canopy were more Chinese flower lanterns. Preceding the float were two young men in knickerbocker suits of light color, carrying the banner. Following them were six outwalkers in fantastic costumes of pastel shades. They wore blue wings, crests like the phoenix bord, made of ostrich feathers, and pink satin tights with blue doublets. Behind the float and on each side were a larger number of other outwalkers.

Young women who rode on the float were Misses Evelyn Pollard, Elizabeth Crowell, Lois Skutt, Barbara Stevens, Marie Aard, Elizabeth McCullough, Isabel McLain, June Wright and Marjorie Shoup. Among the young men who accompanied the float were Franklin Stevens, Sterling Harshberger, Bruce McDonald, Arthur Fisher, Douglas Smith, John Hart, Roger Reese, Preston Hurtble, Richard Pomeroy, Ernest Caldwell, Henry Roselle, Carol Holt, Hiles Hart, John Hurt and Thomas Cordey.

SAN DIMAS

The San Dimas float, awarded honorable mention in the sweepstake, presented a Holland scene. On the front of the float rode Ruth and Marie Funkhouser dressed in blue and white Dutch costumes. Between them was a small house, its walls fashioned from desert sage, the window of yellow pompoms and the roof of holly berries. Back of the house rose a windmill in which the same color scheme was carried out. The arms of the windmill were woven with blue bachelor buttons. The floor of the float was a mass of iris. Scotch heather was used in profusion on the sides of the float and the name of the city was spelled out in golden calendula. Bill Teague and Bob Teague, dressed as Dutch boys, rode beside the windmill.

WESTERN AUTO SUPPLY

A covered wagon with a realistic canopy of white carnations, body of marigolds and wheels of pink and white sweet peas and fern, drawn by live oxen and resting on a base of greenery and heather, was the entry of the Western Auto Supply Company. The float, "Blazing the Trail Westward," was given honorable mention. The name of the float and the word "Utah" were worked out with striking clearness around the base. Other decorative features were pompoms, chrysanthemums, huckelberry branches and foliage. Grouped about the prairie schooner were American Indians in native garb and war paint and a number of men, women and children clothed in the garments of forty-nine. Outriders were two men wearing the clothes of the frontiersmen and mounted on spirited horses.

GLENDALE

Breathing smoke, its huge multi-colored body swinging from side to side, its red mouth gaping wide as its eyes darted angry glances at the crowd and its fantastic legs clawed menacingly, the Glendale dragon, headed by the Glendale band clad in Chinese costumes and little Alice Nell, borne on the shoulders of four strapping coolies, drew applause throughout the entire procession. The body and lashing tail were eighty-five feet long. Red Hadley roses formed the mouth, white carnations the teeth and Cecil Brunner roses the eyes; yellow Claudias de Pernet roses, violets, corn flowers, yellow pompoms, smilax and maidenhair fern formed the head; corn flowers and violets the horns; red carnations, yellow pompoms, calendula and roses were woven in the body and 180 full strings of smilax defined the scales. The tiny sedan chair in which the little princess rode was covered with plumosus, maidenhair fern, Cecil Brunner and Claudias de Pernet roses and calendula.

SAN FRANCISCO

Symbolic of the successful manner in which it has recently been connected to Los Angeles by airplane, the city of San Francisco entered a miniature floral tri-motored monoplane with a fuselage of pink and red sweet peas and wings of white and pink sweet peas. The plane was outlined with violets and lavender chrysanthemums. It rode on a base formed of the same kinds of flowers. Clad in leather helmets and flying togs, Miss Harriett Aiken and Martin Kreuger rode in the cockpit of the machine.

SAN JOSE

Depicting the passage of history in the Golden State, a small two-storied building, representing the first of the five capitols boasted by the State, was entered by San Jose. The walls of the structure, which duplicated the headquarters of the State government in 1850, together with the score of windows and gallery, were made of heather. Huckleberry foliage was used for the body of the float. The flowers were from select stocks grown in the Santa Clara Valley. Charles and George Doleshal, brothers, manned the float, which was featured by floral formations of heather, brace, purple sage, huckleberry and baby chrysanthemums.

PORTLAND

The largest float show of the Northwest, the Portland Rose Festival, Inc., honored the Pasadena pageant by entering one of the most classic of the smaller floats. The spirit of friendliness between the two cities was shown on the entry by the large loving cup of yellow pompoms with handles of heather in blossom. The vase rested on a raised dais and was filled with choice poinsettias and long-stemmed American Beauty roses. Foliage and flowers banked the pedestal and on corresponding levels at front and rear were seated beautiful maidens in Grecian costumes. Oregon holly, shipped here especially for the purpose, formed the base of the float. On it the name of the entrant was worked in yellow pompoms.

LONG BEACH

Under the title of "New Jersey" Long Beach's entry showed Washington crossing the Delaware in a boat of heather fringed with yellow pompoms. The boat rested on a billowy canvas river painted blue and surrounded by foliage. One of the most striking features of the whole parade was an American flag carried in the boat. Its stripes were of deep red and pure white carnations. The field was composed of violets and the stars were white carnations. Wearing the buff and blue uniforms and cocked hats of the American Revolutionary Army and in some cases the warpaint and feathers of Indians, attendants were D. A. Ruff, George Washington; Ralph Lloyd; Jedd Welch, Charles McNeil and Morris Stanley, Long Beach High School students.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Displaying ingenious workship, the huge float of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, harkening back to the days of the Spanish conquest of California, received a special prize in the Class A division. An old Spanish well, interwoven in a flower scheme of marigolds, chrysanthemums and poinsettias, entitled "Spain" received applause of the multitudes, all along the line of march. Kentia palms entwined in floral formations bordered the float and completed the color design. Six smartly dressed dons and senoritas, sons and daughters of officials of the Chamber of Commerce, manned the float. They were the Misses Marjorie Secrest, Betty and Jean Foster and Carol Glass and Donald Swihart and Frederick Fritz. The entry was designed by the field service and exposition department of the chamber.

PASADENA C. OF C.

"Happy New Year" spelled out in ten-inch letters of white carnations announced the identity of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce float more than three blocks down the line of march. Two small children, Clarence Edward Burke and his sister, Jane Louise, portraying the roles of lovers in an improvised "Lovers' Lane," registered a pleasant surprise to the Rose Carnival fans. L. J. Goodman, designer of the float, bedecked the entry in a clever formation of heather, poinsettias and red-and-white carnations.

WHITTIER

Whittier's entry, "The Garden of Italy," was colorful in every detail. The costumes of early Rome were worn by the attendants. On the front of the float was a peacock, woven from sweet peas and roses. In the center rose a large fountain supported by three white-robed maidens, Violet Smith, Anna Lou Kimmel and Helen Smith. From the fountain splashed sprays of white roses. At the rear of the float rose a throne with a column made of Scotch heather on either side. The throne was decorated profusely with sweet peas. To the rear of the float trailed the queen's train made of green myrtle and roses. The train was carried by Margaret Leslie, Irma Richardson, Anna Hoogerzeil, Louise Logen and Bernice Baily. The queen was Harriet Rowe and her two ladies in waiting, dressed in flowing blue robes, were Grace Woodward and Florence Thill. In front of the float marched two stalwart Roman pages carrying a banner announcing the name of title of the entry.

TAFT

The city of Taft entered the float "India," one of the most elaborate spectacle in the entire parade. It typified an oriental pagoda beneath which rested the queen, Miss Patsie Osburn. She and her attendants, Bessie Lepper and Ethel Perrigo, were clad in gauzy chiffon costumes and wore an abundance of pearls and other jewels. The pagoda and the base on which it rested, as well as numerous festoons and garlands, were of lavender and pink sweet peas and yellow roses woven into blooming heather.

POMONA

Pomona presented an unusual and attractive float under the auspices of the Pomona Chamber of Commerce. Departing from the usual plan, Pomona, as the instance of Secretary J. M. Paige, displayed a Japanese tea garden showing Mrs. K. Arita directing the activities of a Japanese party for children. The girls in this were Tumiko Kumata, Janice Akahoshi, Emiko Tsuboi, Mary Susaki and Chrisato Kuwata. The float was decorated in a highly artistic manner, desert sage of a fine gray being the base, with lily leaves for letters. Holly, Chinese lilies and Cantonesaters completed the scheme.

SAN PEDRO

The gondola of San Pedro was cause for much praise as it passed the throng. It was topped by a halo of yellow chrysanthemums banked with cedar boughs. In the float were Ruth Stelle, Dorothy Lyons and Doris Pringle, girls from the Harbor city. The float was handsomely decorated in addition by sweet peas from the gardens of that district, as well as carnations and roses.

TEMPLE

The "Basket of Peaches," from the town of Temple did not belie its name, for the "peaches" were as attractive as the flowers that surrounded them. Eight "peaches" were in the basket: Dorothy Heaton, Delores Gates, Helen Ferguson, Audrine Dochterman, Marie Willis, Eleanor Boyle, Betty Lester and Virginia Ross. The name of the town was made in calenqulas, the basket was of roses and carnations, banked with heather.

PASADENA

One of the most beautiful creations of the day was that entered by the city of Pasadena, although a casual inspection would not disclose the entire beauty of the float. It was the "Vista del Arroyo," showing a flower picture of Mr. Wilson Observatory, with two girls inside, who gazed through imitation telescopes of flowers. A crystal globe centered the picture. There were a bed of primroses and heather and pillars made of sweet peas. The dome was of yellow chrysanthemums. In the float were Miriam Skutt and Phyllis Orbison.

VISTA DEL ARROYO

Vista Del Arroyo's entry was a mass of greenery and flowers, depicting a comfortable home in the California hills. In the floats were Zona Smith, Margaret Genereux, Florence Helfing and Jane Morris. It was one of the most attractive individual presentations in the parade.

ALTADENA

Altadena's "Mecca of the World" was depicted by a colorful float on which rode a dusky sheik mounted on a floral camel attended by a squad of Arabian riflemen. In front and in the rear of the float marched additional Arabian armed guards. The sheik, in addition to riding one camel, led another. In the center of the float was a tiny oasis with palm trees and other shrubbery. The camels were fashioned from Scotch heather and calendula. The packs were made from varied colored sweet peas. Monterey cypress was banked around the sides of the float.

ANAHEIM

The coming of the California Valencia Orange Show was heralded by "The Land of Aladdin," Anaheim's entry in the parade. The half of a huge golden orange, fashioned from calendula, served as the throne for a Chinese princess before whom Aladdin laid his gifts of jewels. Aladdin was adressed in Chinese robes and his lamp was made from marigolds. The role of the princess was taken by Miss Gertrude Bryan, the official "Miss Anaheim" and that of Aladdin by William Bryan. Four boys, wearing Chinese cloaks, served as attendants to the float.

SAN BERNARDINO

A huge orange served as the throne for little Mary Bromlow, whose tiny hands guided the butterflies that winged their way in front of the National Orange Show float entered by San Bernardino. Back of the orange throne rose a huge arrowhead, the silver center made of desert sage and the edges trimmed with poinsettias. Green myrtle hung from the sides of the float to the pavement. The letters spelling out the name of the float were made of calendulas.

ALHAMBRA

The entry of the Alhambra Community Sing, another floral airplane, attested to the interest aroused in aviation by recent long-distance flights of Col. Lindbergh and others. The miniature plane was covered with pink, yellow and red roses and yellow pompoms. It rested on a base of heather and poinsettias and was attended by three pretty little children, Romana Squire, Beryl Dykeman and Mary Julia Sippel, all wearing dainty summery frocks of georgette.

LIGHT AND POWER BUREAU

The Pittsburgh Panthers were honored by the float entered by the Municipal Light and Power Bureau. In the center of the float was a huge floral football made of golden calendulas and blue straw flowers and candy tuft, to represent Pittsburgh's colors. On the front of the float, between two girls, Louise Tickner and Nan Mosley, rode a stuffed panther. On the rear of the float were Ruth Liming and Ruth Clark. The girls were dressed in blue-and-gold sport costumes to carry out the Pittsburgh color scheme.

PASADENA SCHOOLS

Three expressive floats were entered by the Pasadena city schools. "California Gold," first of the trio, pictured three youthful miners, George Pyle, Joe Barth and James Anderson, around a campfire on the Great American Desert. The scene was formed by a mass of purple sage and the camp fire by chrysanthemums. An electric display, originating in an improvised radio tower was the feature of the second float, entitled "California Power." Representing rays of various colors coming from the tower were children dressed in gay costumes. The personnel was Bascile Hendrickson, Bernice Johnston, Jean Simpson, Eleanor and Frederick Braden, Fanny Parsons and Norman Martin. Rays of light coming from the orb of day were the picturesque representation of "California Sunshine," the third float. As sunbeams seated on the snowclad hills were Patsy Nidaw, Peggy Cathcart, Mary Alice, Nix and Betty Jean Herrington. The spirit of light was Marjorie Eyer. Jacaranda and calendula blossoms covered the sides of the float, while sweet peas and heather bordered the scene.

SHERMAN INSTITUTE

Showing in graphic manner the advancement of the American Indian, the entry of the Sherman Institute, an Indian school sponsored by the Riverside Chamber of Commerce, won praise as it passed the long line of spectators. It showed in a story of flowers how the Indian has advanced from the primitive man to a highly educated and modernized person. It was led by color guards, indicating the primitive Indian. Then, on the float, was an Indian tepee, decorated with asparagus ferns and dahlias. Nine tribes were represented by those on the entry. They were Adella Brown, Jose Tajete, Charles Bautista, Samul Cacohra, Pearl Beyis, Elsie Sasalque and Adolph Sambo. The float depicts Indians at home in their tepee and their attendance at school.

VISTA DISTRICT

Showing in realistic and picturesque fashion the gradual growth of California's favorite fruit, the avocado, the Vista Irrigation District of San Diego county presented one of the finest entries. A huge avocado topped the float and was decked on all sides with pepper boughs, holly, poinsettias and marigolds, with a bed of wild strawberry vines and carnations. In addition small avocado trees, for which the district is famous, gave a life-like depiction of the section.

FOR STANFORD

The Pasadena Water Department honored Stanford University, depicting a huge football player carrying on to victory the football of the West. It was a fine creation made of dusty millers and white carnations backed by lilacs and carnations and showing a sign, "Welcome Stanford." This attractive float followed that of Pittsburgh.

PIGEON CLUB

The Pasadena Racing Pigeon Club's float caught the eye of the youngster's along the line of march. The main body of the float was covered with English ivy and red berries. On each side and in front were wooden cages from which pigeons were released one at a time.

SALVATION ARMY

The Salvation Army float, distinguished by the Salvation Army shield, was a bower of ferns and white carnations, with poinsettias giving the necessary dash of color. Those who took part in the tableau, consisting of a mother reading the Bible to her three daughters, were Mrs. W. H. Gooding and Lenore and Mabel Frazier and Hazel Boyer.

MOOSE LODGE

Preceded by "Rose Heart," its baby entry, the Loyal Order of Moose Lodge of Southern California was awarded first prize in Class E, the fraternal division. Four little children dressed in spotless white, sat at the top of the neatly designed entry, titled "Moosehearb." As in several other floats, an exquisitely decorated globe, revolving on its axis, was a conspicuous feature of the design. A bevy of flowers, including gladiolas, chrysanthemums and roses worked into the color scheme.

GREEN CROSS SOCIETY

The American Green Cross Society's creation was a huge green cross of smilax fringed with tiny white chrysanthemums. On either side of the float and in the hollow arms of this cross stood pretty Misses Hazel Moore and Connie Jean Darling. They were dressed in long flowing white robes. The base of the float was foliage and on a slight elevation at the front was a green forest of young pine trees, a charred and burned forest occupied a like place at the rear.

QUEEN OF GYPSIES

Escorted through the streets by nearly two dozen marching nomads, "The Queen of the Gypsies," the novel entry of E. W. Deschamps and J. E. Norlin-Falk, passed down the line of march amid the lusty cheering of the countless thousands of spectators. In a flower decorated wheel chair rode the gypsy leader clad in the characteristic variegated costume of Hungarian, Rumanian and Spanish origin. Henry Bernhardt, who, last year was the nurse for "Mammy's Little Coal Black Rose," the same group's entry, impersonated the gypsy queen with honors. The queen's small carriage was drawn by an undersized pony.

WOMEN'S DIVISION

The women's division of the Tournament of Roses was represented by one of the most stylish floats in the private automobile class. The outlines of the massive touring car were completely covered by a field of heather to which was attached pink stocks and chrysanthemums and red roses. Attired in smart costumes of white, which were in pleasing contrast to the floral decorations, Mrs. F. M. Mills, president of the division, and Mrs. Lena R. Pepperdine, vice-president, rode in the magnificent equippage.

ELKS' LODGE

Supported by streaming columns of varicolored flowers, the figure of George Washington was the feature of the float entered by Pasadena Lodge of Elks, No. 672. So close was the likeness of the double to the original Father of his country that the board of judges awarded the float second prize in Class E, the division of fraternal entries. In characteristic statesmen-like pose, the portrayer of the Washingtonian role crossed his right hand over his heart as though beginning an address to his constituents—the countless army of Tournament of Roses fans. The frame upon which the principal stood was bedecked in a great outlay of ferns, trimmed with red, white and pink roses.

LAMANDA PARK

Proving that a design is not necessary to win honors at the annual parade the entry supported by the Lamanda Park Business Men's Association, featuring a beautiful floral formation, was adjudged first prize winner in Class D division. Six exquisitely gowned young women, all residents of Lamanda Park, one of Pasadena's sister cities, paraded over the large float as mannequins to receive the hearty approval of the monster throng. Roses of many colors, pompons and sweet peas were worked into an attractive motif. The mannequins included the Misses Rosalyn Felly, Dorothy Benson, Mary Shamel, Hazel Bartley, Rita Honeyball and Druce Hutton.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

UNITED SERVICE CLUBS

Revealing the ingenious efforts of the combined float committees of the various Pasadena service clubs, the entry of the United Service Clubs of Pasadena received first, second and third prizes for a grand sweep of awards in the Class B division. A huge globe gayly trimmed in red, white and blue flowers, hanging suspended from a sphere through the center, instantly won favorable comment from the overflowing stands of reviewing critics. Chrysanthemums and red and white carnations were the chief contributions of flowers. The Misses Pauline Fuller, Marion Schroeer, Virginia Gollatz and Antoinette Maroder occupied the service club's float.

PASADENA MERCHANTS

With an opalescent-tinted shell of flowers the center of its color scheme, the spacious entry of the Pasadena Merchants' Association was awarded second prize in Class G. Hanging from curved brackets extending from corners of the float was a garland of roses, carnations and sweet peas, while a revolving ball of crystal, about which the four occupants stood, was supported by a pedestal of foliage. On each side of the entry stood out ten-inch letters in pink carnations reading "Merchants' Association." Female employees of the organization, including the Misses Mabel Lumsden, Bertha Warren, Faye Geddes and Luella Krug, attired in colorful costumes, comprised the personnel of the float.

GAINSBOROUGH HEATH

"The Blue Boy." Gainsborough's world-famous painting, formed the inspiration for the float entered by J. T. Edwards, F.R.G.S., on behalf of Gainsborough Heath. The float presented a scene from a typical English garden of two centuries ago, with the painter, "Blue Boy," the lad's mother and two attendants. The float was drawn by eight iron-gray horses.

HOTEL RAYMOND

An Egyptian scene was presented by the Hotel Raymond's float which was drawn by three prancing bay horses. Mary Lou Wangerein occupied the queen's throne and her two attendants were Susan Cole and Elizabeth Griffith.

RICHFIELD OIL

One of the outstanding floral airplanes, conspicuous by their number, was the Spirit of California entered by the Richfield Oil Company. It was the size and shape of the Ford trimotored monoplanes. The fuselage was covered with pink, red and white roses and the rudder, flippers and wheels were of gorgeous yellow pompoms. Eddie Chandler, display manager for the company, rode in the cockpit.

HUNTINGTON HOTEL

Picked over a half-dozen other entrants the Huntington Hotel of Pasadena was awarded first prize in Class C division. "Sunkist in Japan," was the unusual theme of the honor-winning float designed by L. J. Goodman, who was also the genius behind the throne in the building of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce's first-prize entry. The Linnard Hotels' representative was bedecked in a color scheme of marigolds, violets and chrysanthemums with an occasional dash of fern. The float's personnel comprised Louis Earl, Dorothy Orr, Dorothy Barnes and Gabriel Halsted.

HOTEL MARYLAND

With her hull and structure covered by purple sage to stimulate the dull gray of the craft and yellow pompoms and gold cord for the turret, conning tower and bow, the cleverly decorated Hotel Maryland entry, the "U.S.S. Maryland," was awarded a special prize in the Class C division. Masts, stacks and guard rails were designed in gold so that the battleship made an effective entry.

SIERRA MADRE

A yellow flower-decked Norse Viking ship floating on a sea of flowers and representing Norway in an array of "Nations and States in Flowers" was the entry of Sierra Madre. The hull of the ship was covered with marigolds of gold and bronze hues, the mast was of yellow calendula and the oars were covered with smilax asparagus fern. The ocean into which they dipped was of statice larifora and the crests of the waves were white stevia. Ten men wearing antique steel helmets and coats of mail manned the oars.

CHICAGO OPERA

The charm of music was adroitly suggested in the decorations and personnel of the float entered by the Chicago Civic Opera Company. Standing at each corner of the float was a trumpeter in costume typical of early Egypt. During the passing of the parade these musicians played the well-known march from "Aida" on their instruments. On the front of the float was a large harp of white carnations, in the center was a high throne of gold flowers on which was seated a princess and on the rear were high bamboo stalks festooned with roses and foliage. The sides of the float were done in heather, pink carnations and roses. More roses, white and red, were used profusely about the throne and to outline portions of the graceful designs of the body of the float.

GIRLS' BAND MAKES GREAT HIT AND SO DO SCOTTISH CHILDREN

Outstanding among the twenty-eight bands which enlivened the Tournament of Roses parade at Pasadena yesterday with their stirring martial music and added color to Southern California's greatest floral pageant with their snappy uniforms was the thirty-five-piece Taft Union High School girls' band, the first entry of its kind in the thirty-nine rose tournaments. Dressed in pink-and-blue costumes, and playing like a seasoned military band, the girls won an immense round of applause.

A close second in popularity with the throngs that lined the sidewalks was a twelve-piece children's Scottish bagpipe and drum corps. None of the children was more than 15 years of age. They all wore the costumes of their highland ancestors.

The Huntington Park Union High School Band and the band of the South Pasadena American Legion post also were noteworthy and won a large amount of applause. The favoritism with which the crowds received the Huntington Park school band was due in part to the fact that its major was a slender girl who wielded the heavy baton with surprising dexterity. The band itself was composed of boys wearing orange coats and white trousers.

Other bands in the line-up were: Pasadena B.P.O.E., Pasadena American Legion post, Pasadena Sciots, Santa Ana, Glendale, Long Beach and Downey municipal bands, Sherman Indian Institute, Orange, Whittier and Compton municipal bands, Franklin High School R.O.T.C. band, One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry, Pasadena High School, California Institute of Technology, Van Nuys Boy Scouts, Los Angeles Lodge I. O. O. M., Order of Antlers, Union Pacific Railroad, Taylor band, Pacific Electric Railway, Pasadena Bagpipe and Drum Corps and the Spanish-American Institute of Gardena.

ONLY ONE CRASH MARS DAY

Pasadena's far-famed Tournament of Roses made its 1928 bow yesterday before one of the largest crowds ever assembled to witness the spectacle. Despite thousands of automobiles that jammed traffic arteries for hours after the huge parade ended, and although hundreds of thousands of spectators crowded, shoved and pushed to gain vantage points along the line of march, there was but one slight shadow of near tragedy to dim the brilliancy of the fete.

Up to a short time before the start of the annual East-West football game in the Rose Bowl, with thousands of other motorists bound for the game pushing along highways against the steady stream of home-coming drivers, there had been but one traffic accident reported in Pasadena or neighboring districts.

More than 100 women who fainted in the dense crowds viewing the parade were treated at the Pasadena and Emergency hospitals.

VETERAN STABBED

Tragedy threatened the gayety of the throngs when Frank Arbuckle, 35-year-old Australian World War veteran, was stabbed in the back after an altercation in the crowd at the Union Pacific station with a bystander who had refused to lift his hat to the American flag when it passed in review. H. W. Royce, 74 years of age, of 1421 Yale street, Santa Monica, was arrested in connection with the affair and lodged in jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

According to the story told police by Arbuckle, he had admonished the aged man twice for failing to uncover his head in deference to the flag and when Royce failed to observe this gesture of respect for the third time, the Australian veteran took the man's hat off.

Royce is declared to have retaliated by drawing a pocket knife and stabbing Arbuckle in the back, inflicting a slight flesh wound. Arbuckle's injury was dressed at the Emergency Hospital and he was allowed to return to his home at 1549 Rose avenue, Long Beach. Royce was chased from the scene by Charles Urton, 1241 Cliff Drive, Santa Barbara, and arrested by Motorcycle Officers Calkins and Lamb.

The lone automobile accident of the early day crowd resulted in slight injuries to Charles H. Prisk, principal owner and editor of the Pasadena Star-News, when his car collided with one driven by an unidentified youth at Green street and El Molino avenue shortly after 8 a.m. Prisk was knocked unconscious and sustained a cut on the forehead and a sprained wrist. He returned to his home after treatment at the Pasadena Hospital.

EMERGENCY STATIONS

In preparation for possible injuries to spectators and motorists, emergency Red Cross stations were established at points along the line of march. These stations were given considerable work in treating women who were overcome in the crowds.

The grand stands lining the parade route were small affairs compared with previous years' towering temporary structures. These even carried huge signs informing the public they were properly safeguarded against accident, but many were but half filled while thousands preferred to see the parade from the streets.

Thousands of motorists from all parts of Southern California began filtering into Pasadena early yesterday. Every line of approach to the city was crowded with hurrying automobile parties and later in the day the traffic burden of these arteries was greatly increased with motor parties en route to the football game.

Traffic problems were well handled by a special squad of police, many Los Angeles officers aiding in keeping the milling throngs in check. Parking spaces were at a premium.

LIEN ON OIL WELL TO BE FORECLOSED

Property at Long Beach Ordered Sold at Auction to Satisfy Claims

Foreclosure of a mechanic's lien on oil property at the corner of Wardlow avenue and Thirty-sixth street, Long Beach, on which Bunny No. 2 well is situated, for payment of $3529 of oil-well supplies, consisting mostly of steel casing, has been ordered in a judgment made by Superior Judge Bush in behalf of the Los Angeles Board of Adjusters, which took an assignment of the claim from the Union Tank and Pipe Company.

The defendants were W. S. Plater, lessee of the property; H. S. Callahan, who formerly owned it and leased it to Plater, and others who made claims for debt. A suit in intervention by John M. Richardson, who was deeded the property by Callahan on May 9, 1926, was ruled out by the court.

Richardson explained that he had been to Europe and after he returned was confined to his home from illness and learned only on October 27, 1927, that suit to foreclose had been filed.

Under the court order the property will be sold at auction to satisfy the claim of the plaintiff.

Despondent Man Ends Life With Poison and Gas

Dismayed at the loss of his position and despondent because of failing health, Harry Leslie, 50 years of age, a barber, ended his life yesterday by swallowing poison and then inhaling gas at his home, 1150 Michiltorena street. His act was discovered when his wife, who had been away, returned home and detected the odor of escaping gas. She found the bathroom door locked and called J. W. Cochrane, a neighbor, who forced the door.

Leslie was found lying on the floor with a rubber tube in his mouth attached to an open gas jet and a blanket wrapped about his head. Firemen from rescue squad No. 1 tried to revive him, but were unable to do so.

Railroad Board Engineer's Report Made Public

Economies in Operation and Improvements Advised

Data to Be Used at Hearing on Fare-Increase Plea

A report recommending changes of schedule, economies of operation and improvements of service on the Los Angeles-Long Beach-San Pedro-Newport Beach and affiliated local motor coach lines of the Pacific Electric Railway system was made public yesterday by Assistant Transportation Engineer McNaughton of the State Railroad Commission. The report will be used as evidence when hearings on the application of the railway company for a readjustment upward of rates is resumed within a few weeks.

Seasonal travel on the main lines of this group, separate summer and winter schedules are recommended in the report. In the summer months travel is heavy, enough to warrant a fifteen-minute service between Los Angeles and Long Beach without or no additional cost, if every train is operated as a limited to stop only at Watts and Compton, the report states. The report also calls for a twenty-minute headway.

SAN PEDRO LINE

During this period, according to the report, service on the San Pedro line could be operated on a limited basis between Domingues and Watts. Winter travel, McNaughton says, is not sufficiently heavy to support such service and the schedules now in effect are found to be satisfactory, except that consideration should be given to the operation of limited trains between Los Angeles and Long Beach operating every hour and making stops only at Compton and Watts.

It is recommended in the report that a thirty-minute service should be tried out on the Long Beach-San Pedro line on an experimental basis in place of the forty-minute headway.

ONE-MAN CARS

Further use of one-man car operation is suggested in the report as a means of attempting to reduce heavy loss on certain Long Beach local lines. No changes in the San Pedro local lines, other than the complete abandonment of service, are suggested.

REALTY MAN'S FATHER SHOT

H. C. Fisk of Pasadena Found Seriously Wounded in Bathroom of Home

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Jan. 2.—H. C. Fisk, 74 years of age, father of Carol F. Fisk, prominent realty dealer of this city, was found shot under the heart in the bathroom of his home, 500 South El Molino avenue, today, police report. The elder Fisk had not been in good health for some time and Detective Lieutenants O'Rourke and Burlingame, who investigated, believe that the bullet wound was self-inflicted.

Mr. Fisk is in a serious condition at the Pasadena Hospital, his chances for recovery being regarded as even.

PHILOSOPHER IN TALK TO WOMEN

Author of "Times" Articles Entertaining Speaker

"You want me to talk about 'Problems in Philosophy.' I'd much rather talk on 'The Ten Greatest Thinkers,' so what are we going to do about it?" Thus began Dr. Will C. Durant, speaking yesterday afternoon for the first time in Los Angeles before an auditorium crowded with members of the Ebell Club and their guests.

The philosopher and author of "The Story of Philosophy," which now is running in the Sunday Magazine section of The Times, and a later work, "Transition," seemed to be having a bit of a joke all to himself, which found expression only in a twinkle of the eyes evident only to the keen observer, and an occasional veiled thrust at the audience. A small man with a tiny mustache and Van Dyke, his alert, brilliant blue eyes and youthful manner belied his gray hairs and heralded learning.

"I think I shall start talking on my allotted subject and then switch over to my hobby while you aren't listening," he compromised.

REVISED AND CORRECTED

Dr. Durant, first giving his tests by which he chose the ten greatest thinkers, said that his former lists were later discovered to be composed of men who had agreed with him, but that he had revised until all could be said to be chosen for the range, depth and permanence of their influence on mankind.

"Then I got into trouble," he continued. "With this method I had to admit men whose thinking was destructive and some of whom I hate." The ten are Confucius, Plato, with whom is included Socrates, Aristotle, St. Thomas Aquinas, Copernicus, Francis Bacon, Sir Isaac Newton, Voltaire, Kant and Darwin.

"Never has one man so molded a people in his own image as Confucius molded China," he said. "His character is found in his philosophy, best expressed in his reply when asked how to rid the kingdom of criminals, just the two words, 'Be just.' Of course, the first thing to do in attaining this aim is to start with an absolutely honest Mayor. I leave with you one of his sayings: 'Men differ from the animals by only a little bit. Most people throw it away.' He meant reason."

ONE TRUTH HIS CLAIM

Copernicus he included because of the one statement that the earth is not the center of the universe. "Because of this one conclusion," said the philosopher, "every science, philosophy, and religion had to remold and infinitely multiply itself." Francis Bacon "rang the bell that brought the wits together," and Voltaire was styled "the only thinker for whom an age was named," and "the greatest emancipator in history, since he emancipated the human mind."

Concerning Darwin, "No man worked such transformations in such a short period of time," and Dr. Durant stated that Darwinism had unfolded a new religion to him—an upward movement, with no death except that which is left behind. "The God who went away into the clouds has come back," he said.

In his preliminary speech, before the transition to the ten great thinkers, Dr. Durant said in part: "The greatness that can come only when those who think are those who do, and those who do are those who also think, produces the best in every way. But today we have fallen into a sort of cleavage between the two functions. The men of our day are perfectly right, I think, in scorning philosophy. Philosophy died when Nero made Seneca kill himself. That was almost the end. Only Marcus Aurelius was left, writing his meditations in a tent while trying to keep off the barbarians who were encroaching on civilization. He failed. Then the refined dogmas of the church took the place of philosophy until it was reborn in the Renaissance and came down to earth, healthy again, with Francis Bacon.

HARD-HEADED KING

"Bacon told King James that thinkers need kings to help because they alone can put the vision of a beautified state before the people. But James refused, saying he was reminded of Christ's promise of the peace that passeth understanding. James was a gentleman and he wrote poetry but he couldn't understand Francis Bacon.

"Doubt came and Descartes brought epistemology into the world. That's a terrible thing—it concerns itself with the problem of the validity of human knowledge. And that brings me back to my statement as to the failure of philosophy. Ninety per cent of the philosophy since then has been based on that ridiculous problem, whether the external world exists as we conceive it to be. But it's a good sign that Bertrand Russell has been fired from his university. He has begun to write about men—and women and children."

PHILOSOPHIC CAST

Speaking of a philosophic convention he attended last summer, Dr. Durant said, "It looked like an anarchists' convention. All had the regulation beard and bald head and for days they read papers on epistemology—utterly worthless papers. Finally I moved that we invite 700 Boston business men, and if anyone made one remark that was unintelligible to them he should be thrown in the Charles River. The motion was rejected."

In his humorous manner, Dr. Durant is as human as his books and his philosophy. "People read my lectures," he said, "and then say to me, 'Is philosophy like this: is it really about humans?' Then they rush to the nearest college and take more philosophy. Pretty soon they come back and want to sue me for damages. But philosophy is not so unpalatable here as in the effete East.

BOYS HOLD MINIATURE AIR CIRCUS

Spectacular flights, thrilling nose dives, tail spins and crack-ups features the miniature aircraft tournament held under the auspices of the Lindbergh Light Aircraft Club, a boys' organization, at Hawley Athletic Field yesterday.

Performance of the miniature airplanes proved to be a revelation to a crowd of spectators who gathered to see the affair. The models competing seemed to include all types of aircraft that could fly—some very businesslike appearing patterns of commercial craft and other queer looking inventions. Three classes of flyers were entered: Gliders, "flying sticks" and commercial models.

Most of the models were powered by a clever employment of long strands of rubber bands that were wound up and when released turned the propellers. The models ranged in size from a few inches to five and six feet in length.

Herbert Britt is president of the club. Arrangements for the meet were made under the direction of J. C. Henderson, in charge of city playgrounds. Prizes were awarded by a committee consisting of Lieut. W. P. Williams, Lieut. Esten B. Koger, Richard Hardin and Prof. Merrill of California Institute of Technology.

The winners were as follows: For distance: William Atwood, first; John Coberly, second; Oliver Northrup, third; and Thomas Thickston, fourth. For duration in the air: William Atwood, first; John Coberly, second; Bob Siler, third; and Ward Parker, fourth; for weight lifting: William Atwood, first; Thomas Thickston, second; Orville Wike, third, and Bob Siler, fourth. Atwood is the boy who participated in the national miniature meet at Memphis last October and won third place in the national sweepstakes.

FALL INJURES CARPENTER

D. A. Loomis, 44 years of age, a carpenter, of 676 Salem street, Glendale, fell twenty-eight feet to the ground while working on a building at 1914 West Slauson avenue yesterday and sustained concussion of the brain, a possible fracture of the right hip and bruises and lacerations. He was treated at the Georgia-street Receiving Hospital by Police Surgeon Renfrew.

REGIMENT CHAPLAIN RECEIVES PROMOTION

Chaplain Lawrence of the 160th Infantry, California National Guard, is receiving congratulations of brother officers on his promotion to the rank of major, after many years with the regiment and in the service of his country in France, where he saw much combat duty.

Chaplain Lawrence will be away from the regiment much of the time during the next few months on account of reorganization work in his church in Glendora.

GIANT PLANE MAY ESSAY TEST TODAY

Albatross Will Go Up as Soon as Field Gets Dry at Midway City Airport

First tests of the albatross, said to be the largest parasol monoplane ever made, are scheduled to take place today, or as soon as the field is dry enough for the take-off, at Midway City airport, west of Santa Ana, it was announced yesterday by the Zenith Airtcraft Corporation, builder of the plane.

It was designed by Alvin M. Peterson and Charles F. Rocheville, air experts, formerly with the Navy at San Diego. They and W. L. Shields, also an ex-Navy flyer, are to make the tests, it was announced.

The plane is intended to have a flying range of 7000 miles and its builders hope to fly it across the Pacific to Asia after they have attempt to break the world's endurance flight record.

FILM-STAGE PRODUCERS ORGANIZED

Fanchon and Marco to Launch Acts Here for West Coast Theaters

The possibility of Los Angeles becoming a center for producing stage presentations to accompany motion pictures was forecast in the announcement yesterday of the formation of the Fanchon and Marco Production Company. Stock in the new company is held in equal amounts by Fanchon and Marco and West Coast Theaters, Inc.

Immediate plans call for the extension of operations to include every theater of the West Coast chain as well as those belonging to circuits with which the organization is allied. It is predicted Fanchon and Marco presentations will be sent to all theaters in the Stanley Company's chain in the East, and if this is done the new corporation will be able to sign performers for engagements of one and two years.

Under a new arrangement with West Coast, it is announced, Fanchon and Marco will stage larger and more expensive productions for key houses operated by the company. All shows which are to go on tour will have their premiers at the Metropolitan here, where Larry Ceballos has been engaged to assist Marco in directing the work. These shows will play all the houses of the circuit with the exception of Loew's State, here, and the Warfield, San Francisco.

Don't Try To Justify Sickness! Cure It

THE WAR ON SICKNESS

The war on sickness, suffering, and premature death will never be won while those who are suffering and ailing stand on the side lines virtually doing nothing to help themselves. But just as sure as you, who are sick arm yourself with the common sense knowledge of correct living and proper diet, the grim spectre of suffering and premature death will be defeated.

You, who perhaps for years have not known the sweetness of a happy normal healthy life, which is the God given heritage of everyone, will be given this knowledge that wrong living and lack of health knowledge has kept from you.

You whose success has been retarded because of ill health will be able to attain success like other men and women.

It matters not if it is a case of asthma, rheumatism, constipation, overweight, that tired worn out feeling, or any of the various ailments that you may have, you have only got to gain the proper common sense knowledge about your case and the care you, yourself, must give it, or continue to suffer unnecessary pain, worry and inconveniences.

Dr. McCoy has prepared a home treatment booklet treating every common ailment. Each booklet tells of the cause and effect of your ailment and then you are told exactly what to do every hour of the day to help bring about a cure. You are given the same information in each booklet that Dr. McCoy has given to his thousands of patients during years of private practice.

One hundred and thirty-seven thousand have already been sent to people in North America who have written for them at $1.00 each (regular rate.) These booklets may save you from an operation and other oft' unnecessary suffering. And it is positive that they will help to give you definite relief and the relief that you are seeking.

How Can I Make a Living in Southern California?

MORE THAN a hundred thousand new residents come to Southern California every year, drawn by this blessed region's matchless climate and beauty. Even larger numbers would come if they knew how they could have an income.

To those families having energy, industry and a modest amount of capital, FONTANA, a charming community of 6,000 people, 50 miles east of Los Angeles, offers a real opportunity to have a good income and live in almost ideal surroundings.

The organized production of eggs and poultry is combined at FONTANA with the raising of citrus fruits, walnuts, grapes, berries, vegetables and other staples on small ranches of from one to twenty acres under suburban conditions.

Fifteen hundred families have already established their homes on FONTANA'S 14,000 irrigated acres—of which barely 1,000 acres are still offered for sale by the original owners.

Fontana Is a Complete Community

The groundwork for this community was laid 20 years ago. It involved the development of a dependable mountain water supply valued conservatively at $4,000,000 today; the planting of some 600 MILES of border trees; the setting out of thousands of acres of oranges, grapefruit, grapes, walnuts and other fruits; the formation of co-operative advisory and marketing organizations, and the systematic, harmonious development of the townsite.

If YOU are interested in obtaining a fruit and poultry ranch of your own, in a substantial, established community where you will be proud to live, where land values are based only on actual productive worth and not on speculative promises, where you can have the services of five trained advisors free, as well as the benefit of fruit and poultry marketing service—then you owe it to yourself and your family to investigate Fontana.

We Still Have a Limited Amount of Good Land, Piped for Irrigation, for

$600 an Acre; Terms

Planted land, in 2½ to 10-acre tracts, in walnuts, oranges, grapefruit and other fruit as low as $800 an acre. But this remaining acreage (some of it recently opened and almost every acre within a mile of the nearest boulevard) is going fast.

You will like Fontana. It is a high-class, modern community; with fine schools from kindergarten to Junior College; with hundreds of strictly modern, beautiful Spanish stucco homes in their settings of luxurious foliage; and all city conveniences.

Fontana is only 50 miles west of Los Angeles, reached in 1½ hours' ride through orange groves and vineyards via Pacific Electric cars or by way of three main boulevards.

For those who want to buy at Fontana for a future home and income, but who haven't sufficient finances for starting in immediately, or for those who are interested in buying for an investment, we have worked out a DEFERRED PAYMENT PLAN, through which you can secure a home and income place at Fontana with as little as $300 down and balance over a long period, payable monthly.

RADIO BOARD'S FATE IN DOUBT

Benefits of Year's Work Disputed

Sixty California Stations on Air Tonight

BY DR. RALPH L. POWER

The resolution of radio is going to be a lively issue in Congress, now that the holiday recess is out of the way.

Undoubtedly the topic of major interest will be the Radio Commission itself. There are three possibilities in that the legislative body may decide to lengthen the life of the commission, return radio control to the Department of Commerce, or create another group altogether to look after general communication activities.

The Radio Act of 1927 was admittedly a compromise with the Senate, so far as the existence and life of the Radio Commission is concerned. Now, with its initial year almost at an end, some of its supporters declare that it has done an excellent piece of work, while others think its activities were not so valued.

BILLS PROPOSED

At any rate, there will be a large handful of bills for consideration and some kind of disposition. For instance, Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, co-author of last year's radio law, says he has no intention of introducing any radio measure this session, although he wants to see the commission continued.

Then there is Senator Howell, Nebraska, Republican, who is rather suspicious of the radio body and wants an investigation or two to find out if the commissioners have encouraged a monopoly of the air.

Another bill is being prepared by Senator Watson, Indiana, Republican. This would make the commission permanent with jurisdiction over telephone, telegraph, radio and other communication.

And Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, has made public his intention of asking Congress to transfer the Radio Commission, as well as all powers now reposing in the Interstate Commerce Commission, to a special new group on communications.

FORECASTS INVESTIGATION

A Montana Democrat, Senator Wheeler, forecasts a general investigation, while a good many members of Congress feel confident that conditions warrant a general investigation of charges that the Radio Corporation of America, through the National Broadcasting Company, seeks to monopolize the field of broadcast.

When the smoke of battle has cleared away, however, the public probably will find that the radio group of five commissioners will remain in power another year.

Their first year has been one of uncertainty. Lack of Senate confirmation has caused them uneasiness. The death of two members and the resignation of a third has crippled the group. They now lack one member and there is no permanent chairman.

All in all, I think they have not showed many tangible results. On the other hand, it is doubtful if they should have been expected to. But another year would tell the story.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAMS

Of course the sixty California stations will be on the air this afternoon and evening with diversified programs.

The Troubadours will engage in a variety hour at KHJ's studio at 9 p.m., and at the same time those who would like to hear the old song album hour will find it through KPON.

Once more the Los Angeles Fire Department Band will play at KFI on the 7 o'clock hour with vocal soloists and the Angeles String Trio will be over at KPLA on the same hour.

Commencing with the new year, the Orange network radio hours have been transferred in a number of cases.

The Eveready hour, once an hour's program, hereafter will be given on Tuesday nights as a thirty-minute broadcast at 8 p.m. The program this evening by the Eveready Salon Orchestra will be devoted to Russian music, including many famous melodies created by Glinka, Rubinstein, Moussorgsky and others. One of the novelties will be Audrieff's "Katinka," while two of the folksong offerings will bring to the radio audience, the "Notchekna" and the "Volga Boatman."

This musical treat will be followed at 8:30 by the tenth in a series of auction bridge games. There is no change in the time of length of this broadcast.

O. HENRY TALES

Then the network will continue at 9 o'clock with one of O. Henry's retold tales as a half-hour feature. This is in place of its former time from 10 to 11 p.m.

These O. Henry yarns have been selected particularly for their dramatic quality in relation to radio performances and "A Poor Rule" is the one chosen for this evening.

Then will come "The Rounders," popular male quintet, in the 9:30 to 10 o'clock time. This will be their new schedule and in keeping with changing certain features from one hour weekly to a half-hour period.

Harmonies and melodies, old and new, will be featured by the popular group, known everywhere for beautiful harmonization, symphonic blending of tone and exquisite shadings.

WISCONSIN MAN HEADS AGRICULTURE RADIO SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—Morse Salisbury, editor of the press bureau of the University of Wisconsin, has been appointed temporary chief of the radio service of the Department of Agriculture, pending an examination and certification of eligible applicants.

The position has been vacant for several months since the resignation of Sam Pickard to become secretary, and later a member of the Federal Radio Commission. Mr. Salisbury is trained in journalism, agriculture and radio work. All his experience has been gained in farm regions, principally Kansas and Wisconsin.

"America is consuming seven pounds of rice per capita per annum as against twenty and twenty-two pounds in European countries, but we are leading the world in by-products of rice," he said yesterday. "The latest by-product which is being perfected and bids fair to be successful is cellulose made from the hull of the rice, until recently thrown away.

"This product adds solidity and keeping qualities to puffed rice and wheat. The rice business is fair but the farmers need and are entitled to further protection from imports."

Turtle and mother-of-pearl industries of Costa Rica are to be exploited.

STUDIOS FACE PROMISING YEAR

Production Schedules Will be Tempered by Economy; Lane Chandler Signs Long Term With Lasky; Flash, Dog Star, Remains With M.-G.-M.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY

While there is a tendency toward healthy economic measures in the studios making motion pictures, there is also a progressive outlook for production. Even those studios that are temporarily closed, including the Mack Sennett and the Warner Brothers, are planning for big schedules of picture making. Warners, indeed, have not wholly ceased production, centering especially on Vitaphone.

In the meantime, Paramount, Fox, First National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Cecil B. De Mille studios are lining up stories, stars and directors for the coming year.

Authors especially are being sought to write directly for the pictures, and never has there been a time when the average of literary output and demand was so high.

Lane Chandler Signs

Pretty quick returns were accomplished by the happy New Year wishes passed on to him by Lane Chandler's friends. That flaming-haired youth was more than happy yesterday, following his signing with Paramount on a new long-term contract.

LANE CHANDLER

And this isn't all. Chandler has been selected by the Paramount distribution department as one of the eleven young men and women to be groomed as candidates for stardom during the coming year. Others named in the list include Charles Rogers, Jack Luden, Ruth Taylor, Nancy Carroll, Fay Wray, Gary Cooper, Richard Arlen, Louise Brooks, Mary Brian and James Hall.

B. P. Schulberg explained that Chandler's new contract came as the direct result of his remarkable work in "The Legion of the Condemned." At present he is appearing opposite Clara Bow in her new Elinor Glyn starring vehicle, "Red Hair."

Flash's New "Contract"

Harry Rapf made the triumphant announcement yesterday that, although other companies have been after Flash, the clever canine actor, that animal had proven his traditional faithfulness by sticking by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which company gave him his first official home and bone. Flash—through representatives—has "signed" a new long-term contract with the concern.

You see, Flash made a great hit with the public in "Under the Black Eagle," featuring Ralph Forbes and Marceline Day, and directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

Harry Rapf seems to be as good a judge of dogs as he is of horses, since he it was who introduced the late lamented Peter the Great and Rin-Tin-Tin to the screen.

Flash's next appearance will be in a newspaper story, we are informed, though in what connection it is difficult to figure.

Two Dorothys Busy

The two pretty and talented Dorothys, Dwan and Appleby, are both playing featured roles in "Square Crooks," which Lew Seiler is making for Fox, according to word received yesterday.

DOROTHY DWAN

"Square Crooks" was a stage play originally, and Dorothy Appleby appeared in New York in it during a highly successful season.

Richard Wallace Honored

Movies Join Elect

The movies are certainly rating intellectually now that they are to take up a huge amount of space in the Encyclopedia Brittanica.

Jesse L. Lasky has been asked to prepare a special article for that erudite publication, the new edition of which goes to press in March.

In outlining the nature of the article which Mr. Lasky was asked to contribute the editors divided it into three parts, a brief historical survey of production, a delineation of modern tendencies and the theory, practice and technique of the art of production.

"Bride of the Colorado" Note

Six river boatmen who navigated the Colorado River in the six vessels carrying members of the Pathe-Bray Colorado River expedition were brought back to Hollywood to participate in the interior scenes of "Bride of the Colorado," which is in the last stages of production at Metropolitan studios.

The boatmen, with the exception of Val Woodbury, president of the Alhambra Chamber of Commerce, are veteran navigators of the treacherous stream which the expedition cruised in thirty days. They include Frank Dodge, Dean Dailey, Nick Samoff, Con Dodin and John Schubert. All have been members of previous expeditions to penetrate the hazardous gorge, but none ever attempted the trip before in the winter time.

UNDER THE TERMS OF THE TREATY OF 1868, THE SIOUX INDIANS AGREED TO LIVE ON A RESERVATION IN THE WESTERN PART OF SOUTH DAKOTA. THEY WERE GRANTED THE RIGHT TO HUNT IN THE MOUNTAINOUS COUNTRY TO THE WEST OF THE RESERVATION, AND WERE ASSURED THAT WHITE MEN WOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO TRESPASS ON THIS HUNTING GROUND.

SIX YEARS LATER, GEN. CUSTER LED AN EXPLORING EXPEDITION INTO THIS REGION. THE EXPLORERS FOUND GOLD IN THE BLACK HILLS, AND THE REPORT OF THE DISCOVERY ATTRACTED NUMBERS OF PROSPECTORS AND ADVENTURERS.

THE INDIANS RESENTED THIS VIOLATION OF THE TREATY, AND VOICED THEIR PROTESTS IN A CONFERENCE HELD AT THE RED CLOUD INDIAN AGENCY. THE SOLDIERS PROMISED TO REMOVE THE INTRUDERS, AND WARNED ALL THE FORTUNE HUNTERS TO GET OUT.

HOWEVER, THE GOLD IN THE BLACK HILLS STILL BECKONED TO THE MINERS. AND IT WAS NOT LONG BEFORE THEY CAME DRIFTING BACK INTO THE MOUNTAINS ON VARIOUS PRETEXTS. THE INDIANS WERE SULLEN AND HOSTILE, AND REPORTS OF FREQUENT MURDERS OF WHITE MEN CAME FROM THE BLACK HILLS LIKE LOW MUTTERINGS OF THE GATHERING STORM.

METROPOLITAN HITS COMING

New Year to Be Full One for Play Producers

"Chauve Souris" Arrives at Belasco Soon

Charles Chaplin's "Circus" Rumored for Chinese

One of the most interesting years from the standpoint of production is promised for Los Angeles theaters of the spoken drama in 1928, according to advance plans of local producers. Presentations of New York successes, coupled with work emanating from local playrights, will be seen here.

While play producers are laying their plans, executives of the larger motion-picture houses are busy booking features for early showing.

The incomparable "Chauve Souris," Russian vaudeville, is coming to the Belasco the 23rd inst., for an indefinite stay. This troupe, captained by M. Balieff, created a furore on its first voyage to New York, the featured "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" and "O, Katherina" sweeping over the country to the accompaniment of dozens of imitations and intended fac-simile reproductions.

Now the performers are in America again, delighting the citizens of San Francisco. It is said that they were preceded there by an advance ticket-sale amounting to some $45,000.

AMERICAN PLAYS, TOO

"Saturday's Children," with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will come to the Belasco Sunday evening and remain for just two weeks, making way for the Russians at the end of the fortnight. It is intended by the management to bring back this Maxwell Anderson comedy at a more propitious time—always providing, of course, that it meets with a sufficiently cordial reception during its initial occupancy of the playhouse.

Another early prospect for the Belasco is the distinguished actress, Pauline Frederick, in a new play by Zelda Sears. This, it is expected, will follow the "Chauve Souris."

The Mason and Biltmore Theaters report bookings of Winthrop Ames's Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company with a list of at least three productions—"Iolanthe," "Pirates of Penzance" and "The Mikado"—the melodrama in which the audience plays a part, "The Spider," and Walker Whiteside in a new play.

Eva Le Gallienne's Repertory Company will follow "Broadway" into the Mason in about two weeks, offering "The Cradle Song." Almost simultaneously the Marx Brothers—who, by the way, reportedly are being sought for the films—will move "The Cocoanuts" out of the Biltmore to leave a clear field to the motion-picture, "Wings." This Paramount product takes up its tenancy of the theater on the 15th inst.

SILENT DRAMA ELOQUENT

Among the bigger pictures to be seen in Los Angeles in due time are "The Trail of '98," Clarence Brown's special for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Charles Chaplin's long-awaited "The Circus," and D. W. Griffith's first under his new United Artists arrangement, at last reports called "Drums of Love." These three may be shown at Grauman's Chinese Theater, it is reported, although the Hollywood showman as yet has made no definite announcement of the successor to "The Gaucho," current.

Norma Talmadge's initial effort for United Artists, an adaptation of Willard Mack's play, "The Dove," will follow "My Best Girl," into the new cinema house named for the producing company, it is announced. The United Artists Theater will also present the Herbert Brenon translation of Warwick Deeping's "Sorrell and Son," and Gloria Swanson in "Sadie Thompson." The latter, as almost everyone must know by now, is the title given to the adaptation of the short story of the same name, subsequently a stage success as "Rain."

Carthay Circle bookings for 1928 include "Four Sons," John Ford's production of "Grandma Bernle Learns Her Letters;" "Lady Cristilinda"—said to have been retitled "Naples"—starring Janet Gaynor and directed by Frank Borzage; "The Cock-Eyed World," Laurence Stallings's sequel to "What Price Glory;" and F. W. Murnau's picturization of "The Four Devils." All of these are Fox films.

LOVE AND PREFERENCES

At the Million Dollar will be exhibited "Love," with John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, starting Thursday, and following it, a visualization of Anita Loos's "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." The first-named is expected to remain six weeks, it is reported. A third special, the Ernst Lubitsch production of "The Student Prince in Old Heidelberg," will go in after the "Blondes" picture.

Thursday the Metropolitan will screen "Serenade," the Adolphe Menjou vehicle by Ernest Vajda. It will be replaced by "West Point," with William Haines and Joan Crawford. After "West Point," will come "Wife Savers," detailing the latest escapades of Beery and Hatton; and then, on the 26th inst., the Paramount company's sequel to "Beau Geste," the John Waters production of "Beau Sabreur."

Loew's State Theater announces showings of "Baby Mine," a free adaptation of the stage comedy, beginning Friday; Will Rogers's "A Texas Steer;" "The Lovelorn;" and "Pullman Partners," starring Norma Shearer.

Al Jolson's Vitaphone success, "The Jazz Singer," is expected by theater officials to remain at the Criterion for five or six months. No successor is named.

The West Coast Boulevard will have among its first runs, "Wild Geese," from Martha Ostenso's prize novel.

THE CURRENT PLAYBILL

The current list of attractions at houses of the spoken drama is a strong one. "Undertow" is holding forth at the Egan with its successor yet to be named. Lou C. Wiswell, lessee, announces, however, that only new plays will be produced at the Egan in 1928.

The Mayan Theater where "Sunny" is now holding forth, will house in 1928, according to present plans, only the best and newest of musical comedies straight from New York.

At the Shrine Auditorium, where a ten weeks' light-opera season opened auspiciously last week with "The Merry Widow," and where "Katinka" is now setting feet a-tapping, "Wildflower" will be the next offering.

Distinction Marks Offerings

Stage and Silent Drama

Respectively achieve high ranking with "Broadway," in its fifteenth week at the Mason, and "Sunrise," at the Carthay Circle. Rosita Kyle (above) and Janet Gaynor are prominent in the casts—Miss Kyle in the drama of the cabarets, and Miss Gaynor in the photoplay.

GENE AUSTIN TOPS NEW BILL

Celebrities of the stage and screen unite forces for the new program at the Hillstreet next week, where Gene Austin, the young Texan tenor, will share top-line honors with Ethel Clayton and Ian Keith in a playlet entitled "Clipped." Austin will offer a repertoire of melodies for his Hillstreet engagement which will include some that have brought him considerable attention as a recording artist.

Joe Browning is going to offer his timely sermon—pessimistically, perhaps, anent the doings of today. A pleasant surprise—more or less—will be the announced return of Edith Evans in a new act with Ray Mayer. The Aurora Trio will offer their dexterous cycle act, while the Marimba Maids, a dozen comely young ladies, play all sorts of musical instruments.

Franklyn Pangborn will head the screen fare in his initial starring vehicle entitled "My Friend From India," a comedy of the desert country, dia," in which he is supported by Elinor Fair, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Ethel Wales and Tom Ricketts. The story was directed from the original by E. Mason Hopper.

Sartorial Gift Dispensed With

"Man, Woman and Sin," John Gilbert's newest starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is now showing at Grauman's Egyptian Theater, presents the star in a role which differs from anything he has yet done in at least one obvious feature. In the past he usually has been a fashion plate of masculine dress, but in the new picture he departs totally from sartorial elegance.

Gilbert's role is that of a reporter on a Washington (D. C.) paper. Monta Bell, who directed the picture, was formerly a newspaper man in that city, and he insisted that newspaper reporters do not wear tailor-made clothes. So, in the interest of realism, Gilbert wears a "stock" suit, instead of the hand-fitted garments in which he is usually seen on the screen.

Bell's intimate knowledge of newspaper work enabled him to inject many touches of genuine realism in the picture, with the result that critics have rated "Man, Woman and Sin" as one of the most authentic pictures of press life ever filmed.

Jeanne Eagels, stage star, is seen as Gilbert's leading woman, and the cast also includes Marc McDermott.

REALISM IN "CRADLE SONG"

The production by the Civic Repertory Theater Company, of Gregorio and Maria Martinez Sierra's "The Cradle Song" brings before American playgoers a work that is perhaps the best example to be found of present-day Spanish realistic drama. The older Spanish drama was essentially a drama of intrigue, but here is a play that has been immensely popular in Spain for the past dozen years, in which the element of conspiracy is entirely supplanted by repose, beauty, sentiment and spirituality. In its technical craftsmanship "The Cradle Song" is beyond question one of the finest pieces of dramaturgy that has been created in our time.

GRAUMAN WILL GREET GUARDS

Sid Grauman, who is an honorary captain in the company, personally will greet his comrades in arms, officers and men of Company D, One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry, California National Guard, when they attend the Thursday-night presentation of "The Gaucho" in Grauman's Chinese Theater with their wives and sweethearts, as his honor guests.

McINTYRE, HEATH PROVIDE COMEDY

The new bill at Pantages was made noteworthy by two circumstances: The presence of McIntyre and Heath and an act of unusual merit presented by Gautchi and Phelps.

It seems almost needless to go into detail concerning the antics of McIntyre and Heath, blackface comedians of the "Two Black Crows" school. Their sketch was made up entirely of "wise cracks," some old and some new, but all of them sparkling and worthy of the laughs accorded them. The first act, which had to do with airplanes, scored the biggest hit. There was a motion-picture sequence introduced which marked it as truly novel.

The closing scene, behind the bars of a jail cell, however, was too reminiscent of the recent visit of the "Two Black Crows" to rank as a striking success. Even the parting shot, "That's all I wanted to know," was there.

And now for the other act of merit, presented by Gautchi and Phelps. This included a marimba band that was a veritable riot. The band never failed to score with any of its offerings, and the only criticism that could be made was that there was not enough of it.

The featured attraction in the sketch were the dancers, Gautchi and Phelps. The team presented an apache number and a tango, both of which were done with artistry. A singer was also featured.

Other items on the bill included Gurdane and Lieuallen, Louise and Mitchell, the Four Volunteers.

Production to Leave Bay City

Lillian Albertson's production of Vincent Youmans' nautical musical comedy, "Hit the Deck," will have its final performance in San Francisco Saturday night and the entire company of eighty will embark for Los Angeles to reopen the Majestic, Monday evening.

Hailed as one of the most popular musical comedies ever presented in San Francisco or elsewhere, "Hit the Deck," like Miss Albertson's "Desert Song," which is now at the Windsor Square, is being presented in four cities simultaneously. The other three are London, New York and Chicago.

"Hit the Deck" is Vincent Youman's musical version of Hubert Osborne's drama, "Shore Leave." It boasts such hummable songs as "Hallelujah," "Sometimes I'm Happy," "Join The Navy," "Armful of You," and "Lucky Bird." The lyrics are by Herbert Fields.

REPORT HALE TO DIRECT

Alan Hale will complete this week his first co-featured comedy role with William Boyd in "Skyscraper" for De Mille-Pathe. There was a report current yesterday that Hale may direct a De Mille vehicle for the new program. He made "Braveheart" and "Rubber Tires" among others for De Mille.

GOUDAL TO REMAIN HERE

Jetta Goudal will not make a picture for First National in Germany. This the De Mille star stated yesterday in answer to reports. She is still under contract to De Mille and probably will return to production within the next three weeks.

"KATINKA" ENJOYED AT SHRINE

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

It is pleasant to renew the acquaintance of such a tuneful musical work as "Katinka."

This Rudolf Friml creation, which had its great reign of popularity more than ten years ago, was given as the second production of the Al Malaikah Temple Light Opera Company last night at Shrine Auditorium.

An audience exceeding 2000 persons heard the performance, and more than once expressed warmly their enjoyment of songs that are well-remembered, and of a plot that still retains much of its sparkle.

Granted some of the humor of "Katinka" is old-fashioned, and references to Billy Sunday, De Wolf Hopper and personalities of another day are not particularly pertinent any more, there is much gayety pervading the dialogue that once doubtless called forth a mirthful uproar. Otto Harbach's sense of comedy has managed to be rather surprisingly persistent in this piece, and occasionally Richard Powell, as the American citizen in Europe, in the plot, adds an interpolation that is effective.

"Katinka" has not been heard here since it was given by a touring company during its hey-day of favor. The production then was not historic. "Katinka" was never epoch-making as was "The Merry Widow." Yet Friml has perhaps never written more spontaneous music, unless one goes back to his very earliest accomplishments. Then, to be sure, there is "Rose Marie."

The production of "Katinka" at the Shrine achieved a climaxing spectacular effect in the final act. It was very attractively staged throughout, and the final scene was festive. Garlands of roses were let down upon the stage, in the midst of which colored lights shone, while confetti and balloons enhanced the carnival embellishments.

There was prolonged applause after the curtain fell on this scene.

In the opening act the production was a trifle ragged, as the company has but limited opportunity for rehearsal. There was gaining smoothness throughout the production. The comedy of the second act afforded particular pleasure, thanks to Mr. Templeton's efforts. He appeared as the outstanding principal.

Charlot Woodruff, who sang "The Merry Widow" the preceding week, also added much to both the second and third acts by her song numbers. She did not appear in the first. She has both assurance and ability, and her voice carries exceptionally well in comparison with certain of the other singers. She made a very pleasing impression in the role of the American's wife, which becomes eventually almost equal in importance to that of Katinka.

Cora Bird, in the Katinka role, was disappointing. She received an encore to the "Rackety-Coo" number, but at all times it was difficult to hear her voice above the orchestra. A rather pleasing presence compensated to some extent for this deficiency.

Ralph Errolle, when he actually sang out, disclosed a good lyric tenor quality. One had the feeling that he held himself in reserve, however, for the higher tones and culminations of his numbers.

There is an excellent comedian in the person of John Cherry, who shared in the honors which went to Templeton. A minor part of Pierre was very well done by Roland Woodruff. Louis Templeton was acceptable vocally in the baritone role of Boris. Alexander Gill, George Kunkel and others may be credited. "Allah's Holiday" was sung by Pauline French, but in a style far too suppressed to illumine its radiant beauty.

Ensemble effects were splendid once the production was well under way. They indicate the material for very successful productions. Voices did not always ring out with requisite fullness in the chorus, but the general character of their work was worthy of commendation, and in spite of the huge size of the Shrine stage there were several scenes, notably, of course, the last, that had decided glamour. The dancing numbers, with Beth Laemmle as the sole dancer, were alluring.

"Katinka" has a full share of attractive musical selections. "Rackety Coo" and "Allah's Holiday," are but two examples. "In Vienna," "Your Photo," "The Weekly Wedding," "In a Hurry," "Skidikiscatch," "I Can Tell by the Way You Dance" are all for various reasons clever. There is also a rather charming romantic solo for tenor, "I Want All the World to Know."

You will enjoy the tuneful character of this light musical show, and the general effect of the performance.

"Kongo" Probed for Screening

This melodramatic thriller is rumored to be the object of interest of scores of Hollywood folk, producers, stars and cameramen, who have seen the motion-picture possibilities of "Kongo."

Presented by a generally competent company, including Charles B. Middleton, eastern star of "Kongo," Shannon Day, Ziegfeld Follies girl and motion-picture player; Ivan Miller, whose portrayal of the outcast, Dr. Kingsland, is causing some comment, and Monte Carter, producer of the play and the colorful Whippy in it, this stage thriller is giving Hollywood a finished photoplay on the stage, it has been said.

Duffy Observes Trend of Drama

While in the East Duffy and Miss Winter intend to see performances of outstanding comedy hits with the object of bringing the rights to several west for production at El Capitan and other houses in Duffy's Pacific Coast chain.

Recently the producer secured exclusive western rights to "The Baby Cyclone," the George M. Cohan comedy, and "Tommy," George Tyler's play.

RECALL RULING LIKELY TODAY

Grouping of Petitions to Oust Mayor at Issue

Checking Awaits Decision by City Attorney

Possible Candidates Listed by Circulators

City Clerk Domingues is expected to receive a ruling from City Attorney Stephens today as to the manner of checking the two sets of petitions for the recall of Mayor Cryer filed at the City Hall last week, and these reports from the City Attorney, it is believed, will play an important part in the part in the success or failure of the recall.

Mrs. Estelle C. Holman filed a recall petition last Friday bearing approximately 44,000 signatures. On Saturday she filed 106 petition sheets bearing approximately 2989 signatures. The City Clerk has asked the City Attorney as to whether to check both petitions as one, or to check and report on the petition filed Saturday separately. Then there is the question the City Attorney must decide as to whether or not the slightly different petition forms included in those filed shall be included and checked. Some of the petitions asked for the recall of both the Mayor and City Attorney. This was the first petition form used by Mrs. Holman last summer, and discarded and replaced with petition forms asking only for the recall of the Mayor.

SHRINKAGE LARGE

If the City Attorney rules that the petitions filed Friday and Saturday shall be checked and reported on separately and rules out the double-barreled recall petitions, this will reduce the total by more than 3000 signatures.

A total of 32,000 signatures of registered voters is necessary to call the special recall election. City election experts say that of a total of 44,000 names filed on the first petition there is small chance that on checking the petition will have 32,000 signatures of registered voters, as petitions shrink sometimes as much as 30 per cent due to persons signing them who were not registered voters.

If, however, the petition is found sufficient, then the City Council must call a special election, which will be held about the middle of March.

POSSIBLE CANDIDIATES

Those interested in the recall are confident of its success and efforts have been made to obtain a candidate to oppose the Mayor. Possibilities mentioned are former Judge Robert M. Clarke, Public Works Commissioner Hugh J. McGuire, whose battle against the West Adams storm drain extras alienated him from the Cryer administration, former Councilman E. E. Moore, former President of the City Council Boyle Workman, former Councilman Robert M. Allan, and Warren B. Bovard of the University of Southern California.

A recall ballot is in two parts. At the top of the ballot is the question as to whether or not the Mayor shall be recalled. The second part of the ballot bears the names of candidates who have filed nominating petitions including the name of Mayor Cryer, whose name appears on the ballot without his taking out a petition.

PATRONIZING HOME GOODS ADVOCATED

Chicago Editor Asks Why Californians Deign to Use So Much Eastern Food

"I am amazed at the Californian's lack of appreciation of his State's excellent and varied food products," he explained. "On this trip I have had set before me in homes and public dining-rooms and restaurants eastern products in an amazing variety. Ketchup, ginger ale, grape juice, sauce, candy, coffee, tea, chili, pickles, cocoa, chocolate and cigars are some of the eastern products which have been served to me, in spite of the fact that some California concern grows, packs or distributes each and all of these products."

Mr. Whitmore was sent to California to make a special study of sales and advertising methods of the west coast companies, for his magazine Sales Management, a business publication of Chicago. He is a member of the editorial staff of that paper and a contributor to other business magazines.

"Californians ask the world to eat their products, buy their lumber and other manufactureres products," he said, "but if the thousands of winter and summer visitors come to California and report, when they return home, that eastern products are in greatest demand, how can Californians expect the outside world to consume California products."

Japanese Shoot at Auto Thieves in Wild Chase

Fleeing from officers, two men yesterday took refuge in the Japanese gardens on the Hellman ranch with two stolen automobiles, only to become the target of a barrage of shotgun fire directed at them by fifteen Japanese gardeners on patrol duty.

A watchman blew his police whistle when they were discovered. The fugitives abandoned a small car they were towing and attempted to escape in the other car. Unfamiliar with the terra'n, the men drove into a blind road and the car stuck in the mud.

At this moment the entire force of Japanese watchmen opened fire with shotguns and the men fled, abandoning the other car.

APPRAISAL COURSE TO START

Embracing a close study of the problems of appraisals, a course in the important subject will be started the 17th inst. by the extension division of the University of California at 858 North Vermont avenue, it was announced yesterday. John P. Kennedy, appraisal engineer, will have charge of the course. Other courses of interest to real estate men are real estate principles and practice, law relating to real estate and the theory of advertising.

PITT SCORES FIRST

The scoring all happened in the second quarter, after Pitt had made a costly drive from her own 19-yard line to Stanford's 20-yard stripe. An incompleted pass fell over the goal line. On the second play Pitt fumbled while attempting to punt on her own left end. Jimmy Hagan recovered it, scooped up the ball and raced for the touchdown. And then Warren Heinecke, subbing for Wilton, busted into the picture. Heinecke is right there for he blasted Pitt's line and took Booth's punt full in the face. But it was

A few minutes later the Cards were marching away at Pitt's goal, finally carrying the ball to the 2½-yard line on fourth down. "Pop" Warner figured it was time to take a hand in the proceedings, his team having failed one or twice before when Pitt's 8-yard line. Accordingly he dispatched Spud Lewis into the game and Spud called a screen play on which Wilton doing the passing. Wilton kicked the ball away all right and Hagan landed in Sima's hands, but Stanford back fumbled when he was on the 2-yard line and the ball rolled away out to the left. Hagan came tearing in, bent on redeeming his previous error. Two Pitt players were also after the ball, but Hagan got there first and raced to the Pitt 3 or 4 yards away. One of the Panthers clambered on Frank's back but he was not to be detained, and went on over the goal line. It was a peculiar play. Looked almost as if the ball was dead, when Hagan was tackled, but suddenly the ball squirted out of the mass of players and bounded off to the left, where Hagan, steady as a deacon, pulled

POP PROUD OF CARDINALS

Stanford Coach Lauds Fighting Spirit of Stanford Men for Winning After Trailing Pitt

BY BOB RAY

"I'm certainly proud of my boys, proud of them not only because they won, but also because they once more this season showed their fighting spirit by coming back after being behind."

And them, fellow-citizens, was the sentiments expressed in the dressing-room by Mr. Glenn Scobey Warner after his Stanford Cardinals had just finished defeating Pittsburgh, 7 to 6, in the annual Rose Bowl football frolic yesterday.

HAL McCREERY

"Of course," continued the Stanford mentor, "we didn't win by much of a margin and perhaps plenty of fans will say that we were lucky to get our touchdown the way we did, but we were up against a mighty tough outfit and I'm satisfied with that one-point victory.

"While on the subject of touchdowns, one might say that both sides got their touchdowns on breaks, Pittsburgh, when Hagan recovered Wilton's fumble, and Stanford when Wilton, after passing to Sims, recovered the ball when the latter fumbled when tackled. That ought to make it even in the matter of breaks, with Hoffman giving us the edge by converting. Heinecke, who replaced Freeman at tackle, must be given a lot of credit for the Stanford victory for he was the player who blocked Booth's attempt for the extra point.

WORDEN IS LAUDED

"Worden, who has not been used much this season, also played a remarkable game at end for us when he relieved Preston. Worden caught the pass that netted us 31 yards in our march for the touchdown, and also played a great defensive game. Post also showed to advantage on that guard-around play which I had rigged up for this game.

"Pittsburgh certainly showed an indomitable goal line defense. We piled up considerable yardage out in the open, but when near the goal that Pitt forward wall showed plenty of ability.

"Welch did some good work, but I thought that he was overshadowed by Booth and Parkinson, the two fullbacks, yesterday. Parkinson was a demon at backing up the line. Of course, we were laying for Welch, and that makes plenty of difference.

"I really think that Stanford should have had a touchdown in that first-quarter thrust when Pitt stopped us 5 yards from the goal. After we had obtained a first down on the 14-yard line I believe that we would have scored if Hoffman had been given the ball all four plays instead using Hill and Hyland on reverses. However, that's second-guessing, but even coaches can't help doing that sometimes.

NOT LACKING IN THRILLS

"I think everybody will agree with me, though, when I say it was a great game and certainly not lacking in thrills. Pittsburgh put up a fine battle and Coach Jock Sutherland has nothing to be ashamed of."

Capt. Hal McCreery, Stanford center, was loud in his praise for the Pitt line and especially lauded "Bullet" Booth's line-smashing. "It was a tough game and I'm glad that we won."

The Stanford players were particularly pleased that Frank Wilton tossed off the "goat" mantle which fate attempted to fasten on his shoulders when he fumbled and the Pitt touchdown resulted. Wilton has been unfortunate on the gridiron in the Cards' big games. Last New Year's Wilton had a punt blocked in the fourth period and Alabama recovered for a touchdown and got a tie, 7 to 7. In the Stanford-S. C. game Saunders recovered a fumble by Wilton and galloped to the Trojans' first touchdown.

STATISTICS SHOW HOFFMAN BEST GROUND-GAINER; POST MAKES LONGEST RUN OF DAY

BY AL PARMENTER

The statistical record of yesterday's Pittsburgh-Stanford grid tilt at the Rose Bowl reveals that Hoffman of Stanford was the leading ground gainer of the game in plays from scrimmage. The Stanford fullback netted a total of ninety yards while packing the ball. Closest to Hoffman in yards gained was Welch of Pittsburgh, who totaled fifty-one yards and in addition gained sixty yards for his team in returning punts. Post and Wilton of the Cards were almost equal in their performances of thirty-seven and thirty-six yards gained respectively.

The longest single gain in plays from scrimmage was made by Post in a guard around play in the last quarter when he carried the ball from his own 45-yard line to the Pitt 31-yard marker, a gain of 24 yards.

Hagan not only registered the longest punt of the day but was second to himself. His two leading boots were for 66 and 57 yards.

Pittsburgh suffered the greatest penalty of the game when they were assessed 27 yards for holding when Hoffman had kicked, Stanford being given possession of the ball when the offense took place. This was in the second quarter. Stanford received a similar penalty of 22 yards for interfering with the receiver of a pass which was a penalty inflicted in the final quarter of the game.

WILTON SAVES STANFORD

Rose Bowl Honors Return to West as Cards Trim Pittsburgh in New Year Struggle

BY RALPH HUSTON

The Panthers from Pittsburgh were Yellow Jackets yesterday and they carried a sting. But the sting was just enough to stir Pop Warner's Stanford Cardinals to something akin to a fighting spirit, and the West won, 7 to 6. That puts the ledger for the year into the black ink for the sons of the Pacific, with three victories in five intersectional games. The U.S.C. Trojans and U.C.L.A. Bruins both tumbled to midwestern foes—Notre Dame and Drake respectively—while Stanford, California and the Western All-Stars were returned victors over Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and the Eastern All-Stars.

There were plenty of breaks in the game, with matters about even. Penalties were frequent, and severe, with the field. The results were sensational. Biff Hoffman, the stellar line plunger of the Cards, tried it out first. He crashed into the line, and bounced right back out again when Parkinson shot nito the breach. To say that Biff got up groggy is not casting asparagus at the Cardinal star. Everybody else that tried to pile through the line found the same human thunderbolt in the breach.

BOB EVANS

Bob Evans, the former Stanford coach, who has been an official in our midst for lo, these many moons, inflicting most of the damage.

Little Frank Wilton, the former Huntington Park flash, seems to find the Rose Bowl something of a hoodoo, although yesterday he redeemed himself for past errors. If you'll remember, it was Wilton who had a kick blocked by Alabama last year, giving the southerners a tie. Yesterday it was Wilton who fumbled to give Hagan a chance to score Pittsburgh's touchdown. But then, it was Wilton who juggled Sims's miscue, finally corraled it, an dalid over the goal line, digging his right ear into the Pasadena turf.

Tom Parkinson, substitute Pittsburgh fullback, proved to be considerable of a riot on defense. Coach Jock Sutherland, Panther mentor, substituted judiciously when the Cards threatened on two or three occasions, and Parkinson was one of the first to tote his 191 pounds on to ton was alone in his chase for the ball and there were three golden-jerseyed Panthers in hot pursuit of the pigskin.

Hoffman toed the ball squarely between the uprights for the point that brought victory, and for that deed he is a hero in Stanford eyes.

But it was Heinecke, the sub, who turned the tide. It was Heinecke, the sub, the man who learned the signals for five positions on the Stanford team this year, that brought Stanford something better than she got last year—a 7-to-7 tie.

It was squasty Heinecke, a sawed-off bulldog, who might have been substituted at center, guard, tackle, end or quarterback, who should have his name written in large letters on the Stanford scroll of honor.

For it was Heinecke, the sub, who busted up Pittsburgh's only real march of the day, breaking through the line and smearing Hagan for a 9-yard loss. That spoiled the Pittsburgh sequence of plays on which Welch and Booth were rattling off yard after yard on their way to the Stanford goal, and Welch had to try a forward pass on fourth down with 16 yards to go.

This march had taken the ball 34 yards down the field to Stanford's 26-yard line, which was the closest Pitt got all day to the scoring zone.

HAGAN SCORES FOR PITT

Welch's pass was grounded over the goal line, and Stanford took the ball on her own 20-yard line. On the second play Wilton started around Pitt's right end on a reverse, but was tackled hard and the ball shot out of his hands. Hagan was on it like a hawk, and, scooping it up on the bound, he dashed over the Cardinal goal without anybody laying a hand on him.

Enter Heinecke, the sub. In the Penn State game Booth, the Pitt fullback, scored a perfect mark by kicking four field goals after touchdowns. He was rated as a sure shot—a sort of Jesse James whenever he applied his trained hoof to the pigskin.

But he reckoned not with Heinecke, the sub, who shot out of the line like a cannonball. Booth no more than got the ball off the ground before Heinecke had it smothered. Smothered like a mother cradles her baby from impending harm.

Heinecke knew what that one point meant to Stanford. It meant a chance to win the game by scoring a touchdown and kicking goal, and so when you remember that Wilton redeemed himself for his own bobble and scored for Stanford, remember also that Heinecke, the sub, made it possible for Hoffman to win the game by kicking goal.

HEINECKE ONLY A SUB

There will be no picture of Heinecke, the sub, this morning, because Heinecke, the sub, was not numbered among the Stanford stars. They don't take pictures of anybody but stars for newspaper consumption, so Heinecke will have to wait until next fall for exploitation by the Stanford management.

It was a tough game for Coach Sutherland's Panthers to lose, but any game that is settled by a goal from touchdown is tough to lose. Ask Howard Jones of U.S.C. He knows.

But on the run of the play Stanford deserved to win because the Cards took the ball and by dint of marvelous work packed it to the Pitt 5-yard line or better on three different occasions, while Pitt was never able to get closer than Stanford's 26-yard line. Twice the Card's had the ball on the 2-yard line, but couldn't put it over.

In each of the four quarters Stanford was within the enemy's last 10-yard stripe, but was unable to score until the third period, and that tally

Yesterday morning we remarked that Warner would probably spring something new against the Panthers. He did. It was the guard-around-play, with Seraphim Post carrying the ball. We don't recall having seen Stanford use it in some years, but it came in mighty handy yesterday. Post carried the ball three times and amassed 32 yards, or an average of better than 10 yards per crack. Not bad for a guard, not bad. His one run of 25 yards was the longest individual jaunt of the day, which is rather remarkable for a guard.

BIFF TAKES POUNDING

Pop revived the hidden-ball play with Hoffman carrying the pigskin. For a long time the Panthers did not get onto the fact that Biff had something on his hip and let him go by for long gains. Later, when they discovered Biff was likely to have the ball every time he started running, the Panthers knocked him down just to be sure they weren't being fooled.

Pitt's offensive plays did not click, but the Panthers were beats on defense. They battled and battled whenever their goal was threatened and it will be this side of their playing that sticks out as the months roll on.

The crowd was late arriving, some of the spectators missing out on the first half entirely. Three fine bands entertained before the game started, the South Pasadena Legion organization getting the most cheers.

The new closed end of the bowl at the south end of the stadium adds greatly to the inclosure's beauty. These seats were nearly all filled in preference to those at the other end when the sun beat down.

Laura La Plants, movie star, provided box lunches and coffee for the scribes in the press box. She also presented the Stanford team with a huge floral piece before the game, which caused some Pittsburgh wag to inquire if the Cards were dead already.

Pitt's grid regalia was positively the loudest that we have ever lamped. Screaming gold jerseys, with blue stripes down the front, first caught the eye. Then those gleaming white helmets smacked you right in the optic. The Panthers wore no stockings, being one of the first eastern teams to appear minus hosiery.

Jock Sutherland, Pitt mentor, drank a lot of water and Pop Warner smoked several packages of cigarettes. Both coaches used substitutes judiciously, there being more reserves sent into action than in any previous East vs. West game that we can recall.

The battle was marred only by numerous penalties, many of the technical variety, which fans could not understand. Pitt lost 82 yards in this manner, which was more than half as much as they gained all day carrying the ball.

resulted from a bobble. Pitt had Stanford stopped then because when Sims fumbled after catching a short pass from Wilton he was still a yard from the goal, and it was the last down, Stanford having made 5 yards in four attempts.

So, while Stanford showed greater offensive strength there was little to choose between them defensively.

WELCH STRONG RUNNER

Gibby Welch, Pittsburgh's all-American halfback, proved himself to be a strong, sturdy runner, but lacking the vicious drive that characterized George Wilson, the former Washington hero, along whose general physical lines he is patterned. Welch also lacks the change of pace and clever cut back and forth of Morley Drury of U.S.C.

Welch's best run of the day was a 17-yard sortie around end in the second period. He made 13 yards on a sudden plunge through the line in the same quarter, but the Stanford ends held him pretty well in check on running back punts.

It remained for Post, the big Stanford guard, to turn in the longest run of the day. He reeled off 23 yards on a guard round play in the fourth period, and put Stanford in a position to score, but Pitt took the ball on the 25-yard line when a series of forward and lateral pass plays went astray.

Stanford's last arrival within the invaders' 10-yard line came a few minutes later when Lewis intercepted a forward pass and ran it back to the Pitt 18-yard line. Post made 5 yards on another guard around play, but an offside penalty and a messed-up lateral pass set the Cards back to the 20-yard line.

At this stage Frentrup faded back to throw a pass, and he heaved it thirty miles to the end zone. The boy must have had stage fright because there was nobody within blocks of the pill. That ended the struggle except for some desperate passes by Pitt which had a prayer tagged to each one. Stanford had the ball on the 32-yard line when the whistle blew.

Jumping back to the first quarter, something should be said about the remarkable punting by both Hoffman and Hagan.

GREAT PUNTING

From the line of scrimmage Hagan toed four punts for 48, 51, 65 and 56 yards, respectively, while Hoffman uncorked a pair of 48 and 56 yards, respectively. Brothers, that is some booting.

Good words should be said, too, for the linemen of both teams, particularly Fox of Pitt and Freeman of Stanford, both of whom were injured and had to give way to subs. Montgomery, who took Fox's place, was a riot, and you've all heard about Heinecke, who replaced Freeman. Preston also was hurt and Worden, who took his place, completed the longest pass of the day on the march which led to Stanford's touchdown. The net gain on a toss from Hoffman was 31 yards.

Hoffman, of course, was a very dependable cog in the Stanford machine both on offense and defense. Next to Post, he turned in the longest run of the day—an 18-yard sortie through the line in the second quarter.

Robesky was injured in the second period, but came back in the third quarter and lasted out the game. McCreery stuck it through, and so did Post. Sellman and Harder

Coach Sutherland made frequent substitutions and all his boys played hard, clean football. Booth exhibited sterling qualities as fullback and Donchess and Guarino at the ends made things very annoying for Stanford.

Stanford made 13 first downs to 9 for Pitt.

Hudkins Lands Three Fights

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—Ace Hudkins, Nebraska Wildcat, today signed for three bouts to be held in Madison Square Garden, the third a tentative arrangement whereby Hudkins will be pitted against the champion, Joe Dundee, for the welterweight title.

In making the announcement, Matchmaker Jess McMahon said Hudkins would have a pick of Clyde Hull, Farmer Joe Cooper or Lew Tendler for his opponent on the 20th inst.

Hudkins will be given an engagement with Sergt. Sammy Baker early next month and if he is successful the Nebraskan will make a bid for the welter crown some time in March provided Dundee is reinstated meantime and the New York State Athletic Commission indorses the match.

Farrell's card included four birdies.

MARS TO BATTLE LEE AT PASADENA

Bobbie Mars, popular local flyweight, will substitute for Ernie Hood in the feature event at the Pasadena Arena in a bout with Harry Lee, Chinese battler. Manager Morris Cohen secured Mars in Hood's place when he was informed by Hood that his infant child had passed away. Mars is a popular little slugger and he should make things interesting for the Chinese fighter who seems to be headed for big things in the flyweight ranks. The Chinese boy has a great reputation, having dropped only one decision out of forty fights. Mars recently gave Mickey Erno a hard evening at Pasadena and Cohen believes he will be a tough customer for the Chinese lad.

BADGERS BEAT OREGONIANS

MADISON (Wis.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Wisconsin's light but speedy team defeated the touring basketball squad of the Oregon Aggies tonight, 36 to 20, after a ragged and slow first half. The Badgers led by but a single point, 12-11, at high-time.

Huerta Evans Faces Sullivan in Special Ring Number

Brown is Jewish. McCoy is Irish. They offer a contrast in appearance for Brown is knotted with muscles, while McCoy is [illegible] and supple.

It is the first opportunity Brown has had to fight for a championship. In his bouts with Fidel La Barba over the weight. And he twice met Frankie Genaro after Genaro had lost his crown to La Barba.

The hungriness of Brown for a title and the short tenure in office of McCoy should induce some tall scuffling on both sides. The boys would pick on Brown to start with after winning a title as McCoy has done.

Jimmy Randolph, a sparring partner of Jack Sharkey who got so good he chased him out of camp. He is a fine-looking fellow and his pillars are loaded with a hard pair of [illegible].

Randolph boxes Joe Woods in the semi-wind-up. Woods has been [illegible] them all the past year. He [illegible] responded to the George Blake [illegible] almost as well as did Fidel La Barba, who won his title in a professional bouts.

Huerta Evans and Charley Sullivan box the special. A lot of [illegible] is coming to Evans since [illegible] whipped Johnny Cruz his first time out. But Sullivan is highly [illegible] himself. The bout should produce plenty of sizzle.

The fours—Ben Golden vs. Ramon [illegible] and Joe Blend vs. Michael Holcomb—complete the supporting card [illegible] the championship wind-up.

Virgil Evans Faces Sullivan in Special Ring Number

Although Brown thinks he will knock the champion out, pickers are wary since McCoy has never lost a match in the flyweight limit.

Brown is Jewish. McCoy is Irish. They offer a contrast in appearance for Brown is knotty and muscles, while McCoy is lithe and supple.

It is the first opportunity Brown has had to fight for a championship. He has been out with Fidel La Barba over the weight. And he twice whipped Genaro after Genaro had been given to La Barba.

The eagerness of Brown for a title and the short tenure in the ring of McCoy should induce a lot of scuffling on both sides. Experts would pick on Brown to win after winning a title as McCoy has done.

Eddie Randolph, a sparring partner of Jack Sharkey who got so good he chased him out of camp. He is a fine-looking fellow and his pilot is loaded with a hard pair of mitts.

Randolph boxes Joe Woods in the semi-windup. Woods has been fighting them all the past year. He was promoted to the George Blake class almost as well as did Fidel La Barba who won his title in a few professional bouts.

Virgil Evans and Charley Sullivan are the special. A lot of interest is attaching to Evans since he defeated Johnny Cruz his first time out. But Sullivan is high-class himself. The bout should be plenty of sizzle.

Other bouts—Ben Golden vs. Ramon Diaz and Joe Bletid vs. Michael Holmes complete the supporting card to the championship wind-up.

Both McCoy and Brown are to weigh in at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER, BILL HENRY

OTHER gentlemen are writing their impressions of the Stanford-Pittsburgh game but yours truly, having attended not to write but to root and holler, has nothing to offer in the way of a connected yarn. We did see a lot of things that made an impression on us and we therefore take this occasion to call attention to some of the individual bits which may, or may not, have been overlooked in the general excitement.

Stanford fumbled Pittsburgh into a 6-to-0 lead and then fumbled herself into a tie a few moments later. Frankie Wilton figured in each play. He fumbled the ball that Hagan picked up for Pitt's touchdown and he picked up Sims's fumble at the other end of the field to score Stanford's 6 digits. And his daddy was right there with a camera to take his boy's picture when he became a hero.

Among the unsung heroes ought to be mentioned young Mr. Heinicke who filled in for Freeman at right tackle for the Cards. On the first play after he went in the game he threw Hagan for a loss of 8 yards and a few moments later when Hagan had scored Pitt's touchdown, Heinicke charged in and took Booth's attempted goal kick right on the end of his nose. That was the point that won the game.

Stanford certainly got a big bulge on the officiating and the crowd didn't like it. The 15-yard penalty on Pitt for unnecessary roughness did not look to be deserved and just a few seconds previous to that they had completely overlooked the play on which Guarino of Pitt was clipped from behind as he was about to tackle Hyland. Penalties kept Pitt in trouble the whole first half.

Pug Parkinson and the rest of the subs who were shot into the fray near the end of the first half and repelled Stanford's threatened score, deserve a lot of credit. Parkinson in particular was outstanding on defense. He hit Hoffman so hard that he nearly broke the lanky Card fullback in half. Sutherland certainly made the right substitutions at the right time.

Pop Warner certainly made great use of the ancient "guard around" play with Seraphim Post carting the pill. The demon Stanford guard made one of the longest runs of the game on the play. The hidden-ball play with the pill hidden in Hoffman's mighty paw worked like a charm until Pitt finally caught on to it.

Biff Hoffman played the greatest game of his career and little Frankie Wilton was all over the place too. Murphy was unusually strong on defense. Sellman, Post, McCreery and Harder were outstanding in the line for the Cards. Fox played a great game in the line for Pitt and so did Montgomery. A mean pair of guards.

Welch looked like a really great player for Pitt on offense and defense both. We're inclined to believe that if Pitt hadn't been penalized so frequently near the start of the game and thereby kept shoved back in their own territory where they couldn't pull anything but straight stuff, we'd have seen Welch scintillate to better advantage.

The proprietor of this column is not usually violent and he is a genuine admirer of Pop Warner as a coach but if any Stanford rooters come around and claim that the Stanford touchdown was rallied as a result of one of Pop Warner's "scoring plays" we're going to swear out an insanity complaint against 'em.

Stanford certainly lost an excellent opportunity to score when the hidden-ball trick failed to work on the two-yard line. Wilton and Hoffman had packed the ball more than half the length of the field in that long drive.

The Cardinals opened the second half auspiciously by returning the kick-off to the thirty-yard line, but were held by Pitt's strong line and had to punt. After exchanging kicks Stanford started again on her own thirty-yard line, but was soon forced to punt and immediately Pittsburgh began its really great march of the game. Welch, Booth and Fisher did most of the ball carrying, but the drive ended with an incompleted pass over the goal line.

Stanford took the ball and Wilton fumbled on the second play, Hagan, who played fine football throughout the entire game, scooping up the ball and running for the first touchdown. Booth's attempted goal kick was blocked, and this proved to be the deciding point of the game.

Immediately after receiving the kick-off, Stanford worked to within scoring distance by use of a long forward pass. Strong line plunging, aided by Wilton's off-tackle smashes, carried the ball to the 2-yard line. Coach Warner then put in Lewis for Murphy with instructions to use a screened pass. Stanford scored, but by no piece of strategy, for the Stanford right half fumbled and Wilton recovered and ran off end for the touchdown. This break and Hoffman's goal conversion gave Stanford the game, 7 to 6.

In comparing the two teams I would say that Stanford should be credited with having the best eleven. Stanford was many times within scoring territory, and gained considerably more yardage than Pittsburgh. Both teams were tremendously strong defensively.

However, I would say the teams were well matched.

As the game closed Pitt tried many passes in desperation and Stanford, after intercepting one, again threatened to score.

Tut Beaten by Cello on Foul

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Tommy Cello, San Francisco lightweight boxer, lagged in his battle with King Tut of St. Paul at the San Francisco ball park here today, until a low jab by Tut to the stomach was called a foul and gave Cello the victory in the eighth round. The battle was the main event of the first outdoor card presented here this year.

Speedy Dado, Manila flyweight, and Delos (Kid) Williams of New Orleans battled to a draw in another one of the ten-round brawls. Dado scored two no-count knockdowns in the second, but Williams took the last three rounds to earn a draw. Dado weighed 111½ and Williams, 113½ pounds.

Armand Emanuel, light-heavyweight of San Francisco, outboxed and outfoxed Frankie Muskie of St. Paul, taking every round by a good lead. Emanuel weighed 178 and Muskie, 173 pounds.

GRID DATE MIX-UP CLEARED

ATLANTA, Jan. 2. (AP)—The Notre Dame-Georgia Tech "mix-up" in dates has been worked out and the two teams will meet here October 20, .

GRANGE THROUGH—WILSON

This season will be "Red" Grange's last one on the Pacific Coast so far as professional football is concerned, is the claim of George Wilson, leader of the Wilson Wildcats who will play Grange's Yankees at Wrigley Field Sunday afternoon.

For two years Wilson and Grange played under the C. C. Pyle banner, but all the gravy went to Grange, while Wilson had to gnaw on the bone.

Grange received the big ballyhoo in the papers and the heavy cut in the gate receipts.

What peeved Wilson more than anything else was the country-wide tour of the Yankees and Wildcats last fall. Nearly twenty games were played between the two teams and in every contest except two, Wilson took it on the chin.

The big stars were placed on Grange's Yankees and the pounding Wilson and his men received in each game caused the break in relations.

WILDCATS TRIM GRANGE'S YANKEES

BASS IS UNPOPULAR WINNER OVER NEBO

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2. (AP)—Benny Bass, featherweight champion, today won the referee's decision in his scheduled ten-round bout with Pete Nebo of New York after the judges had disagreed.

Bass weighed 127½ pounds and Nebo 127¾. There were howls of derision as Frank McCracken, the referee, decided in favor of the Philadelphia fighter.

Paulino Stops Lester in Ring

NEWARK (N. J.) Jan. 2. (AP)—Paulino Uzcudun, Basque heavyweight, opened his barnstorming tour through the country with a seven-round technical knockout of Pat Lester, a giant Texan, in a scheduled ten-round match before 6000 in the Newark armory this afternoon. Uzcudun scaled 200 pounds and Lester 238.

The Spaniard belted Lester around at will from the start, flooring him in the first round and again in the seventh when the Texan's seconds threw a towel into the ring to save further punishment. Lester was badly cut at the close with blood streaming from cuts above his eyes, lips and nose. The gong kept Pat off the canvas in each of the final four rounds.

JUSTICE F COPS RACE

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2. (AP)—Justice F, owned by William Daniel, Jockey F. Coltiletti up, won the $5000 added New Year's Day handicap, feature of the inaugural card at the fair grounds track today. Fly Hawk, Ruane and Saxon came in next in the order named.

Arabian, War Eagle and Almadel also ran.

LOCAL SOCCERITES WIN

Uncorking an attack that was not to be denied, the Los Angeles All-Star soccer team, with a remade forward line, turned the tables on the San Francisco All-Stars and humbled the invaders by a score of 2 to 1 yesterday at Loyola Field.

The Los Angeles squad started off like a veritable tornado and before the game was ten minutes old had registered the two goals that won the game for them. The northerners failed to register until the closing minutes of the second half.

The first score for the locals came shortly after the game started. Billy Downey, sensational forward and inside right, took the ball from a scrimmage and crossed to Parkinson, stellar center forward, who passed Goalie Zylkel with a hard drive that almost went through the net.

Johnny Holmes, playing in place of Scott, was responsible for the score that put the game on ice. The dynamic inside left of the locals trapped the ball and, weaving in toward the northerners goal, shot a kick to Parkinson, who again beat Zylkel with his kick for marker No. 2.

The visitors stormed the Los Angeles goal in the second half in an attempt to equalize, but every attack was turned back by the two stellar backs, Reggy Thomas and Sammy Wallace and Sigurd Wathne, the great goalie for the locals. However, in the closing minutes, Downie, northern inside right, trapped one of Wallace's boots and dribbling the ball down the field, sent a beautifully placed pass to Conte, the center for the invaders, who tallied with a well-placed kick.

TUNNEY PLANS TO START WORK SOON

CHEERFUL CHAFF

BY TIMES READERS

WRITE FOR THE "MOVIES" AND WIN CASH PRIZES

The Los Angeles Times proposes a popular two reel sailing "Cheerful Chaff," consisting of the funniest local jokes submitted weekly by readers. Twelve $1 prizes are awarded each week, the names and addresses of winners, together with prize-winning jokes appearing on the screen. Everyone is invited to send jokes. No format for this is necessary. Just jot down your jokes, as many as you wish, give your name and address and mail to "Cheerful Chaff Editor," Los Angeles Times. Jokes for the screen must not exceed thirty words. Humorous jokes too long or otherwise not adapted for screen use, are accorded a place of honor on The Times comic page, receiving a measure of acknowledgment.

A radio fan's greatest possible delight would not come from "getting" something exquisite but from getting New Guinea; while the rest of us reverse his yearn and ardently wish New Guinea could get him.

A fair sample lured me to his lair with promise of a treat. For an hour he kept worrying the apparatus till I longed to bite him. He mixed tantalizing snatches of song, story, oration, advertising, music, jazz and dialogue in a nerve-racking medley which made me think of Hamlet's "sweet bells jangled out of tune"—only there was some doubt of Hamlet's insanity. I was just stealing away to inform the psychopathic ward when he shouted: "There! At last!" I stopped and heard faint, intermittent whinings, so disconnected I couldn't tell if it was a Bach symphony or a Bach-fence symphony—by Katz. "That's Vancouver, B. C." he exulted. He'd been passing up good stuff all evening for that—and didn't even suspect he was crazy.

Yea, Palomine, if nothing but Timbuctoo will satisfy you, why go there, instead of trying to bring it till you drive others woolly, too.

Aged Minister Badly Hurt in Automobile Crash

Said to Have Suffered Seven Fractured Ribs

Sons of Glendale Churchman Called to Bedside

GLENDALE, Jan. 2.—Rev. Edward Hoskyn, 81 years of age, a retired minister of the Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is near death in the Glendale Hospital as a result of injuries he received late Saturday night when the car he was driving collided with another machine driven by Lloyd Michel of Fillmore at Ocean View and Michigan avenues, La Crescenta.

Michel escaped unhurt, but surgeons at the hospital stated that Rev. Hoskyn had seven fractured ribs and that he was badly cut about the head and face. No hope is held out for his recovery.

Rev. Hoskyn had been active in the affairs of the Methodist Church for many years, his last two active pastorates being at Garden Grove and Orange. On his eightieth birthday he occupied the pulpit of the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Glendale, and for the past ten years he has taught a large Bible class in the church. Two of his sons, Frederick Hoskyn of San Bernardino and Albert Hoskyn of Los Angeles, were summoned to his bedside today.

IN ACCIDENT

SKULL FRACTURE

FULLERTON, Jan. 2. — Bonnie Mitchell, 20-year-old Huntington Park girl, is in the Fullerton General Hospital today in a critical condition suffering from a basal skull fracture, and six other persons were receiving painful injuries as the result of an automobile accident Saturday night at the intersection of Orangethorp and Grand avenues, south of Buena Park.

The other injured are C. D. McCarver, Juanita McCarver, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sparker, Long Beach; Kenneth Ward, Santa Ana, and Miss Florence Theriot of Los Angeles.

ARTE MAN DIES AS RESULT OF ACCIDENT

MONROVIA, Jan. 2.—Albert Stahler, Jr., 21-year-old son of Albert Stahler, Sr., of Duarte, who was injured in an automobile accident here Friday night, died at Monrovia Hospital today. Ruth Stoneholm, 13, 1419 South Myrtle avenue, was critically injured and is not expected to recover. The two other youthful passengers were injured with minor cuts and bruises. Young Stahler was driving along Huntington Boulevard and apparently became confused in the fog, running into the curb, the car overturning. An inquest is to be conducted by Coroner Benaker's undertaking parlors in Duarte tomorrow at 9 a.m.

School Income From Oil Wells on Land Large

LONG BEACH, Jan. 2.—A compilation of figures covering the activities of two oil wells on property owned by the Long Beach school district, it was revealed that, in five years the wells have earned for the school district a total of $443,000. The property is situated on a two-acre school site purchased by the Board of Education at Willow and Walnut avenues, five years ago, have been paying the school authorities 40 per cent of the total production since they were completed, it was said.

Five lease now being considered by the Board of Education for drilling in the newly discovered deep-oil area would give the school district a 50-50 royalty. A clause in the proposed lease requires that the Malcolm-Davis Oil Company, to begin drilling operations within thirty days after the signing of the instrument.

Oxnard Enjoying Boom in Building

OXNARD, Jan. 2. — Oxnard has had a sudden building spurt. The year 1928 promises to produce many changes in the district so far as construction is concerned. Among the outstanding improvements a new theater in Oxnard perhaps is of chief interest. J. Roy Williams has already started the building which will be a combination picture and playhouse, costing in the neighborhood of $100,000. The present lemon-packing house three blocks to the east of the present shed is under construction in Hueneme for the Limoneira Citrus Association, while the same concern is completing construction of a large orange-packing house at Camarillo.

A new packing house for the Oxnard Walnut Growers' Association is being completed at Camarillo also. The Union Ice Company is adding to its Oxnard plant and a large sum will be expended in improvements. The building formerly occupied by the post office is being remodeled for the new Oxnard bank, no Fifth street, and a number of new homes are going up.

WESTMINSTER PLANS NEW IMPROVEMENTS

WESTMINSTER, Jan. 2.—This city, on the main inland route between Orange county and Long Beach, enters the new year with every indication that 1928 will be the best in the history of Westminster developments. Among the various among recent developments is the opening of New Westminster by a Long Beach corporation of the construction of a $30,000 building at the intersection of Bolsa Chica Beach avenue and Westminster avenue. On the opposite corner, a large garage is now nearing completion.

The Chamber of Commerce also is planning to a very active year in 1928. Negotiations are proceeding for the establishment of a $20,000 ornamental lighting system, the same to be set on both sides of the main street. A new library building, to replace the rooms now being used by the I.O.O.F. Hall, is also in prospect as a development of the new

REDLANDS SETS NEW MARK

City Records Show That Past Year is Most Prosperous With Steady Population Growth

REDLANDS, Jan. 2.—When Redlands business put up the shutters and locked the doors on the last day of the old year and cast an eye over the ledger it was found that 1927 was by far the most prosperous year of the city.

Redlands with its 14,000 acres of finest orange groves in the world, found that it had received more than $10,000,000 for the oranges that were shipped to the folks in the East, the North and the South. There were over 6000 cars and 500,000,000 oranges or five for every man, woman and child in the United States. And for them every man, woman and child in Redlands would receive $6.50 if it were spread out that way. Also record prices of $4000 per acre were established for orange groves here during the year.

Redlands postoffice receipts showed another 7 per cent gain this year, a fine average according to postal records. The total was $72,356.87.

Building did not show any gain over last year but for the third successive year Redlands's building has topped the million mark, a fine record for a town of 15,000. This year the total was $1,035,000 as compared with $1,197,000 last year.

The business men of the city all report gains in their business during the year. In some cases December business was not as great as was expected while in other lines it was much better. The banks show more than $10,000,000 on deposit by the citizens of Redlands, a fine gain.

There has been a steady increase in population, judging from the reports of the public service corporations of new connections made. The gain during the year has been between 800 and 1000, it is said.

Redlands is making great gains in an educational way as shown by the fact that the University of Redlands during the year spent more than a third of a million in building and the school district almost that much.

Santa Barbara County Reaps Golden Harvest

SANTA BARBARA, Jan. 2. — New Year's greetings to ranchers of Santa Barbara county clinked to the extent of more than $10,000,000, according to a survey of the County Horticultural Commission. Farmers, cattlemen, dairymen, orchardists and other branches of the agricultural industry shared the record-breaking year.

Squirrel losses, which in past years have been large, were entirely eliminated this year, and in addition there have been no pest losses. No market losses were faced by the farmers, and late rains have made conditions for 1928 most advantageous.

Vegetable growers of the Santa Maria Valley received $1,678,000 for their crop during the year, although the entire crop brought $3,391,000, which was divided among the exchanges, packing houses and railroads. During 1926, only $1,276,000 was distributed among the growers of that section, an increase of $400,000.

Divorces Gain on Kern Marriages

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 2. — More than 1000 civil complaints were filed in the local Superior courts during the year, just ending, the annual compilation of County Clerk Frank E. Smith shows. Marriages during the year fell off almost 100 couples, this being attributed in a great measure to the three-day marriage-notice law. This year 714 marriage licenses were issued against 810 during 1926. During the year 300 divorce actions were filed and 270 interlocutory decrees issued here by the courts. In addition to these decrees, 28 annulments of marriage were filed. There were 39 fewer divorce actions this year than last.

This year 81 criminal informations were filed, compared with 115 for 1926. Probate petitions increased from 204 last year to 222 for this year. Juvenile complaints totaled 81 this year and the number last year was 105.

BEETLE CULTURE AT RIVERA INCREASED

RIVERA, Jan. 2.—Work is now under way to practically double the output of the insectary of the present laboratory at Rivera, according to information given out by H. M. Armitage, Deputy Horticultural Commissioner of Los Angeles county. Last year there were some 5,000,000 beetles let loose on the mealy bugs that infest the citrus orchards and this year 10,000,000 strong will endeavor to annihilate the citrus pests in the district.

It is reported that the mealy bug infestation at the present time is at extreme minimum, and the work of increasing the cryptolaemus is a precautionary measure. In the building recently acquired for added room 20,000 trays to develop beetles are placed, whereas last year there were but 9000 trays.

GLENDALE STORE AND CUSTOMERS ROBBED

GLENDALE, Jan. 2.—Two armed bandits who held up the Eastman Pharmacy at 401 West Doran street secured $95 in cash from the proprietor, H. L. Eastman, and three customers whom they lined up alongside Eastman. J. A. Wright, 325 Pioneer Drive, lost $5; L. J. Kise, 444-B West Doran street, gave up $15, and Eastman lost $75. F. J. Matthewson, 667 West Arden street, another customer, was searched by the bandits, but they obtained nothing from him. After seizing a quantity of narcotics the bandits walked behind the soda fountain, took a drink of water, and walked out to a waiting car, in which third confederate sat, and fled.

BURBANK CHECKS FLOOD

BURBANK, Jan. 2.—More than 400 check dams have been constructed in the canyons above this city and, according to City Manager Gidley, have already proven their worth by holding back debris and keeping it from washing down into the city streets during the recent rains. Many of the dams were filled level with debris during the last rain.

Uninvited Guest Admits He Shot His Host in Leg

POMONA, Jan. 2.—Jose Vallejo, Pomona Mexican, is in the County Hospital, his leg fractured by a bullet, while Jesus Rivas is in the City Jail awaiting arraignment before justice W. E. Hile on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon as the result of an altercation at the Rivas home, 1310 South Thomas street, early this morning.

Vallejo, one leg pierced and the bone shattered by a bullet from a large-caliber revolver, was found lying in the street at 1:30 a.m. today near the Rivas residence. Police summoned to the scene sent him to the Pomona Valley Community Hospital and later arrested Rivas.

The latter, after a severe grilling, is asserted to have confessed shooting Vallejo in the leg after Vallejo was said to have come, unwelcome, into the Rivas house and threatened the owner with a knife. After first-aid treatment at the local hospital Vallejo was removed to the County Hospital, where his condition is believe not to be dangerous.

New Airplane Ready to Take to Air This Week

BURBANK, Jan. 2. — Within the week the first airplane to be produced by the Thunderbird Aircraft Company at its new location, 900 Allen street, on the Burbank-Glendale line, will take the air on its initial flight, according to an announcement made by officials of the concern.

Although the firm has been making planes for some time this will be the first product of their new and enlarged equipment.

An outstanding feature of the Thunderbird plane, officials pointed out, is its framework made entirely of steel tubing thoroughly braced, giving it maximum strength with minimum weight. All corners and edges that might interfere with sailing speed have been eliminated.

Several types of engine are kept on hand including the make which runs the Spirit of St. Louis, Col. Lindbergh's plane.

Within three months the company hopes to be producing a plane a week and not long after that a plane a day. The planes cost $2750 without a motor which range upward to $6000. Twelve men are now employed and more will soon be added.

Cotton Harvest in Kern County 29,000 Bales

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 2. — More than 26,000 bales of cotton have been ginned in this county to date, according to estimates at gins. The great bulk of Kern county's cotton crop has been harvested and the end of this month will find the crop all ginned, according to cotton men, who predict an increased cotton acreage for next year.

Cotton experts advise against increased acreage, asserting every year that cotton men have a good season, there is an increased planting during the following season with an attendant overproduction and a consequent decrease in prices. Some cotton men believe that more than 35,000 acres of cotton will be planted in this county next year.

It is estimated that more than 9000 bales of this year's cotton remain to be harvested. This will make the total for Kern county's 1927 cotton crop something more than 29,000 bales.

FEED DEALERS FORM BUREAU ON CREDIT

ALHAMBRA, Jan. 2.—Functioning as a separate unit of the Alhambra Business Men's Association, the San Gabriel Valley Feed Dealers' Credit Association has been organized, it is announced by James B. Scullin, secretary of the local business men's body. Scullin will serve the new association in a similar capacity, supervising the activities of both organizations at his office here. Practically all dealers in feed and poultry supplies of the San Gabriel Valley are members of the new association. A policy of tightening credit lines will be enforced under the new arrangement, and thousands of credit ratings will be added to the files.

POULTRY BREEDERS TO CONDUCT SHOW

ALHAMBRA, Jan. 2.—A three-day exhibition of poultry will be staged here the latter part of this month by the Barred Plymouth Rock Poultry Breeders' Association, it is announced by Plym C. Davis, secretary of the Alhambra Chamber of Commerce. The chamber is aiding in planning the show. Only prize-winning stock owned by the members of the poultry association will be shown, it is declared, and a large number of the best birds in Southern California will be entered. John Berry of this city, member of the association, is arranging the program.

SERVICES TUESDAY FOR MRS. BETHEA

GLENDALE, Jan. 2.—Funeral services for Mrs. Annie W. Bethea, who died December 31 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ralph A. Lynd, 1148 Sonora avenue, will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday in the Little Church of the Flowers in Forest Lawn Cemetery, with Rev. Clarence A. Webb, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Los Angeles, officiating.

GIRL DECIDES WHICH IS WHO'S

She Starts New Year With New Idea

Velma Fowler

Who burns her name on belongings to prevent others using them.

INGLEWOOD, Jan. 2.—Miss Velma Fowler of this city is starting the New Year right with a brand-new idea—something really new under the sun. "Know your own," she said, as she proudly displayed a new toothbrush bearing her name. "Velma," in letters of gold, was burned right into the back of the brush. She had used an electric needle for this purpose.

"This is my own idea," she said, as she proudly held the implement of dental cleansing up to the light. "Now there'll be no danger of my small brother using my brush, and I hope to tell you that I am going to similarly name every toothbrush in our family, to prevent any little uncertainties as to which is who's."

Miss Fowler is one of Inglewood's most popular young women but she earns her daily bread, and some butter, in a local pharmacy, where the idea came to her while studying the operation of an electric needle. George C. Malloy, proprietor of a string of pharmacies here, is her employer. He is carrying the idea further by suggesting that it be used to write one's autograph on bill folds, key-ring containers, and shopping bags, in the belief that it will be another Southern California fad that will sweep the country.

MAYWOOD LOOKING AHEAD

MAYWOOD, Jan. 2.—This city is looking forward to a great increase in business activity in the new year. With the opening of the big produce terminal in the Central Manufacturing District, just across the northern boundary line of Maywood, it is expected that naturally it will bring much trade and traffic to and through the city.

Already the city has begun to feel the enlivening effects of so many manufacturing plants which have located within its borders and nearby. The Woolwine Metal Products Company at the intersection of Riverside Drive and Atlantic Boulevard is beginning to be a lively place, while further down Riverside Drive other plants are beginning operations or preparing to build.

Just across the river on Slauson avenue are other big plants, notably the Truscon Steel Company, which came here recently from Youngstown, O., and just south is the California Corrugated Iron Company and, with the Union Iron Company just a little farther on, it is natural to believe that, almost surrounded as the city is with manufacturing industries, both large and small, Maywood will be the place where people employed in these plants will naturally be looking for homes, and already the demand is beginning to call for the erection of a large number of courts and bungalows.

With Atlantic Boulevard passing through Maywood's center north and south and Downey Road and Maywood avenue extending in the same direction through the western part of the city and with Slauson avenue, the east and west boulevard through the center of the city, there is a great future before it, according to those who have been watching matters.

Because of the increased use of motors in agricultural work, farm hands of Europe who cannot find work in the fields are seeking jobs as automobile mechanics with better success.

Flying Field at Red Rock Canyon Offered

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 2.—Red Rock Canyon, known far and wide as a paradise of scenic wonders set by the hand of nature in the wastes of the Mojave Desert, now offers to the world of aviation a highly desirable landing field by utilization of which aerial sightseeing parties might be taken to the canyon, and which would prove an excellent stopping place for commercial flyers spanning the desert.

Information to this effect was sent to Bakersfield today by J. S. Bishop of Cantil, who announced that he is prepared to waive his title rights to the top of Red Rock Mountain in the interest of developing a landing field there. Development work would be required for the proposed field, Mr. Bishop declared, as the top of the mountain contains a big flat where planes could find easy landing and taking off.

ROUND UP NETS NINE

HANFORD, Jan. 2. (AP)—County and city officers co-operated in a round-up last night, seized a quantity of narcotics and arrested nine men. The men though placed under arrest were allowed to go on their own recognizance to appear before Justice H. H. Warnock.

VENTURA HAS GOOD YEAR

Bank Deposits, Shipping, Public Utilities of City Show Tremendous Gains Over 1926

VENTURA, Jan. 2.—Gains for 1927 over 1926 ranging from 14 to 47 per cent in the services of the public utilities corporations here, a gain of 21 per cent in the number of ships using the Ventura wharf, a substantial increase in the footage of lumber brought in over the wharf for city and county use and a similar gain in the oil shipped out and a year's building total second only to that of a year ago, which reached an enormous figure, partly because of the high school construction, all contribute to the conclusion that the past year has been one of steady, substantial growth for the city of Ventura.

Bank deposits, as gathered from the First National and Home Savings Bank, the Bank of Italy and the Union National Bank, show an increase of approximately 38 per cent. The aggregate deposits in 1926 totaled $6,045,649.17, as against $8,356,383.87, an increase of $2,310,734.70.

The city water department reports 14 per cent more connections than at this time a year ago. Light connections are 16 per cent greater.

There are 380 more telephones than this time last year, or a gain of 16 per cent.

There are 1201 more meters than a year ago, representing a gain of 47 per cent.

In 1926, 138 ships used the Ventura wharf. Last year there were 167 boats docked here. Of this number, ten were oil tankers and fifty-six were lumber steamers.

Postal receipts show an increase of almost 25 per cent.

There was a proportionate gain reported by Principal H. O. Wise for the high school over the enrollment for 1926, and Supt. A. L. Vincent reported a similar increase in the grammar-school enrollment.

Oil production for the county is estimated to have reached a total of 20,000,000 barrels, worth $18,000,000, an increase of one-third over 1926. Nearly all the increase was made in the Ventura-avenue field.

'Bone' Prophets Foretell Rains

REDLANDS, Jan. 2.—Well, there is going to be plenty of water to go around. For the goosebones say that there will be plenty of rain this year. In fact, the dark spots on the bones scattered over the county and referred to by the goosebone prophets, all show that there will be a rainfall of more than average. And a comparison of the bone this year with that of last year shows more dark spots and more dark spots mean more rain.

For many years the goosebone prophets of this section have been considered real prophets. And December seems to bear out the prophecy for there was an excellent rainfall that month. In years when the rainfall is light the bone is also unblemished by dark spots. In fact, the prophets who enjoy their goose on Thanksgiving and then keep the breast bone until Christmas when it is ready for prophecy, say that better than twenty inches can be expected for this section.

S. M. Winkelman, one of the old-time prophets of San Bernardino, goes so far as to predict twenty-four inches, or eight inches above normal rainfall.

BUSINESS ACTIVE AT PICO LAST YEAR

PICO, Jan. 2.—The year 1927 has witnessed the completion of three projects of major importance to Pico and vicinity. The area is now served with an abundance of pure water under pressure from the wells of the local county water district. The new Beverly Boulevard is completed through Pico from Whittier to the west limits of Montebello. One of the most modern school buildings in the State and the second school building in Pico has been completed and will be open to students tomorrow. Commercial growth has kept pace with residential growth, the National Bank of Pico and the Pico-Rivera Building Loan Association both being organized during the past year. In addition to other developments the Associated Oil Company is drilling, within Pico, on what is said to be one of the most promising wildcat wells in the Los Angeles basin.

PACIFIC BOULEVARD NEARLY COMPLETED

HUNTINGTON PARK, Jan. 2.—Within the next few weeks it is expected that the improvements under way along Pacific Boulevard, the city's great white way, will be completed, and plans will before long be started for a grand celebration of the event. Both sides of the thoroughfare have been paved, the new ornamental lighting system has been installed, and at the present time a large crew employed by the Los Angeles Street-Car Company are at work, lowering the street-car tracks and placing them closer together. When this work is completed, the company's right of way will be paved, and then a great street dance will be given during one evening immediately following the completion of the work.

OXNARD GARDEN CLUB TO BEAUTIFY STREETS

OXNARD, Jan. 2.—Plans under way by the Ventura County Garden Club, Oxnard branch, and the Oxnard Chamber of Commerce, include the beautification of Oxnard streets and highways leading into the city. While details have not yet been completed, it is the plan to plant hibiscus shrubs along the boulevards and in parking places and athel trees along the highways for the purpose of beautifying the city entrances and also for the purposes of hiding unsightly buildings which are located in certain parts of the city. The two organizations hope that the hibiscus will be adopted as the city's flower and that in time all of the streets will be lined with the evergreen and blossoming shrub.

NEW BANK AT OXNARD

OXNARD, Jan. 2.—According to a statement by W. H. Lathrop, head of the new Oxnard bank, that institution will open its doors for business Tuesday morning, the 3rd inst. The location formerly occupied by the postoffice has been entirely transformed with a large force of men working day and night to have everything in readiness by Tuesday. The new concern is a local bank in which the Bank of Italy Corporation has a portion of the stock.

Burbank Ready to Pay Cash on Outfall Sewer

BURBANK, Jan. 2.—Burbank officials have a check for $220,000 and are uncertain whether they should turn it over to the city of Los Angeles in payment for the use of the latter city's outfall sewer at the present time or hold it and draw the interest accruing. Under the provisions of the contract with the mother city Burbank is to issue bonds in this amount, sell the bonds, and obtain a right of way through the city for the Los Angeles trunk sewer through the city, after which the money is to be paid to Los Angeles, to be used in the construction of the line. The check is ready and indorsed, but the right of way has not yet been secured, so City Manager Gidley was delegated to confer with Los Angeles city officials and get their interpretation of the contract as to the time the money is to be paid over.

Monterey Park Lights Held Up

MONTEREY PARK, Jan. 2.—Although property owners on Garfield avenue, one of the main thoroughfares of the city, approved the action of the City Council in an improvement project calling for new sidewalks, curbs, paving and gutters, an objection was raised against the installation of new ornamental lights between Hellman and Newmark avenues.

The Councilmen called a special meeting of interested property owners and urged them to reconsider, pointing out that the portion of Garfield avenue under consideration would be the only part without proper lighting. The result was that Mayor P. F. McCallin and Allen McComb, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, have been appointed a committee to make a house-to-house canvass of the district to determine the wishes of the residents as to the lighting question. The matter will be decided at the Council meeting the 2nd inst.

Drive by Flood Control League

AZUSA, Jan. 2.—An intensive membership campaign will be launched tomorrow by the Flood Control League, recently organized here, with Charles Smith as organization director. Not only Azusa residents, but citizens of other San Gabriel Valley towns, have been invited to join.

The purpose of the new organization is to speed up action on Los Angeles county flood-control projects in general and the long-delayed $35,000,000 county flood-control dam project in San Gabriel Canyon, in particular.

WHITTIER COLLEGE FREED OF ALL DEBT

WHITTIER, Jan. 2.—Whittier College has a sextet of good reasons why she should be happy on New Year's Day. Recently she received gifts amounting to $150,000, which frees her from indebtedness and makes her eligible for the Rockefeller Foundation cash gift. Work is progressing on the new $50,000 dormitory for girls. Among the signal honors recently conferred upon the college was that of recognition by the American Association of Colleges and Universities, which gives an equal rank with the leading colleges of America.

Of the nine major football games scheduled for the season just closed, the Poets won seven, and in the radio contest for broadcasting the best entertainment during an evening Whittier competed with several other colleges of Southern California and for the second season won the cash prize of $700. Dr. Walter F. Dexter is president of the college.

BELL NOW HAS FULL COUNCILMANIC BODY

BELL, Jan. 2.—Having been elected last week as the fifth member of the City Council, Roscoe Bowers will become an "official in fact" Tuesday night, when the Council meets and canvasses the vote of the special election, after which Mr. Bowers will take his official seat. Perhaps Bell is the only city having an election incident of the kind in the State when two candidates, making the race for City Council, tied for fifth place. This was the case in the incorporation election held in September. Four Councilmen were elected, but Mr. Bowers and George Corby tied for fifth place, each receiving 461 votes. A special election was called, resulting in Bowers defeating Corby. The City Council, since its organization, has been functioning with only four members.

GLENDALE REALTORS INSTALL NEXT WEEK

GLENDALE, Jan. 2.—The installation of R. N. Stryker, president-elect of the Glendale Realty Board, will be held on the night of the 12th inst., in the board's building on South Kenwood street, when the leaders of the realty profession from all over Southern California are expected to be present. Hal G. Hotchkiss, president-elect of the California Real Estate Association, has accepted the invitation of the Glendale board to attend the inaugural of Mr. Stryker, and the Glendale board will also send a strong delegation to San Diego on the 7th inst. to participate in the ceremonies that will be held when Mr. Hotchkiss takes office in the State association.

TRIAL DATE SET IN DAMAGE SUIT

Visalian Files Action for Pay for Injuries

Railway Company Defendant in Accident Case

Final Rites Conducted for Pioneer of Dinuba

VISALIA, Jan. 2.—March 6 was set by Superior Judge J. A. Allen of Tulare county as date for the trial of the $25,277 damage action of Ar-Shak Ashjian against the Mack International Truck Company.

The original complaint was filed by Ashjian on July 15, 1927, in which he contends that he was a guest of an agent of the Mack International Truck Company, as a passenger and had been invited to accompany the agent in an automobile. It is charged that due to the negligence of the operator, the machine collided with another machine, and the plaintiff sustained permanent injuries.

COMPLAINT AMENDED

DINUBA, Jan. 2. — An amended complaint filed in the Tulare County Superior Court has been made by J. H. Coward of Dinuba against the Southern Pacific Railway Company, in the damage case filed several months ago. Coward seeks $5096 for alleged permanent injuries sustained while working at unloading a car on the siding, when "through carelessness and negligence of the defendant company" another car was backed onto the siding, he being thrown to the ground.

PIONEER LAID TO REST

DINUBA, Jan. 2.—R. M. Lewis, 65 years of age, prominent resident of this community and a pioneer of this district, who died at his home north of Dinuba of heart trouble on Thursday morning, was laid to rest in Reedley Cemetery. Funeral services were conducted from the Christian church in Dinuba, Rev. Richard Brown officiating. Graveside services were in charge of the Dinuba lodge of Masons. Mr. Lewis had been in failing health for some months.

A native of California, the deceased was the son of pioneer residents of the Santa Rosa section. In 1881 he came to what is known as the Wilson country, south of Dinuba. In 1882 he was married to Miss Melissa Thomas. They established a home north of Dinuba in 1907, where they have since resided.

Mr. Lewis was a member of the Dinuba Masonic Lodge No. 385, and of the Golden Acorn Camp, Woodmen of the World, of Dinuba. He was also an active member of the Christian church. He is survived by his widow and five sons and three daughters.

AUTOIST LOSES LICENSE

VISALIA, Jan. 2.—His plea for probation was granted, but his license to drive a motor vehicle for a year was revoked, when E. Howard, charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, appeared before Judge J. A. Allen in the Tulare County Superior Court. Howard was sentenced to a two-year prison term, bus this sentence was suspended and he was granted probation.

WOMEN GIVE PLAY

VISALIA, Jan. 2.—An entertainment with a public program was given by the Woman's Benefit Association of Visalia in the Woodman Hall. "One Hundred," a play, and a number of short skits, songs and piano solos were given. Mrs. R. H. Alexander, chairman, was assisted in preparing for the event by Mmes. Helwig, Collins, McGarian and Hatch.

Following the program, guests and members enjoyed an evening of card playing.

CLASS PRESENTS COMEDY

STRATHMORE, Jan. 2.—"One on Bill," three-act comedy, will be presented by the junior class of the Strathmore Union High School early in January. The cast members now rehearsing under direction of Mrs. McLeod include Paul Peters, Carol Aschbacker, Leland Johnson, Vernon Sanderson, Stanley Peterson, Doris McHenry, Iola Britton, Mildred Cardwell, Dorothy Page and Dorothy Spuhler.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

DINUBA, Jan. 2.—In an impressive ceremonial, the following officers were recently installed by the Eastern Star Lodge of Dinuba: Worthy Matron, Viola Kirkpatrick; Worthy Patron, George Wiley; Associate Matron, Ida Barrett; Secretary, Pearl Snell; Treasurer, Lillian Tripp; Conductress, Myrtle Johnson; Associate Conductress, Anna Wiley; Chaplain, Matilda Martin; Marshal, Alice Switzer; Organist, Ruth Morton; Warden, Pearl Graham; Sentinel, Herbert Barrett; Ada, Dorris Guffey; Ruth, Naomi Robinson; Esther, Zada Spaith; Martha, Violet Martin; Electra, Charlotte Gurnee; Flag Bearer, Georgia Lighty.

Manuel Quezon to Remain Here Rest of Winter

MONROVIA, Jan. 2. (AP)—Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, under care of physicians at a sanatorium near here, will remain in Southern California throughout the winter.

Quezon's secretary, in making that announcement, said the political leader's ailment was a throat infection caused by too much public speaking and that it was expected to yield with rest. He added that there had been no consultation of physicians, as reports had it, and that Quezon had not developed any serious pulmonary trouble.

Quezon first planned to sail for the Philippines the 6th inst. from San Francisco.

DEPOT ABANDONMENT PLAN IS PROTESTED

BUENA PARK, Jan. 2.—Shippers of produce in Buena Park assert they will suffer material loss if the freight depot of the Southern Pacific Railroad here is closed, according to petitions being circulated here for presentation to company officials in an effort to bring about a reconsideration of the company's announced plan to close the depot.

The company would prefer to handle the freight originating at Buena Park through the depots at Fullerton or Anaheim, it was stated.

NORTHERN OR EASTERN
ACCEPTED SAME AS CASH

Up to one-half payment for some of the best real estate in Southern Calif. and the balance may be paid on easy terms.

We are selling big home sites in a New town, near Long Beach. It is the most active fast growing and rapidly building community in this locality. It is not a cross-roads shack town, but a substantial solid growing town with safe building and race restrictions. Ideal in location and climate. All city conveniences and then all the freedom of country life. Big Poultry colony nearby & their co-operation and supervision to poultry raisers if desired.

We employ no hurrah or high pressure sales methods. It is selling itself on merit because it is filling a real demand. No wild inflated prices so often found in new towns are asked. You will find upon investigation real values and an unequaled opportunity to obtain property for either a home or profitable investment.

We prefer this special offer be accepted by as great a number of people as possible—therefore, will favor deals involving one homesite or at any rate, that only a few homesites go to any one person. We also encourage building and will accept your property as part payment on a completed home if you desire.

Write us today describing fully your property and pricing it. We will then mail full details and give you prompt attention. There is no catch in this ad. It is a clean cut, fair proposition that will stand the closest investigation and is indeed an unusual opportunity to buy choice real estate and pay a big part of the price with other real estate instead of cash. Write or see Mr. Bryce or Mr. Raymer, office with

AND A GOOD REASON FOR IT.
My 160-acre mountain ranch home, very productive, but very accessible, in L.A. Co., about 75 miles from Hollywood over best of roads. Good buildings, 4 rooms, large covered house, all big rooms, three fireplaces, immense cellar, 4-car garage, plenty of water and power. About 40 acres in almonds, an easy 5-ton crop. Ideal climate, wonderful environment for saturday-ites, about 4000 feet altitude and no fogs; moderate snows in winter with temperature seldom below freezing. This place will support itself and family, making a real country home for some one who can afford to own it, together with his city residence or a profitable permanent home for some one who can operate it. Trip at ranching; will exchange for income property, preferably building lots, to $15,000 value. Address owner, Box 1, Times Branch, Calif. or phone Midland 3178.

640 ACRES CLEAR
